After the outbreak of the debt crisis in 1982, many U.S. banks withdrew from trade financing for developing countries. Many now emphasize fee-generating business instead of traditional loans.

Through bundling, Eximbank said, export financing can be structured as a fee-generating business, in which bank profits come from a service instead of an interest rate spread on traditional trade loans.

Bundling helps U.S. exporters by making possible exports that otherwise would not take place because of lack of affordable financing, Eximbank said. Also, since the economies of scale involved in bundling lower the cost of financing, bundling makes U.S. exports more competitive.

Under the arrangement approved Wednesday, a 15 percent portion of the exports must be paid for in cash, Eximbank said.

SRINAGAR, INDIA (MARCH 15) UPI - Separatist militants in the troubled Kashmir Valley detonated a powerful bomb Thursday that injured the brother and nephew of Indian Home Minister Mufti Mohammad Sayeed, police said.

In related unrest, clashes between militants and security forces left one person dead and seven others injured in Srinagar, the capital of Jammu and Kashmir state, 400 miles north of New Delhi.

Police said militants opened fire on a Central Reserve Police Force patrol in the Lal Bazar area of Srinagar about 9 a.m. No member of the patrol was injured, but when the patrol returned fire a woman bystander was killed and five other people were injured.

In the Soura area of town, militants shot at a CRPF patrol, injuring one patrol member, and in the Khanyar area a CRPF member was injured when a militant threw a hand grenade at a police patrol.

Meanwhile, in the town of Bijbihada, 28 miles south of Srinagar, police said a blast ripped through the home of Mufti Ghulam Rasool, brother of the Indian home minister, shortly after 5 a.m.

Police said Rasool and his young son sustained injuries in the blast and were treated at a local hospital.

The explosion, which caused extensive damage to the house, was probably caused by a time bomb, police said.

In Srinagar, the pilot car of Jammu and Kashmir state Gov. Jagmohan was set ablaze by an angry group of about 30 people. Jagmohan was out of town when the incident occurred.

Police said a group pulled the driver from the car before dousing the vehicle with kerosene and setting it ablaze. The driver was not injured during the encounter, police said.

A secession drive by Moslem militants has been under way for the last two years, but the movement erupted into a full-scale insurrection when security forces opened fire on demonstrators in mid-January.

Since then more than 160 people have died, mostly demonstrators shot by security forces.

Authorities tried to smother the uprising by deploying tens of thousands of security and paramilitary forces and by imposing curfews. But militants have managed to keep unrest alive by sniping at security forces, bombing banks and government buildings and assassinating suspected government informants.

The separatist movement is supported by most of the region's predominantly 3 million Moslems who believe their interests have been consistently ignored by the Hindu-dominated New Delhi government.

Their main grievance, however, is that India never fulfilled a 1949 promise to hold a plebiscite so Kashmiris could decide if they want to remain a part of India or join neighboring Islamic Pakistan.

A number of militant organizations - like the powerful Jammu and Kashmir Liberation Front - want nothing less than independence. Both New Delhi and Islamabad claim sovereignty over Kashmir, with India controling two-thirds of the region.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 15) UPI - President Bush declared Thursday that while the United States remains a pre-eminent economic power, it must take steps now to protect its competitive edge against ''dramatic new challenges in the world market.''

In a speech to members of the National Association of Manufacturers, Bush took on the doubters and naysayers in declaring that America ''continues to lead the way'' in the pursuit of free markets and economic productivity.

But at a time when American business has been faulted for a preoccupation with quick profits, Bush called for a return to ''the long-term thinking and investment-in-the-future thinking that produced the healthy climate we enjoy today.''

''This isn't a sprint, it's a marathon'' he said. ''We can't produce the products needed to capture world markets by focusing on results one quarter at a time.''

Without directly joining in recent attacks on the contemporary thinking of corporate America, Bush touched on what has become a recurrent theme in the debate over how well the United States is poised to respond to political, economic and technological changes transforming the global economy.

Bush's budget director, Richard Darman, has been in the forefront of that criticism in the last several years, arguing that greed and short-sightedness leave American business ill prepared for the future.

In talks on the underlying causes of the almost $50 billion U.S. trade deficit with Japan, Japanese officials have said those and other factors, including insufficient worker training and low investment in research and development, hamper America's ability to compete.

But with continued economic growth helping to keep his popularity at a record high, Bush sought to accentuate the positive rather than dwell on what others, here and abroad, have identified as threats to longer-term prosperity.

Overall, he said, the economy ''is not perfect'' but remains ''the largest strongest, most productive economy on Earth,'' boasting a standard of living one-third higher than West Germany or Japan and accounting for more than 25 percent of the world's production.

''When a small percentage of people produce a huge percentage of wealth, there's a word for it,'' Bush said. ''It's called productivity. And it's spelled 'U-S-A.'''

Bush touted increases in exports, gross national product and personal income and reductions in trade and budget deficits, interest rates and unemployment, while admitting the deficit figures - a focus of foreign criticism - remain too high.

''Our people and our economy are strong. And so is our resolve,'' he said. ''And it's going to be tested soon, as the dramatic new changes in the world produce dramatic new challenges in the world market. So we must prepare now to meet these challenges.''

Among those challenges, he said, are foreign tax laws that encourage investment. He urged the business group to support his call for a cut in the tax on capital gains, the profits from certain investments, to match the preferential tax treatment enjoyed by investors in such countries as Japan, South Korea and West Germany.

Calling also for ''a booster shot of new ideas'' to supplement an infusion of business- and job-producing capital, Bush sought support for his proposals to increase research and development, sharpen the educational skills of the American workforce and reduce the ''self-imposed burdens'' that drug use, product liability, restrictive antitrust laws and cumbersome environmental laws impose on U.S. industry.

On the global front, Bush cited his recent trade talks with Japanese Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu and former Japanese Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita as proof that ''we are pressing hard'' to open the lucrative Japanese market to American goods and services.

''We have got to have them understand the seriousness of the problem we face,'' Bush said of the escalated tensions between the two economic superpowers. ''We must move aggressively to open markets, not just in Japan but around the world and expand our share of global trade,'' he added.

In Tokyo, Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher met Thursday with Kaifu on the issue of trade tensions and said afterward that the Japanese ''now know the president and his Cabinet and the Congress and the American people consider this a high-profile, high-on-the-agenda problem.''

NEW YORK (MARCH 15) UPI - The New York Mercantile Exchange Thursday said its board of directors has changed the exchange's gasoline pollution standards after the market was thrown into disarray by demands from two states for tighter controls.

"This decision was made after consideration of our obligation to maintain an orderly market," said Merc board chairman Lou Guttman in an exchange statement. The Merc is the world's largest oil-trading exchange.

The Merc said that from May 1 to Sept. 15 driving season it would no longer use the standards set by Colonial Pipeline Co., whose pipeline carries gasoline from Gulf Coast refineries to the Northeast.

The statement said the decision was made late Wednesday night after a day of trading confusion created by a Colonial's announcement that it was tightening its transcontinental pipeline Reid Vapor Pressures testing rules.

Atlanta-based Colonial said that effective March 29 it would require lower vapor pressure - 8.5 pounds per square inch - to satisfy Northeast anti-pollution standards as a result of actions taken by Maryland and Delaware.

May delivery gasoline shot up 1.46 cents a gallon on the Merc Wednesday with traders confused and worried whether sufficient quantities of the lower RVP gasoline could be obtained to satisfy market demands.

Colonial has only been demanding nine psi gasoline for pipeline shipment to satisfy the rigid anti-pollution standards of seven northeastern states effective May 1 to limit evaporation of gasoline at the station pump. The national standard is 13.5 psi.

The seven also allow a certain "test tolerance" that permits test samples to vary above 9 psi by a few decimals. Maryland and Delaware said they planned to join the seven in requiring the cleaner gasoline May 1, but have said there will be "no allowance for test tolerance," said Colonial spokesman Noel Griese.

As a consequence, Griese said the Atlanta-based Colonial has had to build in its own tolerance by requiring that gasoline be shipped only with the lower 8.5 psi vapor pressure.

Guttman said the Merc board "last night agreed to change its unleaded gasoline futures contract to reflect New York and New Jersey state standards regarding Reid Vapor Pressure between May 1 and September 15." He said, "Those states have said that no enforcement action would be taken for gasoline that tested at 9.3 psi or below."

ATHENS, GA (MARCH 15) UPI - News coverage of Hurricane Hugo and the devastating San Francisco earthquake earned top honors Thursday in the 50th annual Peabody Awards, which often are called the Pulitzer Prize of broadcast journalism.

The University of Georgia, which governs the George Foster Peabody Awards program, bestowed 27 awards, citing news broadcasts in South Carolina and California for providing ''an information lifeline'' to disaster-stricken audiences.

KCBS-AM radio and KGO-TV in San Francisco captured Peabody awards for coverage of the 1989 earthquake, while WCSC-TV in Charleston, S.C., won a Peabody for its reporting on Hurricane Hugo.

Other recipients included CBS Radio News in New York and Cable News Network in Atlanta for coverage of last spring's student uprising in China.

Broadcasting pioneer J. Leonard Reinsch and veteran newscaster David Brinkley of ABC-TV were honored for distinguished careers in broadcasting.

Awards for television dramas went to the CBS movie ''Lonesome Dove''; ABC Television's ''The Wonder Years,'' ''China Beach'' and ''Small Sacrifices''; and the Children's Television Workshop's ''Sesame Street.''

The awards will be presented in Atlanta at the Peabody Awards Golden Anniversary dinner April 3 on the closing night of the National Association of Broadcasters' annual convention.

The winners were chosen from 812 entries submitted by radio and television stations and networks in the United States and other countries.

Three foreign entries - from the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation in Toronto, the Central Independent Television in London and Beyond International Group in Sydney, Australia - were among the winners.

Winners were chosen by a 15-member national advisory board that included broadcast magazine executives, television critics, educators, communications executives and lawyers.

The Peabody Awards have recognized the nation's outstanding television and radio shows since the awards were first presented in 1940. The award is named for George Foster Peabody, a Columbus, Ga., native who was a successful New York banker and philanthropist.

PORT-AU-PRINCE, HAITI (MARCH 15) UPI - President Ertha Pascal-Trouillot began trying to form a Cabinet for her interim government Thursday, and life in the capital was slowly returning to normal after a week of protest that led to the fall of Haitian dictator Prosper Avril.

Two people were killed in sporadic violence in the capital overnight, Radio Haiti Inter reported. Armed civilians shot and killed Police Sgt. Joseph Lajoie as he was patrolling the Carrefour neighborhood of Port-au-Prince.

Soldiers at the Lamentin Barracks near the area began firing into the air at 5 a.m. Thursday and killed a civilian, Radio Haiti Inter reported. Tension has been rising between the army and residents of the neighborhood because the soldiers at the barracks reportedly oppose the new civilian government.

The latest violence came as the newly inaugurated interim president began trying to put together a Cabinet for her civilian government. She held talks with a variety of groups representing various sectors of Haitian society.

Life in Port-au-Prince began to return to normal, with most businesses and industry resuming operation Thursday. Schools remained closed despite a communique from the opposition political parties urging students ''to go back to school as soon as possible.''

On Wednesday, Pascal-Trouillot moved swiftly to end the first crisis of her day-old government - a strike that virtually closed the capital's international airport.

The strike was triggered by the continued presence of Avril supporters in the administration despite the dictator's departure into exile in Florida Monday.

''With the change in the government we expect better,'' said air traffic controller Jerry Gracia, 33. ''The workers decided not to continue to work because of the political acquaintenances and bad management of Eddy Celestin.'' Celestin is director of the National Office of Civil Aviation.

''(Celestin) is a Macoute who favors his friends and relatives at key posts,'' Gracia said. The Tontons Macoutes were the secret police founded by the Duvalier family dictatorship that used terror to rule Haiti for nearly 30 years.

The controllers' strike began at 11 a.m., and Trouillot, sworn in Tuesday as Haiti's first female president, sent human rights activist Louis Roy to negotiate the dispute.

Roy, a member of the new State Council formed to rule the Caribbean nation of 6 million along with Trouillot, arranged for ''Celestin and his clan to leave the airport building at noon,'' Gracia said.

The controllers returned to work and declared the airport open, but all international airlines had already canceled most of the day's flights in and out of the capital. Many passengers rescheduled departures for Thursday.

In the village of Pyatre, Avril's resignation also apparently sparked a dispute between peasants and landowners over fields of bananas and vegetables wedged in a green valley surrounded by brown, deforested mountains.

Two police officers went to the village Monday, called together 200 peasants, and told them to turn over their land to wealthy businessman Oliver Nadal.

''The police told them not to talk back and not to make trouble, that the land belonged to the police,'' said a witness, Robert Joseph, 18. ''One man took a machette and cut the policeman's head off in one stroke. The other policeman shot and killed one peasant, but then he too had his head cut off.''

Within an hour, two jeeps brought about 30 soldiers from nearby St. Marc, and when the villagers stoned them, they shot into the crowd, Joseph said.

Later, a group of people related to the slain policemen arrived and killed three peasants and burned all 500 houses in the village, Joseph said. The other residents fled, he said.

Nadal told Haitian radio stations he had nothing to do with the affair and regretted the violence.

The land dispute had already been decided in court in favor of the peasants now working the land, Catholic Radio Soleil reported, but often in Haiti decisions of the section chief of a region are made arbitrarily.

The nation's 565 section chiefs are appointed by the Interior Ministry and have virtual dictatorial authority over the areas they supervise.

The first policeman beheaded Monday was the area section chief, Joseph said.

DETROIT (MARCH 15) UPI - The city of Detroit is down to its last Pontiac dealership with the closing this week of Palmer Pontiac, the General Motors Corp. division said Thursday.

The dealership, in northwest Detroit, closed its doors Monday due to poor sales and losses in the hundreds of thousands of dollars, Pontiac said. It was the third GM dealership to close this year, and reduced the number of dealers remaining in Detroit to 28, from 51 a decade ago.

GM purchased the dealership, formerly owned by the late Porterfield Wilson from Wilson's widow last year and operated it as a factory-run outlet. However, sales were a dismal 110 vehicles last year, which is about a third of what most dealerships need to survive.

Pontiac said it would try to find new jobs for the 30 employees who worked there, and was hopeful that the Pontiac franchise might be combined with another dealer. Several employees have already been hired at Woody Pontiac in Hamtramck, a separate community located entirely within Detroit's city limits.

"Right now our service department is jammed with cars to be repaired, and most of them are coming from that dealership," said dealership owner Woodrow W. Woody. "We are hiring as many people as we can get hold of," he said. "I already have about three or four of them selling and a couple or three more in service."

Woody, who says his dealership has been profitable for all of its 50 years in business, sells between 400 and 500 cars a year. "I am proud to say we are the only Pontiac dealer in the metro Detroit area," he said.

However, there is still Ray Laethem Pontiac GMC Truck, which straddles the city line between Detroit and Grosse Pointe. "We have a Detroit mailing address," said a salesman for the outlet. "So, I guess that makes us the last Pontiac dealer in Detroit."

Two other Detroit GM dealers, Woodruff Oldsmobile and Jerry Mikowski Buick closed their doors in January.

(MARCH 15) UPI - Officials say an Iranian-born British journalist convicted of spying for Israel was hanged today in Iraq and his body turned over to the British Embassy. In the words of Iraq's information minister, British Prime Minister Thatcher ''wanted him alive. We gave her the body.''

The president of Honduras has a message for the Contra rebels- as he put it- ''the war in Central America is over.'' Rafael Leonardo Callejas is calling on the rebels to lay down their weapons and return to Nicaragua. As many as 12-thousand Contras are camped near the Honduran border with Nicaragua.

The Vatican and the Soviet Union have decided to establish permanent diplomatic contacts just short of full diplomatic relations. The Vatican says the exchange will involve official representatives of ambassador rank at what is described as ''at a personal level.''

Authorities in Pennsylvania say a single-engine airplane crashed into a wooded section of West Philadelphia early today. Both men aboard walked away with minor injuries. Officials say the the plane went down shortly after the pilot radioed traffic controllers that he was running out of gas.

Man's best friend proved to be a saying that works for a woman and her 11 huskies. Susan Butcher hugged her husband and then each of her so-called best friends after winning the Iditarod sled dog race yesterday in Alaska. She described her winning team as ''my best friends and NOT my best dogs.''

DALLAS (MARCH 15) UPI - A 41-year-old woman who waited tables at a topless dance club has sued her former employers, alleging they would not let her dance bare-chested because she was too old.

Ann Marie Lindsey, who earned a living singing radio jingles and selling furniture before being hired as a waitress by Cabaret Royale in January 1989, said the club snubbed her because they preferred ''younger girls.''

Lindsey, whose federal lawsuit demands $50,000 in damages, said Wednesday the Cabaret Royale job ''wasn't everything they said it was going to be.''

She said when she asked Cabaret Royale managers for a promotion from waitress to the higher-paying position of topless dancer, they turned her down.

''They said, 'You are too old,''' Lindsey said.

Club manager Dan Dotson said the club doesn't discriminate on the basis of age.

''We have several dancers who are pushing 40 and some even a little older '' Dotson said.

He said Lindsey, who was promoted to head waitress two weeks after being hired, walked off the job one day and never returned.

''It was not that we didn't want her to dance. We never got the opportunity to see how good she was,'' Dotson said.

Club officals added that while Lindsey was ''an attractive lady,'' she also was a ''troublemaker'' who liked to berate clients and badger other waitresses.

''We didn't want her to dance because she was a problem,'' said club director Diana Tatum. ''She walked off with customers and that doesn't look good. She wasn't really Cabaret material. She's pretty bossy, and she even told some customers off.''

Lindsey's attorney, Michael Mosher, doesn't deny his client got mad and quit. But he maintains Lindsey, who's now dancing topless under the stage name Amy at the Million Dollar Saloon, quit because of discrimination.

ATLANTA (MARCH 15) UPI - Immigration agents detained 53 illegal immigrants aboard an Eastern Airlines flight Thursday, the second consecutive day aliens have been captured while trying to make their way to New York from the West Coast.

The undocumented aliens were the cargo in a massive smuggling ring that has been under investigation since last year, the Immigration and Naturalization Service said. Most of the aliens were going to New York seeking employment and some ''probably used their life savings'' to make the trip, officials said.

The INS's Operation Red Eye Repeat pulled the 53 aliens from Eastern Flight 88 at 7:10 a.m., one day after agents apprehended 45 immigrants on another Eastern flight, said Neil Jacobs, head of the INS Investigations Division in Atlanta.

Both groups of aliens were captured on a flight from Los Angeles to New York that passed through Atlanta.

''The flight generally has approximately a dozen to 15 people bound to New York,'' Jacobs said. ''These (two) flights have 65 to 100 and they generally have Spanish names.''

The second group of illegal aliens were Mexicans and Nicaraguans, except for three Romanians, he said.

The Romanians - Adrian Degreatu, his wife, Mihaela Degreatu, and her brother, Valentin Goran - fled their shaken country through Cuba and Mexico to get to California, Jacobs said.

''They definitely wanted to leave real bad,'' said Gerald W. Nolan, a special agent with the Justice Department. ''They already had jobs lined up in New York. They sold everything they had to get the money.''

Nolan said the Romanians, who paid $4,000 each in their attempt to immigrate, might be given political asylum in the United States or another country.

The Mexicans will be shipped to Brownsville, Texas, and given a deportation hearing before being returned across the border. The Nicaraguans will go to the Krome Detention Center in Miami, where they can claim refugee status and have a hearing before facing deportation, said Thomas Fischer, district director of the Atlanta INS office.

Jacobs said the captures yielded ''a few leads'' that might help authorities identify the operators of the smuggling ring.

A check of airline passenger lists showed as many as 90 illegal aliens may have passed through Atlanta on the way to New York Tuesday, officials said. None was captured.

Agents said each of the illegal aliens probably paid about $3,000 to smugglers for housing, transportation and fake immigration papers, Social Security cards and drivers licenses.

''These people probably used their life savings to make this trip,'' Fischer said. ''The smugglers are the real culprits. Basically they're just peddling flesh.''

On Feb. 28, 1989, agents removed 79 illegal aliens from an Eastern flight in Atlanta and deported them.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 15) UPI - Mikhail Gorbachev was elected first president of the Soviet Union unopposed with 71 percent of the vote, but his victory did not come close to the total landslide recorded by the first U.S. president.

In the balloting Wednesday by the Congress of People's Deputies, 1,329 lawmakers voted for Gorbachev and 495 voted against him.

The 495 lawmakers crossed out the ''for'' box on the ballot and left the ''against'' box unmarked. Another 122 of 2,000 deputies who received ballots did not return them.

In the United States 201 years ago, 69 electors from 10 states each had two votes to cast for two individuals. George Washington, unoppposed, got all 69 ''first'' votes to win the presidency and John Adams got 34 of the 69 ''second'' votes to win the vice presidency.

Gorbachev was elected by the Soviet Legislature, which was chosen by the citizenry recently. The Soviet president will be chosen by popular vote in 1995.

In this country's first presidential election, only Pennsylvania, Maryland Virginia and Delaware had popular elections to choose electors. In Connecticut, Georgia, New Jersey, South Carolina and Massachusetts, either the legislature or a combination of the legislature and the voters made the selection. It was not until 1832 that all states chose electors by popular vote.

New York did not take part in the 1789 election because its Senate and the Assembly could not agree how to select electors, and North Carolina and Rhode Island were left out because they had not yet ratified the Constitution.

(MARCH 15) UPI - Video Reviews:

MOVIES

"HONEY, I SHRUNK THE KIDS" - An entertaining family adventure in the old

Disney style. Instead of flubber we have a shrink machine which eccentric inventor Rick Moranis is trying in vain to make work. Then, an accident triggers the gizmo and it zaps his two children (Amy O'Neil and Robert Oliveri) and the neighbor's kids (Thomas Brown and Jared Rushton) to about the size of a pencil lead.

Thrown out with the trash, they must make it back to the house across a back yard that now is a dense jungle filled with all kinds of hazards, including a fierce scorpion, an ant that becomes their protector and a swooping bee, to say nothing of a menacing lawn mower. Something for the kids that won't bore the grownups. (Also on the bill is a high-spirited Roger Rabbit-Baby Herman cartoon short, "Tummy Trouble.") 1989. 101 minutes. Walt Disney Home Video. Rated PG. $22.99.

"AN INNOCENT MAN" - Two corrupt cops break into the wrong house on a drug raid and shoot an unarmed man, covering their mistake by planting cocaine and a gun on him and helping, through perjured testimony, to send him to prison.

That's the plight of Jimmie Rainwood (played effectively by Tom Selleck), an ordinary guy suddenly thrust into extraordinary circumstances, forced to deal with two intolerable situations - one behind bars, the other on the outside. Mission accomplished on both counts.

Laila Robins plays Jimmie's wife who helps him get out and F. Murray Abraham is his prison mentor who helps him get even. A gripping action adventure. 1989. 113 minutes. Touchstone Home Video. Rated R. $89.95.

"CASUALTIES OF WAR" - In Brian DePalma's unsettling version of the Vietnam nightmare, based on a true story, a combat-exhausted Army patrol gets caught up in the moral quicksand of an exasperating war and an all-too-often invisible enemy, sinking to kidnapping, rape, and murder.

Only one soldier stands up against the outrage, but is forever scarred because he could not prevent it. Michael J. Fox is boyish Pfc. Ericcson who tries to stop an insane act and, unable to do so, turns on his buddies, especially the instigator, his sergeant (Sean Penn), a tough guy robbed of his reason by the brutality of war.

The film builds in harrowing detail as the crime ("A little portable R & R") is planned and carried out, then slows considerably. In this context, the war is almost incidental. 1989. 120 minutes. RCA/Columbia Pictures Home Video. Rated R. $89.95.

"PICNIC" - A drifter (William Holden) sets a small Kansas town on its ear when he wanders in over Labor Day weekend and quickly captures the heart of the local lovely (Kim Novak) in this exceptional '50s hit finally finding its way to home video.

Rosalind Russell and Arthur O'Connell nearly steal the show in supporting roles. Also in the cast are Cliff Robertson and Susan Strasburg, making their film debuts. A simple yet poignant story, a "Moonglow" of a movie. 1956. 113 minutes. RCA/Columbia Pictures Home Video. $19.95.

"CATCH ME IF YOU CAN" - In an effort to raise funds to keep their school open, the senior class president (Loryn Locklin) and a drag racer (Matt Latanzi) bet school money on a series of races. All goes well, then all goes bad, setting up the final, predictable "big race." 1989. 105 minutes. MCEG/Virgin. Rated PG. $89.95.

VIDBITS

"Lethal Weapon 2" remains the nation's favorite home video movie, according to the weekly Billboard Magazine survey, tops in both rentals and sales. "Parenthood" has whisked past "Indiana Jones And The Last Crusade" for the runnerup spot among rentals this week. Indy is still No. 2 in sales.

"The Little Mermaid" is making an early move to home video - May 18, to be exact, geared to sell at $26.99. The new Disney animated hit has raked in more than $76 million at the boxoffice since its theatrical debut last November.

Usually, Disney animated films are held back for additional theatrical runs, then one is pulled from the vault for video release for the Christmas holidays. We're still waiting for "Snow White And The Seven Dwarfs".

And, who could forget "Harvey," that six-foot-plus invisible rabbit that followed James Stewart around in the terrific 1950 comedy? Harvey hops onto the video trail May 10, from MCA.

(MARCH 15) UPI - The Libyan news agency is blaming the United States and Israel for a blaze that gutted most of a suspected chemical weapons plant south of Tripoli. Arab diplomatic sources in Algeria told U-P-I that the fire was set by a commando team that traveled to Libya from neighboring Tunisia. The sources say the raiders were disguised as tourists. Washington denies any involvement.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater says the United States has independently confirmed that there was a fire at the plant. Fitzwater declined to say how the United States had confirmed the fire and repeated what he said earlier, that ''We have NO involvement.''

Iraq today executed an Iranian-born British journalist for espionage... hinting that the eight-year Persian Gulf war has made Baghdad suspicious of everyone. Britain asked Iraq to spare his life. Iraq's Information minister told reporters ''Britain should realize that the psychology of the Iraqi leadership after eight years of war does NOT collapse.''

Mikhail Gorbachev today began a five-year term as president of the Soviet Union with broad new powers. In an address to the Congress of People's Deputies... Gorbachev vowed to use his powers to remove bureaucratic obstacles to his reform drive and NOT to usurp power. Although Gorbachev ran unopposed... more than a quarter of the delegates voted against him in the secret ballot.

The Vatican says the Holy See and the Soviet Union have decided to establish permanent diplomatic contacts just short of full diplomatic relations. The Vatican says Pope John Paul and Gorbachev will exchange personal envoys of ambassador rank. The Vatican was quick to point out the exchange of envoys does NOT mean full diplomatic relations.

-National Public Radio, Washington, D.C., for Scott Simon's Radio Essays, presented on ''Weekend Edition Saturday,'' described as ''insightful, thought-provoking and evocative commentary on contemporary life.''

-Canadian Broadcasting Corporation in Toronto, Ontario, for ''Lost Innocence: The Children of World War II,'' termed by judges ''a stirring recollection of the horrow of war as seen through the eyes of youth.''

-D. Roberts, independent: producer, American Public Radio's ''Soundprint'' series, for ''Mei Mei: A Daughter's Song,'' which judges called ''a poignant examination of the cultural gap between a daughter and her foreign-born mother.''

-Texaco Inc. and the Metropolitan Opera Association Inc., honoring a half-century of serious Saturday afternoon radio broadcasts, the longest continuing sponsorship of a national program in broadcasting history.

-WCSC-TV, Charleston, S.C., for providing a ''lifeline for viewers deprived of water, communications and other essential services'' after Hurricane Hugo.

-KGO-TV, San Francisco, Calif., for public service after the 1989 earthquake, ''functioning as an information clearinghouse'' for viewers.

-KING-TV, Seattle, Wash., for ''Project Home Team,'' which judges called ''an examination of the wrenching problems of the working poor and how their lot can be improved.''

-KRON-TV, San Francisco, Calif., for ''I Want to Go Home,'' described by judges as ''a gripping and tragic account of the plight of homeless children in San Francisco.''

-Cable News Network in Atlanta for coverage of the China crisis, ''a series of thorough, dramatic, courageous and internationally important reports.''

-Central Independent Television, London, for ''Cambodia Year Ten,'' called by the judges ''a passionate and strident examination of the plight of the Asian nation from the barbarous Pol Pot regime to its tenuous present and uncertain future.''

-Music Television (MTV), New York, for ''Decade,'' a look at the 1980s as seen through the eyes of music performers and newsmakers.

-CBS Television and Motown-Pangaea Productions, in association with Quintex Entertainment, for the made-for-TV movie ''Lonesome Dove,'' described by the judges as ''a compelling drama of the old West which proved that the Western is not dead.''

-ABC Television and Black/Marlens Co., in association with New World Television, for ''The Wonder Years,'' called by the judges ''an innovative humorous and often touching series about adolescence and family life in the tumultuous 1960s.''

-ABC Television and Sacret Inc., in association with Warner Bros. Television, for ''China Beach: Vets,'' an episode which recounts the experience of American nurses ''in compelling, chilling and emotional terms.''

-ABC Television, Lou Rudolph Films, Motown Productions, and Allarcom and Fries Entertainment, for ''Small Sacrifices,'' which judges said is a ''classic example of how exceptional acting, coupled with a great script, can provide television that is powerful and emotionally charged.''

-Beyond International Group, Sydney, Australia, for ''The Great Wall of Iron,'' a behind-the-scenes examination of the Chinese People's Liberation Army, ''completed only weeks before the infamous events in Tianamen Square.''

-HBO, New York, for ''Common Threads: Stories from the Quilt,'' which judges said is ''a stirring elegy to the victims of AIDS which celebrates their lives, without exploiting their horrible and untimely deaths.

-KCNC-TV, Denver, Colo., for ''Yellowstone: Four Seasons After Fire,'' an in-depth look at the park after the fire of 1988 and an examination of its recovery.

-Public Affairs Television, New York, for ''The Public Mind,'' Bill Moyers' critical look at public opinion formation and change in America and how the media affect basic social institutions.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 15) UPI - White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Thursday the United States has independently confirmed that a fire caused extensive damage at a Libyan plant suspected of making chemical weapons.

Again denying the United States had ''any involvement of any kind'' in the episode, Fitzwater said officials understood the building was still standing but the plant was likely inoperable. He emphasized that U.S. information on the incident was scarce.

When asked how bad the damage to the plant was, Fitzwater said, ''extensive'' and added that ''we assume it's not functioning.''

His comments follow a report Thursday by the Libyan news agency, JANA, which said a fire destroyed most of the plant near Rabta, described by the Libyan government as a pharmaceutical facility.

Fitzwater said the United States has ''indications there was a fire'' at the chemical plant, but he added, ''We have no additional information.''

He declined to say how the United States had confirmed the fire and repeated that the United States did not have ''any involvement of any kind. ... We have queried all the relevant United States agencies and they all indicate no involvement.''

President Bush, asked by reporters a second time if the United States was involved, said, ''No, I already said that.''

Fitzwater, when reminded that the United States had called attention to the plant only a week ago and accused the Libyans of developing chemical weapons, said, ''We were voicing our concern.''

But asked if the United States was pleased by the development, he added, ''We aren't going to express an opinion.''

He acknowledged, however, that the United States has discussed the plant in the past week with ''our allies,'' but added when asked specifically if the Israelis had had any role, "We don't have any comment on any other countries."

The United States, which suspects the facility of producing mustard and nerve gasses, has urged the international community to make ''vigorous efforts to stop the operation.'' But Fitzwater denied Wednesday that the United States had anything to do with the fire. ''The United States has no involvement,'' Fitzwater said.

President Bush echoed that sentiment, telling reporters ''absolutely not'' when asked if the United States was involved.

In Algiers, Algeria, JANA said Thursday that most of the Rabta chemical plant was destroyed by fire and blamed the United States and Israel for the blaze.

Arab diplomatic sources in Algiers told United Press International the fire was set by a commando team that traveled to Libya from neighboring Tunisia. The raiders were disguised as tourists, said the sources. Tunisia has made no comment on the incident.

''Libyans accuse the Israelis and the United States,'' said the agency in a brief statement.

But in Paris, the Israeli ambassador to France, Ovadia Sofer, said in an interview with French television Thursday his country ''did not set fire to that factory.''

''It was the Americans who warned the world one week ago of the danger of that factory,'' he added. ''The plant produced chemical weapons and was a danger to the entire world.''

On Wednesday, Fitzwater said the United States had received reports from foreign governments that a fire of unknown origin and severity struck the plant in Libya, located about 40 miles south of the Libyan capital of Tripoli.

Diplomatic sources said Libya had closed its borders, indicating authorities did not want people entering or leaving the country, Fitzwater said Wednesday.

In Cairo, Foreign Ministry sources confirmed that Libya sealed its border with Egypt, but they did not know why.

In New York, Mahmoud Azzabi, U.N. mission spokesman for Libya, said, ''We don't have anything. I have no idea what you are talking about. We tried to get through to Libya but we could not.''

A State Department spokesman said the United States was looking into the reports. Fitzwater said the United States was told by Italy and other unnamed governments that there was ''some kind of fire'' at the plant but refused to speculate on what kind of damage could result from a chemical blaze.

Asked if there was any evidence of sabotage, the spokesman added, ''We have no way of knowing and we won't speculate on the cause.''

JOHANNESBURG, SOUTH AFRICA (MARCH 15) UPI - In the paradoxes of South Africa's apartheid laws, more than 1,100 people changed their race last year, including two whites who became Chinese and 519 people of mixed race who became white.

Minister of Home Affairs Gene Louw told Parliament Wednesday 1,229 South Africans had requested a change in their classification under the country's controversial Population Registration Act. He said 1,123 changes were approved.

The reclassifications included two whites to Chinese, 519 Cape Province ''coloreds'' to white, 15 ''coloreds'' to Chinese, 59 Indians to ''colored'', 55 ''coloreds'' to Indian, 17 Indians to Malay, 33 Malays to Indian, 327 blacks to ''colored,'' one ''colored'' to black, eight blacks to ''other Asian,'' four blacks to Indian and black to Griqua.

Cape Coloreds and Griquas are people of mixed race. The breakdown was 82 short of the total approved race changes for which no explanation was given.

Anti-apartheid activists have demanded the ruling National Party scrap the Population Registration Act, used to determine segregated voters rolls and residential rights. It was formerly used to block racially mixed marriages in conjunction with the Mixed Marriages Act, which was repealed in 1985.

Constitutional Development Minister Gerrit Viljoen told parliament last week, ''The group concept will have to be cleared of the albatross of the bad smell of discrimination of the past.''

WASHINGTON (MARCH 15) UPI - At times choking back tears, Maralee Dinsdale told a House subcommittee Thursday a dramatic tale of medical abandonment as she sought an abortion to terminate her pregnancy with an encephalitic baby.

Because she lived in Missouri and sought her abortion after last July's Supreme Court ruling upholding the state's severe restrictions on abortion she could not get her abortion in the state.

Dinsdale sketched for the committee an intimate portrait of medical and reproductive life, including the moment when a sonogram picture ''became fuzzy'' and ''could not get a clear outline of the head'' of her unborn baby.

But, while doctors in Missouri recommended terminating the pregnancy they could not perform the operation because the hospitals at which they practiced ''refused to have anything to do with the termination of a live fetus because of the Webster decision.''

Dinsdale said she drove to Kansas.

''I was emotionally drained and scared to death, but I felt I had no choice. No hospital would help me. My doctor had more or less abandoned me and I truly felt it would endanger my life more by carrying the baby to term ... in a sense for nothing,'' she said.

Dinsdale, testifying before the House Judiciary Subcommittee on Civil and Constitutional Rights chaired by Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., was the first witness in the first congressional hearings on abortion since the July 1989 Supreme Court ''Webster'' ruling giving states wide latitude to enact restrictions and regulations on abortion.

''I have felt many things in the aftermath of all this,'' she said. ''I have felt cheated and mistreated by the medical society and by my government. I felt I was denied a needed medical procedure.

''I don't believe any individual or family knows exactly what decision they would make until they are in a situation in which they have to make a decision,'' she said. ''That's why I believe there must be room for choice.''

Doctors from Missouri, New York and Texas offerred similar testimony.

''Because it is now politically acceptable to refuse to do abortions as part of complete gynecological care, some doctors are abandoning their patients in need,'' Dr. Amy Cousins of Binghamton, N.Y., told the subcommittee.

Dr. Curtis Boyd of Dallas, Texas, told the subcommittee that the continued harassment and intimidation of abortion providers has hindered the procedure's acceptance into the mainstream of U.S. medicine.

''When the president of the United States says publicly that abortions should be illegal and doctors who perform abortions should go to prison, when the pope and Catholic bishops say that those who perform legal abortions will go to hell, when district attorneys consider bring felony charges and state boards of medical examiners consider revoking a doctor's medical license because the unfortunate doctor has a serious abortion complication, it should not be difficult to understand the reluctance of physicians to provide abortion services.''

But Dr. Anthony Levatino, who told the subcommittee he once performed abortions but has stopped, said his experience ''shows that only a very small minority are performed for maternal health reasons or for rape or incest.

''The vast majority are simply a means of birth control,'' he said.

LONDON (MARCH 15) UPI - Iraq executed a London-based journalist for espionage Thursday despite worldwide protests, prompting Britain to recall its ambassador from Baghdad in retaliation against the government of President Saddam Hussein.

Farzad Bazoft, 31, an Iranian who worked for British newspapers, was hanged by the Iraqi government just five days after he was sentenced to death by a military court. Bazoft had been accused of spying for Israel when he entered an unauthorized military complex north of Baghdad last September.

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher reacted angrily to the execution, telling the House of Commons that the killing was ''an act of barbarism which is deeply repugnant to civilized people.''

British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd expressed ''deep revulsion'' and announced he had instructed the British Ambassador Harold Walker to return home from Iraq. His announcement drew cheers from both sides of the House.

''We made a strenuous and prolonged effort by many means to save Mr. Bazoft's life,'' Hurd said. ''The comments which we have made throughout have been measured and reasonable. By their action, the Iraqi authorities have blackened the name of Iraq across the world.''

He said all planned ministerial visits to Iraq had been suspended and Iraqis training on courses with the British Defense Ministry would be sent home. London would press on with rallying support from European Community members and British allies to pressure Iraq to release other British prisoners, he said.

The measures did not include any move to halt any of the $405 million in British trade credits to Baghdad.

The executed journalist was working for the Observer newspaper in London when he visited the military complex to investigate a report that an explosion at the facility had killed hundreds of people.

A British nurse, Daphne Parish, 52, was convicted of driving Bazoft to the restricted area. She has been shifted to a central jail to begin a 15-year prison sentence handed down by a revolutionary tribunal.

Robin Kealy, the British consul general who witnessed Bazoft's execution inside a Baghdad prison, told the BBC that Bazoft looked ''hollow-eyed and subdued'' as he was led to the gallows.

''He passed on a written message and a number of oral messages to friends and colleagues, which of course we are now passing on, and he repeated that he had been a journalist going after a scoop,'' Kealy said.

British diplomats said Iraqi Information Minister Latif Nassif al Jassim later delivered the body to the British Embassy and said: ''Mrs. Thatcher wanted him alive. We are giving you his body ... Iraq will not be affected by Britain's anger.''

Iraq's ambassador to Great Britain, Azmi Shafeeq al-Salihi, said the minister's comment was ''a sign of refusing, rejecting any political and media pressure on our country, a sign that encouraging journalists to be spies is against all values of democracy.''

Although Bazoft confessed on state-run Iraqi television that he spied for Israel, the accusation was vigorously denied by his newspaper, which said the confession was obtained under duress. British diplomats said Bazoft repudiated the confession during his trial and were skeptical of evidence against him.

Hussein had the power to grant mercy, but confirmed the death sentence despite appeals from European Community nations, the United Nations secretariat, human rights groups and Britain's allies in the Middle East.

Iraqi officials called Britain's efforts ''hasty'' and ''incorrect'' and said the pair had been tried fairly under the nation's laws. In London, barriers were placed around the Iraqi Embassy and more police officers deployed to guard against possible protests.

Neil Kinnock, the leader of the main opposition Labor Party, called the execution ''an act of savagery that shows contempt for justice and world opinion.''

Observer editor Donald Trelford said the Iraqi government was a ''monstrous regime.''

''What kind of regime is it that can fly in the face of whole of the world's opinion and kill a reporter for being a reporter?'' said Trelford. ''He even asked official permission to go to the site. This is not the act of a spy.''

(MARCH 15) UPI - Today's People:

AN ORSON WELLES STORY: Rebecca Welles, the daughter of Rita Hayworth and Orson Welles, plans to auction off an unpublished manuscript of a story Welles wrote for her when she was a child.

Publication rights for the story also are included. The 68-page unbound volume, which Welles wrote for Rebecca as a Christmas gift in 1956 when she was 12, also includes his illustrations and the text is both handwritten and typed. The story is an account of an annual medieval pageant called Bravade in the French Riviera town of St. Tropez, honoring the town's patron saint.

"I believe this is the first time an unpublished manuscript has been sold at a major auction along with its publication rights," said George Lowry, president of Swann Galleries, which will auction the book next Thursday. "It is a singular event and we expect the manuscript to bring as much as $30,000."

WILLIE'S TAXING PROBLEM: Willie Nelson still hasn't paid his 1989 property taxes in Travis County, Texas, but the tax collector isn't too worried. The country singer's $63,000 tax bill was due Jan. 31. "Willie eventually pays it so it's not a problem," said Bob Hart, director of business and finance for the Lake Travis Independent School District.

"If we had several accounts like Willie's, it would be a problem." Nelson is a major landowner in the Austin area with $3.5 million worth of property, including a residence, a recording studio, 102 residential lots and eight condominiums.

Nelson also still has a five-year-old federal tax matter to deal with. The Internal Revenue Service says he owes $2.7 million for personal and business taxes and a court in Washington, D.C., will rule on the case next month.

GLASNOST IN GENERAL: Actress Liv Ullmann and her husband, Boston real estate magnate Donald L. Saunders, are honorary co-chairs for an April 28 gala to help finance an unprecedented Soviet-American collaborative production of "Swan Lake" by the Boston Ballet beginning May 2.

At least three, and possibly five, top Soviet dancers from the Bolshoi and Kirov companies will alternate lead roles in the beloved classical ballet and will be paired with a Boston Ballet dancer. "When the generals are forgotten, when the monuments have crumbled, what is remembered is the art and the artists," Ullmann said.

SANDWICH STARS: Diners will get to participate in a bit of delicatessen democracy to determine which celebrities have sandwiches named for them at New York's Stage Deli. The deli has been naming its sandwiches for stars for more than 50 years now but this will be the first time that the customers will determine who is honored.

Diners also can decide which celebrities they want taken off the menu in the weeklong voting, which starts Monday. The Stage's menu currently has sandwiches named for 28 people such as Bill Cosby, Joe DiMaggio, Pete Rose, Goldie Hawn, Mike Tyson, Frank Sinatra, Melanie Griffith, Joan Rivers, Jodie Foster, Dolly Parton, Oprah Winfrey, and Donald Trump.

GLIMPSES: Katey Sagal, who plays the bawdy housewife on "Married ... With Children," is rediscovering her original career - singing. Her Wednesday night engagement in Los Angeles was the first in a series of shows she will perform in area clubs in the next couple of weeks. Before landing on "Married ... With Children," Sagal sang with Bette Midler, Bob Dylan, Tanya Tucker, Olivia Newton-John and Etta James Arista Records has some of its biggest stars lined up for the Saturday concert to mark the label's 15th anniversary. The show in Radio City Music Hall will feature Whitney Houston, Barry Manilow, Milli Vanilli, Dione Warwick, Patti Smith, Taylor Dayne, Daryl Hall and John Oates, Eurthymics, Kenny G and Jeff Healy. The show is being taped for broadcast on CBS next month and the proceeds will go toward AIDS research.

SINGAPORE (MARCH 15) UPI - Four men died Thursday and another two were injured when an explosion ripped through a Norwegian oil tanker and set the vessel ablaze just outside of Singaporean waters.

A spokesman from the marine police said three of the dead and the two injured were Singaporeans while the fourth person killed, sources said, was believed to be a Polish national.

Marine police said an explosion was heard aboard the 233,949-ton Happy Traveller at 9:30 a.m. local time causing slight tremors that were felt in parts of the island republic and triggering a series of fires on the vessel.

Firefighting tugs from the Port of Singapore Authority rushed to the scene and 62 people were evacuated before the fire was finally brought under control at midday.

One of the injured, Seng Fook Yew, 23, said he and another six men were working in one of the tanks when the explosion occurred. Seng was taken to the general hospital and treated for minor injuries.

A Singapore Port Authority spokesman said the cause of the explosion was under investigation and the names of the dead were withheld until family members had been informed.

The Happy Traveller is the second tanker to explode in Singaporean waters. In 1981 more than 60 people died when the tanker Spyros was engulfed in flames following an explosion aboard.

EAST BERLIN (MARCH 15) UPI - An East German conservative party anxious to contain political fallout three days before a historic election named a Protestant minister Thursday to replace its former party chief, accused of working with the once-dreaded secret police.

The conservative Democratic Awakening Party picked Rainer Eppelmann, an East Berlin clergyman active in the civil rights movement, as its new leader.

Eppelmann replaced Wolfgang Schnur, who had been backed by West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl and was considered a leading candidate in Sunday's parliamentary elections - the first free vote in East Germany's history.

Eppelmann, 47, said other parties probably have similar skeletons in their closets because of the power of the secret police under the regime of Erich Honecker, who was deposed in October.

''There must be no lynch justice,'' he said. ''No one of our 16 million people is without guilt.''

Schnur, a 45-year-old human rights lawyer from Rostock, had denied for days reports he had had ties to the secret police or Stasi. He resigned Thursday after getting a letter from Volker Ruehe, the general secretary of Kohl's Christian Democratic Party, telling him to ''face the consequences.''

Ruehe, in the letter which was released Thursday, said ''you have confirmed to us a part of the accusations publicly made against you of cooperation with the Ministry for State Security.''

The Democratic Awakening national committee Thursday formally expelled Schnur and replaced him with Eppelmann, who was elected by a vote of 42 to 4 with one abstention. He was the only candidate.

Eppelmann has a long record of opposition to the old Communist regime. As a young man he served eight months in prison as a conscientious objector to military service. His Samaritan Church in East Berlin for years was a meeting place for members of the dissident, ecological and civil rights movement.

Kohl in the Sunday East German election campaign is backing the Alliance for Germany, a three-party conservative bloc in which Schnur was the most prominent leader. Kohl even addressed 250,00 people at a conservative alliance rally Wednesday in Leipzig, East Germany's second biggest city.

The West German Christian Democrats have announced they sent 20 million leaflets to East Germany to support the conservative bloc, 5 million publications, 2 million stickers, 500,000 posters, and 2.5 million calendars.

The West German Social Democrats also have been active in the campoaign in support of the East German Social Democratic Party.

Former Chancellor Willy Brandt, the honorary chairman of both the East and West German Social Democrats, has spoken to several hundred thousand East Germans at more than a dozen rallies.

Ibrahim Boehme, the Eastern party leader, said Thursday his party is willing to form a broad coalition, but will not cooperate with the Communist Party or the German Social Union, one of the three parties in the conservsative bloc.

In Bonn, the East-West German Affairs Ministry announced it has spent $4.4 million to support the East German election campaign.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 15) UPI - A suspected Southeast Asia drug lord who calls himself ''Prince Prosperous'' has been indicted on 10 drug trafficking counts involving the largest seizure of heroin ever made, Attorney General Dick Thornburgh announced Thursday.

''As the largest dope pusher in the Golden Triangle (the border area of Laos, Burma, and Thailand), the title of Prince of Death, for thousands of heroin addicts in the United States, might be more apt,'' Thornburgh said.

Chang Chi-Fu, also known as Khun Sa, was indicted by a federal grand jury in the Eastern District of New York in December 1989, but the charges were not disclosed until Thursday.

Thornburgh said Chang Chi-Fu has a drug army of between 4,000 and 10,000 soldiers and operates in the remote jungle region of Southeast Asia that accounts for up to 80 percent of the heroin smuggled into New York.

Chang Chi-Fu calls himself ''Prince Prosperous'' and brags that his Shan United Army, operating out of Burma and northern Thailand, actually has 30,000 soldiers, Drug Enforcement Agency director John Lawn said at a Justice Department news conference with Thornburgh.

The indictment accuses the suspect of attempting to smuggle 2,389 pounds of pure heroin from Bangkok, Thailand, to New York in 1988, the largest heroin seizure ever made, Thornburgh said.

He is also accused of smuggling or attempting to smuggle more than 3,500 pounds of heroin into New York between 1986 and 1988 in various shipments that ultimately were sold for an estimated $350 million, the officials said.

Thornburgh said the suspect's location is unknown, but that he expects the fullest cooperation of Southeast Asian authorities in finding him and bringing him to the United States for trial.

NEW YORK (MARCH 15) UPI - Vincent Van Gogh's ''Irises,'' the world's most expensive artwork, may find a new home at the J. Paul Getty Museum, the world's richest museum, in Malibu, Calif., it was reported Thursday.

A source close to Sotheby's auction house, part owner of the artwork, confirmed that ''Irises'' has been delivered to the museum for consideration by its staff. The museum's interest in acquiring the masterpiece was first reported by The New York Times, which said ''Irises'' arrived in Malibu last week.

''Irises'' was purchased at Sotheby's by Austrialian businessman Alan Bond in 1987 for $53.9 million, the standing auction record for any work of art. It was later revealed that half the purchase price was financed by a loan from Sotheby's which Bond, now in financial trouble, has been unable to pay off.

Bond sold a painting by Manet at Sotheby's last November for $14 million, which went toward paying off his $26.9 million indebtedness to the auction house. Since then, he reportedly has offered ''Irises'' to several Japanese collectors for about $65 million.

Lori Starr, a spokesman for the Getty Museum, said in Malibu there would be no comment on the museum's interest in the Van Gogh ''at this time.'' A spokesman for Sotheby's in New York refused comment.

Bond, a noted yachtsman whose business empire is built on beer, communications and real estate holdings, has been reported by Australian financial sources as $5.5 billion in debt due to business reverses. He displayed ''Irises'' in his offices for a time after its purchase but the painting was later stored in a Swiss bank vault at the insistence of Sotheby's.

''Irises'' was consigned to auction at Sotheby's by John Whitney Payson, who inherited it from his mother, Joan Whitney Payson, former owner of the New York Mets. Van Gogh, who painted it toward the end of his life in 1888 never sold a painting in his lifetime and died a pauper.

J. Paul Getty bequeathed the museum he founded in 1954 with the largest endowment of any art museum in the world, estimated at a billion dollars or more. It recently has made a number of acquisitions at auction including Pontormo's 16th century portrait of Cosimo de Medici, known as ''The Halberdier,'' purchased for $35.2 million last year.

NEW YORK (MARCH 15) UPI - Former Philippines first lady Imelda Marcos arrived Thursday to prepare for her racketeering trial next week with Saudi Arabian businessman Adnan Khashoggi.

Marcos arrived at LaGuardia Airport about noon on a United Air Lines flight from Chicago, where she had changed planes following a flight from Honolulu.

She was to appear, along with Khashoggi, at a pre-trial conference Friday morning between attorneys in the case and Judge John Keenan in U.S. District Court in Manhattan. Jury selection begins Tuesday.

Friends say she will be staying in an East Side apartment during the trial expected to last into July.

Marcos, 60, is charged in a $345 million racketeering scheme in connection with the alleged siphoning of more than $100 million from the islands' treasury into New York real estate and art.

She allegedly acted with her husband, Ferdinand Marcos, the former Philippine president who died in Hawaii last September, where the couple was living in exile since fleeing their native land in 1986.

A 32-page questionnaire was handed out Thursday to 150 prospective jurors, from which a pool of over 50 was to be chosen. From that number the panel of 12 jurors and six alternates would be chosen.

Among the 62 questions in the document were ones on the prospective jurors' education, what they read, whether they knew any of the attorneys, defendants in the case and their families or any on a list of about 200 names that included actor George Hamilton, an unindicted co-conspirator.

The questionnaire also asked, ''Do you believe that wealthy people are entitled to the same justice as other people?''

On Tuesday, Keenan cleared his desk of all pretrial motions with the refusal to let Khashoggi stand trial on his own.

Keenan rebuffed Marcos's attempts to either dismiss or weaken the 1988 indictment through motions that even included a claim she was kidnapped from the Philippines.

In December, attorneys for Marcos rejected a possible plea agreement which provided for a suspended prison sentence.

KANSAS CITY, MO (MARCH 15) UPI - A stranger who cared helped save the lives of an elderly couple whose house caught on fire, a fire department official said Thursday.

Nora Hensley, 84, mistakenly called Dominic Moore, a gas station supervisor, at about 5:15 p.m. Wednesday to report that her house was on fire, said Harold Knabe, a spokesman for the Kansas City Fire Department.

Moore, 20, realizing that the woman was trying to reach the fire department but had called his station instead, immediately phoned 911.

Knabe said Hensley discovered her mistake and called the fire department nearly two minutes later, but he said those two minutes may have made the difference in saving the lives of the woman and her 95-year-old husband, Henry, who is disabled.

''That was probably the difference in my opinion and the opinion of others '' Knabe said. ''It could have made the difference between life and death because you're looking at close to two minutes between the time he called and she called.

''That's the reason why we already had a truck on the scene when she called,'' he said.

Moore said Hensley called the number thinking she was speaking to a dispatcher, ''but she didn't really give me a chance to tell her that this wasn't the fire department or 911, so I just immediately dialed 911.''

Knabe said Moore provided some vital information on the extent of the fire and also told dispatchers that Henry Hensley was disabled.

''He gave us information on the woman and her crippled husband,'' Knabe said. ''We sent three pumpers and a hook-and-ladder on the first call.''

By the time the woman called the department's seven-digit number, Knabe said the firemen were ready to break down the door.

''On the tapes, you can hear the firefighters coming through the door,'' Knabe said. ''We quizzed her on where her husband was, and the information was relayed right to the fire companies.

''The dispatcher gave her instructions to get on the ground and crawl on the floor to get to the firefighters. We told her to get out, and the firefighters would get her husband out.''

The couple was overcome by smoke, Knabe said. Officials at Research Medical Center in Kansas City said Nora Hensley was under 24-hour observation Thursday and that her husband was in fair condition.

The fire was started from food that Nora Hensley left unattended cooking on the stove, causing it to burst into flames, Knabe said.

''She had a pretty good blaze going in the kitchen, and the smoke had filled the house, but the fire was confined to the kitchen,'' he said.

Knabe said the total damage to the house and its contents was $7,200.

He had praise for Moore.

''The guy was really on the ball,'' Knabe said. ''Most people would have probably shoved it off and thought it was a prank call or said you need to call the fire department.

''He said he could hear it was an elderly woman and hear her smoke detector going off,'' he said. ''He never gave it a second thought.

''In two minutes, you could have everything in that house decomposed and a complete flash-over, where everything in the house is burning.''

SAVANNAH, GA (MARCH 15) UPI - Green water gushed from the historic district's fountains Thursday and green T-shirts, mugs, chocolate and even underwear were on display on River Street as the city prepared for St. Patrick's Day.

Merchants hoped to see plenty of green in their cash registers by the end of the holiday weekend, too. For them, St. Patrick's Day means the end of winter sales blahs and the coming of the lucrative tourist season.

''This is a long-awaited weekend. Merchants make up for the last few months. The weekend pulls them out of the slow season and gets them going for the busy season,'' said Gloria Jennings, executive director of the Savannah Waterfront Association.

More than 300,000 revelers are expected to descend upon Georgia's oldest city for Saturday's 166th St. Patrick's Day festivities, which includes traditional parades.

Ruby Curry of River Street Sweets has spent the past month making batches of green chocoloate at a pace of 1,000 bars a day. ''This is really a big thing,'' Curry said.

The cash registers were already ringing at the Mole Hole gift shop, where sales of men's green bikini underwear took off last week after a customer modeled a pair outside the store, said manager Margaret Smith.

Smith said her biggest worry for the holiday weekend is a possible shortage of the popular underwear.

''I have re-ordered the underpants already three times,'' she said.

Parade Grand Marshal Robert Reardon and his aides officially opened the greening of Savannah on Wednesday, pouring green dye into the Forsyth Park fountain. City workers gave other fountains in the historic district the same treatment on Thursday.

The Bush administration suspected that the plant was producing chemical weapons.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 15) UPI - The American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees announced Thursday the formation of a new nurses union warning hospital administrators ''they're no longer dealing with Florence Nightingale but with Wonder Woman.''

The new AFSCME unit, the United Nurses of America, will seek to organize all 2.2 milllion nurses in the nation, AFSCME President Gerald McEntee told more than 300 nurses attending the union's National Nurses Congress.

AFSCME counts about 325,000 health care workers, including 36,000 nurses, among its more than 1.2 million members. The American Nurses Association, a professional organization, is the largest nurses group, with 200,000 members.

McEntee said in addition to seeking higher pay, better conditions and more respect for nurses, the UNA would work to reform the health care system and make access to medical care the right of all Americans.

''We say to those who would think nurses should stay put, follow orders and leave it to the powers that be to determine the future of health care in America: Enough is enough,'' McEntee told the gathering.

In a statement issued to announce the union, McEntee emphasized, ''I hope the hospital administrators understand that. I hope they realize that they're no longer dealing with Florence Nightingale but with Wonder Woman.''

AFSCME officials said about 6 million health care workers, including more than a million nurses, remain unorganized by unions. Other unions organizing nurses include the Service Employees and the Teamsters, they said.

The co-chairwoman of the UNA are Fay Krohn, a licensed practical nurse from Minnesota, and Kathy Sackman, a registered nurse who has served since 1976 as president of the 6,000-member United Nurses Associations of California.

Sackman said the UNA would seek to give nurses a greater voice in a system that ''has been taken over by bean counters,'' hospital and insurance administrators who ''are never expected to get anywhere near a live patient.''

She said nurses are paid half of what they deserve and thousands are ''being burned out and stressed beyond their limits,'' resulting in a nursing shortage that is ''going to get worse before it gets better.''

BEVERLY HILLS, CA (MARCH 15) UPI - Troubled Columbia Savings and Loan, hit hard by the collapse of the junk-bond market, said Thursday it plans to sell the thrift's entire $3.5 billion of junk bonds and would seek a single buyer for the portfolio.

But an analyst said such a sale may be difficult to complete, given the lack of enthusiasm for the high-risk, high-yield securities and last month's bankruptcy filing by Drexel Burnham Lambert Group Inc.

"That portfolio is not going to be an easy sell," said Michael Abrahams, an analyst with Bateman Eichler, Hill Richards. "Not only is there not much interest, but the major market maker (Drexel) is gone."

Columbia, by far the largest holder among thrifts of junk bonds, had been one of the most profitable thrifts in the nation until last fall, after the federal government announced a thrift bailout plan that required savings and loans to sell all junk bonds by 1994.

Columbia said in December that the value of its junk-bond portfolio had fallen more than $300 million during October and November to about $3.8 billion. This week's disclosure means the value of the portfolio is down another $300 million - but Abrahams said this may be overly optimistic. "It looks as if the target Columbia has set is a little too aggressive," he said.

The plan to sell the portfolio to a single buyer apparently supplants one Columbia had announced in December, when Thomas Spiegel said he would resign as Columbia's chairman and chief executive officer at year's end.

At that time, Columbia said Spiegel would set up a new unit to sell off the junk bonds, but no further announcement has since been made about the new unit. Spiegel is continuing to work as a consultant to the thrift.

Edward Harshfield, Columbia's new president and chief executive, disclosed in interviews Wednesday that an investor would need to pay $350 million to $500 million in cash to buy the portfolio and that Columbia might help finance a transaction.

Harshfield indicated he is optimistic the portfolio could be sold for its current value of $3.5 billion. But the thrift, already placed late last year under strict operating limits because of a capital shortage, may face a takeover by regulators if it cannot come close to meeting capital standards soon.

CHICAGO (MARCH 15) UPI - Aggressive buying during the final minutes of trading Thursday rallied grain and soybean futures to session highs on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Grain prices were mostly higher at the close and soybeans were sharply higher.

Most of the buying was triggered by rumors the Soviet Union may be in the market for 300,000 tons of corn and news that China had submitted bids on the same amount of export bonus wheat.

Basis levels turned higher at the Gulf on the export rumors.

Commercials were buyers of both corn and wheat, although gains were tempered by improving soil moisture conditions throughout the Grain Belt.

Soybeans and soybean oil were sharply higher with most of the gains coming just before the close. There was spillover support from the corn pit on indications the Soviets wanted to buy corn.

Commercials and commission houses dominated the trading in the soy complex.

Country movement was light during the session.

At the close, corn was up 3/4 to 3 1/4, soybeans up 9 to 13 1/2, wheat up 1 to 3 1/2 and oats off 1/2 to up 3/4 cent.

MOSCOW (MARCH 15) UPI - Mikhail Gorbachev was sworn in as president with sweeping new powers Thursday after winning an uncontested parliamentary ballot, and he immediately declared war on bureaucrats blocking his reform drive but promised not to abuse his powerful new post.

Gorbachev, who ran unopposed in the secret balloting late Wednesday at the Congress of People's Deputies, emerged from the election with a comfortable margin of victory - but hardly an overwhelming mandate.

''I understand how dramatic the situation is, how complicated and unusual the problems are, and how emotionally charged society is, but I do not see any grounds for panic, let alone replacing perestroika with another policy '' Gorbachev said in his acceptance speech.

''It is obvious, however, that perestroika should be radicalized,'' he said. ''And I shall use my presidential powers above all toward this end.''

Gorbachev took office four days after a new nationalist-dominated parliament in Lithuania declared the republic independent, a move Tass said Thursday the Congress of People's Deputies had declared null and void. Gorbachev also faces secessionist sentiment elsewhere in the Baltic region, and other parts of the vast country torn by ethnic clashes and anti-Communist insurrections.

After the voting results were announced and he was sworn in at the Congress' morning session Thursday, Gorbachev said ''genuine people power'' spurred by his democratization drive is transforming the country in the face of grave difficulties.

''I am aware that I am accepting my duties at a difficult time for the nation,'' Gorbachev said in the Kremlin's Palace of Congresses.

''I agreed to run for president because I am convinced of the future of our fatherland and because perestroika has become the meaning of my entire life,'' he said.

Gorbachev assumed power in March 1985 as general secretary of the Soviet Communist Party and became chairman of the Supreme Soviet, or parliament, last May. He retained his party rank but gave up both the parliament leadership post and his spot as a deputy with his election to the new presidency.

The new post, created at the extraordinary session of Congress convened Monday by Gorbachev, gives him the sweeping powers he said were necessary to save his reform program and consolidate the vast country in the face of disintegrating forces.

His expanded authority is rooted in fundamental powers to be encoded in a new Soviet constitution, including the rights to veto legislation, declare states of emergency or martial law anywhere in the country, and to appoint and fire the prime minister and other senior government officials.

Yegor Yakovlev, editor of the influential weekly Moscow News, told reporters that Gorbachev will now oversee a 100-day period of rapid change including the transfer of land to individual farmers under a new leasing law and the transfer of power to local governing powers after local elections across the country.

Gorbachev said his own principles and a system of ''carefully designed checks and balances'' will prevent him from becoming what some have called a benevolent dictator.

''Some people have expressed fears about the president being able to usurp power,'' he said. ''There is no reason for such fears. This is guaranteed by the constitution, which is now guarded by the powerful, elected agencies of state power - the Congress of People's Deputies and the Supreme Soviet,'' or standing parliament.

Gorbachev, whose status as Soviet leader is now officially enshrined as formal head of state, gained the necessary majority in the 2,250-seat Congress by just 206 votes even though he was the only candidate.

A total of 1,329 lawmakers voted for Gorbachev, while 495 cast ballots against him.

Though he was supported by 70.8 percent of all participating deputies, Gorbachev had to get more than half the votes of the entire 2,250-seat Congress - and his tally of 59.2 percent was unexpectedly low for a contest in which he was the sole candidate.

Gorbachev's dramatic fall in popularity is evident by a comparison of those results with the outcome of his election as parliament chairman last May, when 95.6 percent of all voting lawmakers in the same Congress cast their ballots for him.

The pro-Gorbachev figure in the election tally Wednesday was driven down by disenchanted legislators, a diverse group of radicals, conservatives and nationalists who either did not turn in their ballots or simply failed to show up for the historic vote.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 15) UPI - Members of Congress angry over the administration's proposal to close 35 U.S. military bases said Thursday the plan means American communities will suffer while European nations stay ''rich and fat'' under U.S. protection.

Members of a House Appropriations subcommitee also charged the proposal is poorly planned, based on partisan politics and may not even meet its principal aim of saving money.

''For openers, we could do with 50 to 75 percent less forces in Western Europe,'' said Rep. Bill Alexander, D-Ark., who promised Congress is ''just warming up'' in its opposition to the plan.

Noting the ''collapse of communism'' and increasing wealth among Common Market nations, Alexander added, ''There are many, many bases over in Western Europe that are totally unnecessary. ... They're capable of paying for their own defense.''

Alexander's complaint was leveled at David Berteau, principal deputy assistant defense secretary, and deputy chiefs the Army, Navy and Air Force who were testifying before the Military Construction Subcommittee.

He was backed by subcommitte chairman Rep. Bill Hefner, D-N.C., who called for not only Western Europe but Japan and Korea to share the economic burden of closed bases.

''They're the ones who have benefited from our umbrella over the years,'' Hefner said, ''and now they're rich and fat.''

Berteau sought to convince the panel that ''base closures present us with some of our best opportunities to save valuable defense resources and taxpayer dollars.''

In January, Defense Secretary Dick Cheney announced the list of 35 bases in the United States and 12 overseas that he is studying for closure. These would be in addition to the 86 bases picked by a bipartisan commission and approved for closure by Congress last year.

Rep. Bill Lowery, R-Calif., said there has been ''tremendous cost escalation'' for implementing the earlier closure list. ''We're finding that base closure is not the solution to the deficit problem,'' he said. ''The savings you're assuming are paper savings.''

Berteau said the Defense Department expects to save $2.6 billion between 1989 and 1995 by closing the first round of 86 bases, with closure costs during the same period of $3.4 billion. But with land sale proceeds he said, ''taxpayers can expect to realize a net gain of $1.5 billion by fiscal 1995.

''To somehow say that closing bases is going to realize a huge savings, I think, is way overselling,'' Lowery said.

Rep. Ronald Coleman, D-Texas, called the Pentagon's accounting methods ''a shell game.''

Coleman said a Pentagon proposal to pay for closures with money from Defense Department operations and maintenance accounts ''is the absolute worse place you can take that money. ... Not with my vote, ever.''

WASHINGTON (MARCH 15) UPI - The Pentagon announced the retirement Thursday of Gen. James Lindsay, the first commander-in-chief of the Special Operations Command, which oversees the elite forces of the Army, Navy and Air Force.

No replacement was announced.

President Bush has nominated Lindsay, 57, ''to be placed on the retired list in his current grade,'' the Pentagon said in a statement. ''General Lindsay will retire after completion of more than 37 years of service.''

His retirement had been expected for months.

Lindsay has served as commander-in-chief of the Special Operations Command MacDill Air Force Base, Fla., since October 1986, when the command was created to consolidate operational control over the elite of the military services.

A native of Portage, Wis., Lindsay had extensive experience in the airborne Rangers and the Green Berets and is a Vietnam veteran.

Lindsay's forces bore the brunt of the casualties in the Dec. 20 invasion of Panama. Of the 23 American servicemen killed, 11 were special forces: Navy SEALs, Army Rangers and the Air Force's First Special Operations Wing.

JERUSALEM (MARCH 15) UPI - Parliament approved a vote of no-confidence Thursday, bringing down the government of Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir.

In a roll call, 60 Knesset members voted for the no-confidence motion introduced by the Labor Party and 55 voted against the motion. Five parliamentarians were absent during the voting.

It was the first time in Israel's nearly 42-year history that a government had been ousted by a vote of no confidence.

Despite the outcome of the vote, Shamir smiled when greeted by members of his Likud faction. ''Well, those are the results. They were no surprise after what has happened over the past several hours,'' Shamir told Israel Radio. ''Life goes on even after disappointment.''

Shamir, accused by Labor of being a stumbling block to the Middle East peace process, now heads a caretaker government. President Chaim Herzog must select which political party he believes has the best chance of forming a government - Labor or Likud.

''I have always said that there is a majority in the Knesset for the advancement in the peace process and that was proved tonight,'' Labor Party leader Shimon Peres said after the vote of no-confidence.

Senior Labor Party official Yitzhak Rabin sounded a conciliatory note, saying he would not be disappointed if another Likud-Labor coalition government were formed. But he added, ''The government fell for one reason. The Likud was unable to say yes and move forward'' with the peace process.

Just one hour before the vote, Shamir and the Labor Party leaders attempted to reach a compromise to restore the 15-month-old Likud-Labor coalition that collapsed Tuesday.

But no agreement was reached despite last-minute prodding from Ovadia Yosef, spiritual leader of the ultra-Orthodox Shas Party, the largest religious party faction in Parliament.

Shamir, Rabin and Peres met with Yosef to discuss a compromise proposal but emerged from the meeting - described as ''very tense'' by one participant - without agreement. Five of the six Shas members were absent from the Knesset voting, swaying the outcome in Labor's favor.

The compromise agreement revolved around Shamir returning ousted Labor leaders to the ruling coalition and agreeing to a proposal by U.S. Secretary of State James Baker to start Israeli-Palestinian talks.

Shamir fired Peres Tuesday, triggering the collapse of the 15-month-old coalition and climaxing a month-long deadlock over the course of the peace process. After Peres' dismissal, all 10 other Labor ministers resigned from the Cabinet.

''Mr. Shamir refused to give a guarantee of a positive answer to Baker,'' Peres said after meeting with Yosef. ''There is no other choice but to go to the Knesset and decide.''

The situation changed by the hour throughout Thursday as Likud and Labor leaders sought the crucial religious party votes. Shas' position was uncertain as the religious party attempted to broker a compromise between Labor and Likud.

While the Likud and Labor leaders met with Yosef, the Knesset delayed voting on eight no-confidence motions introduced against Shamir. Left-wing Knesset member Yossi Sarid criticized the delay as a drama he had to ''rub my eyes in order to understand.

''Sitting here are 120 representatives of the public, chosen by millions of voters ... and the Knesset has to break up because the representatives of the two largest factions have gone to meet with rabbis, as honorable as they may be,'' Sarid said.

Up until the vote, its outcome remained unclear. The two-member ultra-Orthodox Degel Hatorah Party consulted their spiritual leader for guidance moments before the vote.

Hecklers berated Shamir as he stood at the front of the Knesset chamber to defend himself against the no-confidence motions. ''You will not quiet me '' Shamir shouted at the hecklers. ''Let me finish talking.'' He added his actions were not motivated by personal or political interests.

''We must determine our fate. What we do here will affect the fate of the Jewish people thorughout the world,'' he said. ''The enemies are still at the gate. They are far from achieving their goals. The land is still being built and the way is still long to the settlement of all parts of her.''

Urging a rejection of the no-confidence motions, Shamir said, ''More than anything we believe that real peace can be achieved when Israel is united, strong, sure of itself, and her government acts intelligently.''

WASHINGTON (MARCH 15) UPI - Budget director Richard Darman gave Congress an outline Thursday of Bush administration objections to a deficit reduction plan proposed by House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill.

Objections to most of Rostenkowski's key proposals prompted Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., chairman of the Joint Economic Committee, to say ''there does not seem to be much room for bargaining'' between Congress and President Bush over the proposal.

Rostenkowski's $511 billion, five-year deficit reduction plan, presented last Sunday, got an unexpectedly warm initial reception from the White House as a bold, comprehensive and credible package that could be the basis of bipartisan budget talks.

But, as the week has progressed, Bush and other administration officials said they could not support many major aspects of the plan.

In response to Hamilton's questions, Darman said the administration would not support Rostenkowski's proposed five-year, $100 billion increased in taxes on gasoline, tobacco, beer, wine and pollutants. He also rejected the call for a one-year freeze in Social Security cost of living adjustments and a ban on any tax cuts, including the capital gains tax cut Bush favors so strongly.

Darman told the committee that while the administration finds some merit in Rostenkowski's call for a one-year federal spending freeze on all programs except those helping the poor, it opposes as too steep the chairman's proposal for $150 billion in Pentagon spending reductions over five years.

And, Darman said, the administration could not support Rostenkowski's call to eliminate the Gramm-Rudman balanced budget law and eliminate an anomaly in the tax code that allows the richest Americans to pay a lower income tax rate than some people who make less.

Rostenkowski proposed setting the maximum tax rate at 33 percent - the rate set under the 1986 Tax Reform Act for couples filing jointly with taxable incomes of up to $185,000 a year.

Under current law, the tax rate for the wealthiest Americans making more than $185,000 a year drops back to 28 percent. Critics say this ''bubble'' is unfair.

Darman told Hamilton the administration could support dropping the maximum rate to 28 percent but could not increasing it to 33 percent for the wealthy Americans now paying 28 percent.

Darman said Rostenkowski's plan ''would not contribute satisfactorily to economic growth.''

Rostenkowski, in a speech to an oil and gas industry group Thursday, urged his audience to put aside personal interests and join him in making tough choices to solve the deficit problem.

''That's what this debate is all about - whether we can convince everyone in our society to make some small personal sacrifices to build a better nation for all of us,'' said Rostenkowski, whose heads the House committee that writes tax laws.

He said he was trying ''to create a constituency for honest action,'' either for his plan or for another that makes the hard choices on taxes and spending needed to reduce the deficit, which has pushed the national debt to just shy of $3 trillion.

(MARCH 15) UPI - Britain is retaliating for today's execution of an Iranian-born British journalist by Iraq. London recalled its ambassador to Baghdad and suspended all ministerial visits and military training programs to protest the hanging of 31-year-old Farzad Bazoft. Bazoft was convicted of spying last weekend, and his body was turned over to the British Embassy today.

Libya's news agency reports that most of a controversial chemical plant was destroyed in a fire Libya blames on the United States and Israel. West German officials in Bonn say about two-thousand Libyans demonstrated outside the West German Embassy in the Libyan capital of Tripoli. The suspected chemical weapons plant was built with assistance from West German companies.

LIVINGSTON, MT (MARCH 15) UPI - Roads leading to the ranch of a survivalist church near Yellowstone National Park were busy Thursday with out-of-towners apparently headed there to hole up in bomb shelters to survive the nuclear war they believe is coming.

''The roads are busy as a bee,'' said Park County undersheriff Lee Keto. ''There's a lot of activity down there. We're getting 10,000 rumors a day.''

Keto said he didn't know how many people have arrived at the ranch owned by the controversial Church Universal and Triumphant in the past few days. ''It's a bunch,'' he added.

Dozens of cars with license plates from all over the country have been arriving daily in nearby Livingston. Many were pulling trailers. Area stores report heavy increases in business as church members stock up on supplies.

All this week, church members have been stockpiling subterranean shelters with food, computers medical equipment, blood supplies, diesel generators and weapons.

Church leaders continued to deny reports from cult watchers that members are ready to enter the bomb shelters. However, at least three teenage children of church members ran away because they did not want to go underground with their parents.

''My parents are staying in a trailer right outside their shelter,'' said Chelsea Brannon, 16, who ran away Monday and, along with the other runaways, is staying in safe houses in Livingston. ''The church is supposed to notify them three hours ahead of time when they should move in.''

''They were actually supposed to go (Monday), but the church put it off,'' she said. ''I watched my parents become brainwashed. It has been really hard.''

Brannon said her father and step-mother joined the church two years ago and moved to Montana from Santa Rosa, Calif. They've stockpiled enough food in their shelter for seven years, she said.

''My parents think they will live a life of luxury because of all the stuff they have stored,'' she said. ''Then they think it will be like pioneer days when they come up.''

Keto said officers were searching for the teens Thursday, and it would be up to social service agencies and judges to decide if they would be returned to their parents.

Park County officials have also warned the church that members would face eviction from the shelters because they lack proper sewage systems.

The survivalist church owns 33,000 acres in Paradise Valley in Park County and members have been rushing to complete a massive shelter designed to house 750 people. There are as many as 45 more smaller shelters.

The church gained notoriety last year when federal agents revealed it was stockpiling weapons for a 200-man army, allegedly to defend the ranch from foreign and domestic invaders after a nuclear war.

Church Vice President Edward Francis, husband of church leader Elizabeth Prophet; and church security officer Vernon Hamilton pleaded guilty in Spokane, Wash., to federal charges that they conspired to use false names to buy nearly $150,000 in assault rifles and more 120,000 rounds of ammunition.

Prophet in December warned her 1,000 members in the Livingston area and other followers around the world that the Earth was entering a period of 12 years of ''negative karma,'' according to prophecies she received from the ''Ascended Masters.''

WASHINGTON (MARCH 15) UPI - A plan to send a Japanese reporter to the Soviet space station has been moved up about six months to Dec. 2, and the two candidates for the mission said Thursday their initial fears have given way to eagerness.

Officials from the Tokyo Broadcasting System Inc. and the Soviet space program said changes in the Russian space program schedule moved the planned launch up from May 1991.

''This indeed is a momentous occasion for Japan, the journalism profession and for our network,'' said Hiroshi Ohta, president of TBS News. ''We applaud the Soviets for their cooperation.''

TBS, Japan's largest commercial broadcasting network, is paying about $10 million to send the first reporter into space, said Junji Kitadai, president of TBS International.

A similar U.S. plan to send a reporter into space was put on hold following the 1986 Challenger shuttle disaster.

The network held a news conference in Tokyo that was televised by satellite in Washington to announce the date and make available for questions two of its reporters training for the mission.

Toyohiro Akiyama, 47, deputy director of TBS News, and Ryoko Kikuchi, 25, a video photographer, have been training for the mission at the Gagarin Memorial Cosmonaut Training Center in the Soviet Union.

One of the two will be selected to spend two days on the Soviet space ship Soyuz and six days on the Russian space station Mir, joining two cosmonauts.

In addition to providing live television coverage before, during and after the mission, the reporter will observe and record environmental conditions on Earth, officials said. Film and tape from the mission will be used in a documentary.

During the hour-long news conference, the reporters discussed their rigorous training and said they were looking forward to the opportunity to be astronauts.

Both said they were initially afraid of the dangers of space travel but had overcome those fears.

''To go out of the atmosphere, go into the airless space, gave me some fear,'' Kikuchi said. ''But ... going into space now looks like a trip. So nowadays I don't have the fear. I don't really think about fear or being afraid of it.''

Akiyama likened his decision to go into space to American reporters who covered the Vietnam War.

''Even though the journalists have been afraid of losing their lives ... they have to go to the field and make reports. I think that is the essence of our assignment,'' he said. ''Furthermore, I don't think space is going to be the graveyard for us.''

NEW YORK (MARCH 15) UPI - The Rev. Jesse Jackson Thursday comforted a 12-year-old boy hospitalized with severe burns from an attack by another youth, calling the incident an ''intolerable'' example of escalating black-on-black crime.

Jackson carried a bouquet of flowers to the bedside of David Aupont, who was recovering from a four-hour skin graft operation performed on his back Wednesday at New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center.

Doctors said Aupont has only a 50 percent chance of surviving his wounds.

Aupont was on his way to school last week when a boy forced him into the basement of an abandoned Brooklyn building, beat him, tied him to a railing and set him on fire, police said.

The suspect, 13, was charged with attempted murder, first-degree assault, kidnapping and robbery. He was being held at Spofford Juvenile Center in the Bronx.

Neighbors of the suspect said he was a nice boy who had in recent months turned into an angry youth, taunting other children in his Brooklyn neighborhood.

The nature of the crime against Aupont, described by family as a frail and gentle youth, has spurred an outpouring of concern nationwide.

''Our child who is injured - he really is our child - needs hope and help and consolation,'' Jackson said.

Standing beside the boy's family, Jackson said at a news conference that Aupont was unable to speak because of the operation but had communicated with his eyes.

''He is alert, he is smiling, he is responding,'' Jackson said. ''I shared with him how much love we have for him and how much he is inspiring us to be better people. I told him if he has the faith, God has the power.''

Emphasizing a theme he has spoken about around the country, Jackson said black-on-black crime had become ''intolerable.'' Both the victim, a recent immigrant from Haiti, and his alleged attacker are black.

''I'm concerned about the deeper meaning of this senseless violence that continues to threaten all of us,'' he said. ''The flow of drugs and guns has hit an emergency level, a crisis level.

''People you have loved, you tend to die for. People you have learned to hate, you tend to kill,'' he said. ''This level of self-degredation and violence and pathological rejection of other black people must be challenged and must end.''

Jackson appealed for donations to a fund set up for the boy and his family saying the Auponts were struggling to meet enormous hospital expenses.

Dr. Cleon Goodwin, the head of the hospital's burn center, said skin grafts had been performed on half of the burns on Aupont's body. Doctors expected to perform one more skin graft operation, his third, on his stomach and chest on Tuesday.

DETROIT (MARCH 15) UPI - Hoping to sell 400 cars a year in the lucrative U.S. luxury car market may not sound like an ambitious goal for an automobile company - unless it means doubling the current level of sales.

On the fringe of the auto market lies CXAuto, a company started in 1983 with the idea of offering to U.S. buyers cars that cut through the clutter of BMWs, Mercedes and Jaguars that clog big city intersections nowadays.

One such car is the Citroen XM, set to make its U.S. debut next month at the New York Auto Show and to go on sale through CXAuto this fall. It is intended to compete with other luxury sedans, including newcomers from Toyota's Lexus and Nissan's Infiniti divisions.

"In what is becoming a market devoid of individuality and brand awareness, we are able to offer the discerning buyer reliability, luxury, and performance without sacrificing exclusivity," said Malcolm Langman, head of the Middlesex, N.J., CXAuto.

The XM, which won Europe's 1990 Car of the Year award after being introduced there last summer, will sell here at prices ranging between $29,000 for the Pallas model and about $45,000 for the V6-powered Vitesse.

The XM models are expected to account for most of CXAuto's U.S. car sales, now concentrated on the East Coast and handled through 12 dealers from Boston to Georgia, said Eric Langman, Malcolm's son and president of CXAuto New York.

The XM, which keeps the aerodynamic shape and novel hydropneumatic suspension system found in earlier Citroen DS and CX models, replaces the CX line of cars that went on U.S. sale in 1986 and that are to be phased out by CXAuto in July. The CX cars ranged in price from $37,000 for the GTi model to about $47,000 for the long-wheelbase Prestige. The Estate Wagon costs $38,000.

"These cars are not simply a U.S. conversion," said Eric Langman of the CX and XM models. "Our company has its own final assembly plant in Oisterwijk, Holland, where cars come from Citroen's factory north of Paris and go through a multi-step process before they are shipped to the United States."

All cars are upgraded from European specifications in the areas of air conditioning and electrical systems, he said. "We also add a leather interior and bring the appearance up to our specifications to compete in the U.S. luxury car market."

CXAuto will decide by this July whether to sell a smaller sports car called the CXA Cabrio, known in Europe as the DIMMA/P205 and now distributed by CXAuto in Japan through the French carmaker Peugeot. It will be priced in the $20,000 range if offered for U.S. sale, Eric Langman said.

CXAuto has 60 authorized maintenance centers nationwide, mostly independent service stations that are familiar with servicing Citroens. All cars come with a five-year/50,000-mile warranty on major components, with the entire car covered for the first year or 12,000 miles.

"We make no pretense as to who we are," said the younger Langman. "We simply make available special automobiles in markets where they would not otherwise be available." But he said the company "hopes to sell a couple of thousand cars a year when we have a more thorougly filled-in product line."

WASHINGTON (MARCH 15) UPI - The Mexican government is demanding an explanation from U.S. officials about the apparent unauthorized use of a satellite to locate marijuana plantations in Mexico, diplomatic sources said Thursday.

''We were informed that Mexico had been surveyed via satellite and narcotic plantations 10 times larger than previously known had been located,'' said Gustavo Gonzalez, minister for narcotic affairs at the Mexican embassy in Washington.

''We were surprised by this information because we did not know that this satellite was in operation and surveying Mexico,'' he said. ''We have requested a detailed explanation about the scientific qualities of this observation, but we have not received an answer yet.

''If the observation is accurate and can be verified, we are ready to eradicate those plantations we previously were unable to detect,'' Gonzalez said.

He added, however, Mexico was not consulted or informed about the use of satellite despite agreements between both countries on information exchanges.

He said he would like to see continued cooperation between Mexican and U.S. legal and law enforcement agencies in fighting drug trafficking between the two countries.

Gonzalez made his comments at a news conference where he unveiled a new campaign to publicize Mexico's own drug war.

Mexico will spend $950,000 on the campaign with the theme ''It's everybody's war.'' Ads will be broadcast on TV and printed on the main U.S. newspapers, in English and Spanish languages beginning Friday.

Some of the ads will focus on the family of Mario Enrique Lopez, an officer of the Mexican Judicial Police murdered by drug hit men on Nov. 8, 1989.

The suffering of Lopez's widow and their three children ''is representative of the families of the nearly 100 Mexican police and military who have given their lives in the war on drugs over the last 15 months,'' the embassy said.

The Mexican government has allocated the highest priority to the war on drugs, including the establishment of a special law enforcement unit devoted to dismantle drug production and trafficking, Trevino said.

BRASILIA, BRAZIL (MARCH 15) UPI - Fernando Collor de Mello was sworn in Thursday as president of Brazil and acted immediately to halt hyperinflation and turn around the sinking economy of South America's biggest country.

Right after receiving the presidential sash from outgoing President Jose Sarney at the Planalto palace, Collor signed decrees slashing from 24 to 12 the number of government ministries in a sign of his cost-cutting campaign to reduce the deficit.

He signed another decree authorizing the sale of apartments and homes owned by the government in Brasilia.

He said he will announce Friday further anti-inflation and stabilization measures to turn around a cost-of-living spiral that shot upward by 2,751 percent in the 12-month period ending Feb. 28, battering the purchasing power of wage earners and discouraging investment.

''Our main goal is to free Brazil from misery,'' Collor said in his inaugural address to Congress, with Vice President Dan Quayle in the audience. He pledged to ''liquidate'' inflation, promote a market economy and preserve democracy.

With 144 million people, Brazil is the second largest nation after the United States in population in the Western Hemisphere, the biggest country in South America and the fifth largest in the world in size.

It shares borders with every country in South America except Chile and Ecuador, and the success or failures of its policies have immediate impact throughout the South American continent.

Collor is the first Brazilian president to be elected by direct popular vote since Janio Quadros won that office in 1961. Quadros resigned after serving only seven months, touching off a period of political instability that culminated in a coup d'etat in 1964 followed by 21 years of military rule.

With Quayle among the 121 foreign delegations at the inauguration ceremonies, Collor said relations between Brazil and the United States will be positive.

''Our agreements, and not our differences, will set the tone of the relationship,'' he said.

In the difficult negotiations with foreign creditors who hold the burdensome $112 billion Brazilian foreign debt, the new president said he wanted ''dialogue, not confrontations.''

But he warned that Brazil would not sacrifice economic growth for the sake of creditors.

''It is not a question of how much we can grow after paying, but how much we can pay after guaranteeing our growth,'' Collor said.

The inauguration was held in two stages - the swearing-in ceremony in Congress and the reception of the presidential sash in the Planalto Palace.

Collor, 40, the youngest president in Brazil's history, gave an impromptu speech to 4,000 well-wishers at the palace, vowing to ''give it all I've got.''

The crowd applauded, sang the national anthem and floated colored helium balloons.

Nineteen heads of government attended the inauguration, including Spanish Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez, Cuban President Fidel Castro, Italian Prime Minister Guilio Andreotti, Portuguese President Mario Suarez, the chiefs of 12 other Western Hemisphere republics and the leaders of Angola Cape Verde and Guinea Bissau.

Banks were closed Thursday, part of a three-day shutdown ending Monday to stop panic buying of U.S. dollars and enable the incoming administration to get its economic program in place.

ANNAPOLIS, MD (MARCH 15) UPI - Maryland senators opposed to abortions held true to their threats Thursday and launched into an extended debate intended to thwart legislation that would write into law the state's current unrestricted abortion practices.

Senators opposing the omnibus bill backed by abortions rights advocates offered a series of amendments to weaken the legislation before launching a filibuster that legislators predicted might last for days.

The Senate voted 24-21 to add a provision prohibiting abortions solely because of the sex of the fetus before Sen. Frank Kelly signaled the start of the filibuster at 1:20 p.m. EST, saying he had his own package of amendments that would add more restrictions to the bill.

''If any of the members want to go get something to eat, now is the time to do it,'' said Kelly. The warning emptied the Senate chamber and sent abortion opponents off to plan their strategy.

Senate President Thomas V. ''Mike'' Miller said debate would continue until two-thirds of the 47 members agreed to end the filibuster and cast a vote on the legislation.

At issue is an omnibus bill that would allow unrestricted abortions until a fetus is determined to be viable by a physician. After that time, abortions would only be allowed in cases in which the health of the mother or the child were in danger.

While abortion rights legislators have said they have a majority needed to pass the bill, opponents contend that the margin is slim enough that those supporting the bill will not have the two-thirds necessary to end debate.

Opponents argued that the legislation would make Maryland the most liberal state in the nation regarding abortions.

''If we pass this bill Baltimore will be the abortion capital of the East Coast,'' said Senate Minority John Cade. ''We may replicate Sodom and Gomorrah on the East Coast.''

The abortion issue has simmered since the 90-day session began Jan. 10, despite the reluctance of some to tackle the volatile issue in an election year for all 188 members of the Senate and House of Delegates.

Maryland Attorney General J. Joseph Curran Jr. said that should the Roe decision be overturned, a 1968 law still on Maryland's books would again become enforceable, allowing abortions during the first trimester of pregnancy only in cases of rape, incest or where the mother's life were in danger.

The 1968 law also provided that abortions must be performed in accredited hospitals and a medical board would have to approve all abortions.

Gov. William Donald Schaefer has consistently refused to take a position on the legislation, saying he may become party at some point in the future.

The Senate's action is only the first step in making the legislation law, since the bill, which has not yet come up in the House of Delegates, must pass both chambers in identical form by the session's scheduled April 9 adjournment.

Should the legislation pass and be signed by Schaefer, abortion opponents have vowed to petition for a referendum on the measure and allow voters to decide the law's fate in the November general election.

NEW YORK (MARCH 15) UPI - Salomon Brothers Asset Management Inc., a subsidiary of the Salomon Inc. holding company, said Thursday it had agreed to purchase Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc.'s asset management division for $28 million, more than doubling the funds now under its stewardship.

Lehman Management Co. operates five money funds and about 600 institutional and personal client accounts with current total assets of $2.61 billion, Shearson and Salomon officers said. Money fund assets were $1.74 billion and client account assets were $869 million, they said.

Salomon will assume direct administration of four funds with total assets of $1.54 billion and advise on management of a fifth with assets of $199 million. It will assume full responsibility for the client accounts.

The acquisition brings cash to troubled Shearson, whose American Express Co. parent recently poured $750 million into the Wall Street investment house and replaced its top management. It builds Salomon's position in fee-based money management, a desireable line in today's uncertain markets.

Michael Holland, chairman of Salomon's asset management company, told United Press International that asset management is "relatively less volatile than other portions of the securities business." Its attraction is a "stable and potentially increasing flow of earnings," he said.

"It's a very friendly acquisition and we're committed to grow in that area " said Salomon vice president and spokeswoman Macy Egerton. The deal more than doubles the $2.2 billion assets under management by Salomon, which will earn fees calculated in relation to the amounts handled.

Salomon said it will keep "substantially all" Lehman investment and research staff. A Shearson Lehman Hutton statement said Lehman Management Chairman Francis Fraenkel, a Shearson senior executive vice president, will continue to oversee the various businesses in the transaction.

"We are delighted to have the talented and experienced investment staff of Lehman Management join us," said John Gutfreund, chairman and chief executive officer of Salomon Inc. He said Lehman Management's "superior performance and long-established client base" would help Salomon expand the "scope and vitality" of its asset management business.

On the deal's completion, the names of four Lehman Management money funds - Lehman Corp., Lehman Investors Fund Inc., Lehman Capital Fund Inc. and Lehman Opportunity Fund Inc. - will be changed to the Salomon Brothers Fund Inc., Salomon Brothers Investors Fund Inc., Salomon Brothers Capital Fund Inc. and Salomon Brothers Opportunity Fund Inc., Salomon said.

The SLH Growth and Opportunity Portfolio, will remain part of the SLH Equity sortfolios - a Shearson division - but will get investment advice from Salomon Brothers Asset Management, the Salomon statement said.

Completion of the transaction with name changes and new management contracts is contingent upon approval by regulators as well as by the boards and shareholders of funds involved, Salomon and Shearson said.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 15) UPI - Lawmakers from states that rely on revenue from sales taxes rather than personal state income taxes introduced a bill Thursday to restore the sales tax deduction eliminated in the 1986 Tax Reform Act.

''It lifts a penalty imposed on states like Connecticut that do not raise revenues through broad-based income taxes, but instead through sales taxes '' said the bill's sponsor, Rep. Nancy Johnson, R-Conn.

Under the bill, taxpayers who itemize their returns could deduct state and local income, sales and property taxes that exceed 1 percent of adjusted gross income.

For example, a family whose adjusted gross income is $40,000 would be allowed to deduct all but $400 in state and local states paid that year. Johnson said the 1 percent ''floor'' on deductions would raise the approximately $5 billion needed to restore most of the sales tax deduction.

Connecticut, Alaska, Florida, Nevada, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Washington and Wyoming have no personal state income tax. Their sales tax rates, however, are generally high, with Connecticut levying the highest of any state in the country - 8 percent.

DETROIT (MARCH 15) UPI - Despite the industry's overall sluggish sales performance since last October, the nation's dealers have managed to trim stockpiles from high year-ago levels, industry figures showed Thursday.

Chrysler Corp. managed to trim its unsold car stocks by the most, to a 72-day supply as of March 10, compared with 79 days at the end of February. Both are down sharply from the 99-day supply of March 10, 1989.

Industry leader General Motors Corp. shaved off three days from its Feb. 28 level, to 73 as of March 10. GM had an 88-day supply in the year-ago period. Ford Motor Co. saw its stockpile rise slightly to 74 days, up from 69 days as of Feb. 28 but down from the 83-day supply posted for March 10, 1989.

The supplies, which some industry analysts say may be below desirable levels should car sales surge this spring, will allow U.S. automakers to maintain production rates at reasonably strong levels into the second quarter of 1990.

But there are still many models that have abnormally high supply rates. Those models include Chrysler's Eagle Premier, which had a 186-day glut as of March 10. Ford's Probe posted a 115-day supply, while GM's Buick Electra had a 113-day supply. GM's Buick Regal coupe had a 109-day supply, while its Oldsmobile Toronado stood at 108 days.

Oldsmobile announced Wednesday a $1,500 customer rebate on its Toronado luxury coupes valid until Sept. 26, or the end of the 1990-model year, in addition to an undisclosed amount of cash offered to Oldsmobile dealers to sell the car.

The nation's automakers plan to build an estimated 219,410 cars and light trucks this week, down 1.6 percent from last week and 11.5 percent less than the year-ago week, Ward's Automotive Reports said Thursday.

The reduced production levels are expected to counter relatively soft U.S. vehicle sales, which slipped 3.8 percent among domestic manufacturers during the early March period from the year before.

They will also help keep inventories at manageable levels into the spring selling season, since most analysts and industry executives agree a sales increase will not take hold until the second half of this year.

U.S. car output through this week was estimated at 135,390 units, down 0.7 percent from last week and 11.3 percent below the 152,572 cars built in the year ago week, Ward's said.

Domestic light truck output is slated at 84,020 units this week, down 3.1 percent from last week and 9.2 percent behind the 95,450 trucks assembled in the year ago week.

All U.S. car and truck plants were operating this week, with the exception of GM's Wentzville, Mo., plant, which was closed to switch to a new Buick model for 1991.

GM's Lansing, Mich., and Janesville, Wis., plants have scheduled overtime this week, Ward's said, as have Ford's car plants in Wixom and Wayne, Mich., Atlanta and Chicago.

Ford truck plants on overtime this week included its Twin Cities, Minn.; St. Louis; and Lorain, Ohio, facilities, a company spokesman said.

LONDON (MARCH 15) UPI - Rolls-Royce PLC reported Thursday 1989 earnings of $316.39 million, or 34 cents a share, up 35 percent from the $234.48 million, or 29 cents a share, the company earned in 1988.

Revenues rose to $4.76 billion last year from $3.17 billion in 1988.

Pre-tax profit rose by 40 percent to $374.2 million from 1988's $269.81 million, Rolls Royce said.

The company attributed 20 percent of the 1989 revenues to NEI PLC, which Rolls-Royce bought last year for $491 million. The NEI acquisition representedthe first major expansion for Rolls-Royce.

Lord Tombs of Brailes, chairman of Rolls-Royce, said that ''prospects for our enlarged group are encouraging. Rolls-Royce has a strong order book in aero gas turbines and the prospect of future large orders in a bouyant aircraft market. NEI plans to be a major beneficiary of the changes in the structure of the British power industry and its need for further capacity.''

Rolls-Royce's orders stood at $7.23 billion as of the end of 1989. NEI's outstanding orders approached $1.4 billion, bringing the overall order book to $8.7 billion.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 15) UPI - The Rev. Lazlo Tokes called on President Bush Thursday and left satisfied the United States will not grant improved trade status to Romania unless the rights of Hungarians and other minorities are protected.

Tokes, a Hungarian who is pastor of a church in Romania, met with Bush in the Oval Office and told reporters afterward that he had spoken with the president about ''the problems and the kind of help we need'' in Romania.

''We ask for urgent help to improve everyday life,'' he said, citing ''food, medicine and technical support.''

''We agreed'' that the grant of ''most-favored nation (trade benefits) should be conditioned on the assurance of full rights for minorities'' in Romania, he said.

Most-favored nation status for Romania was lifted when the government of deposed Communist dictator Nicolai Ceaucescu was accused of human rights abuses. The special status guarantees that goods from Romania receive treatment equal to that provided to any U.S. trade partners.

Tokes said Secretary of State James Baker, who sat in on the meeting, noted that Romania already has been given $80 million in emergency aid. Further assistance is being considered, but no commitment has been made.

ATLANTA (MARCH 15) UPI - Influenza is no longer at epidemic levels in the United States and the worst of the flu season may be over if no new strains appear, government researchers reported Thursday.

The federal Centers for Disease Control said that by March 1, 6.5 percent of patients visiting doctors monitoring the illness reported symptoms of the flu, down from a season high of 8.9 percent reported Dec. 30.

As of March 3, 6.6 percent of the nation's deaths were attributable to flu or flu-related pneumonia. It marked the first time the death rate dropped below the epidemic rate of 6.9 percent since reaching epidemic levels the week ending Jan. 6, said Susan Good, the CDC's influenza surveillance coordinator. The death rate approached 8.5 percent in February.

This year's flu epidemic has been the worst since the 1984-1985 winter, when an estimated 57,000 people died.

Iowa and New York were the only two states still reporting widespread cases of the flu. The official flu season designated by the CDC ends April 30, Good said.

Arkansas, Georgia, Pennsylvania, Montana and Utah reported no confirmed influenza cases, Good said.

But Dr. Walter Gunn, a CDC epidemiologist, warned that although the worst is probably over, the number of flu cases could increase again this season.

''It's come down significantly, but no one can predict what's going to happen with the flu,'' Gunn said. ''It's still important for people to check with their doctors. Some people still need to be immunized.''

The CDC, which gathers flu reports from 150 monitoring physicians, 55 state and territorial health departments and 121 cities, reported 99.7 percent of the confirmed flu cases were type A, mostly a strain known as Shanghai flu.

Last year, the type of flu changed from type A to type B about halfway through the season. Officials expected a similar pattern this year, but it has yet to appear.

Gunn said the small number of cases of other types of flu such as type A-Taiwan and type B open the possibility that a new epidemic could occur.

''The significance is you can get type A and get over it, and then get type B,'' Gunn said. ''Fortunately, the vaccine protects against them all.''

In another flu-related report, the CDC reported a study done in nine states indicates more elderly people may be getting needed flu vaccines than originally thought.

Health officials had believed that only about 23 percent of people 65 years old or older were getting flu vaccines each year. However, a study performed in Arizona, Massachusetts, Michigan, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania and Texas in 1988-1989 indicates that number may be closer to 32 percent.

People 65 and older constitute the major high-risk group for contracting and dying from influenza.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 15) UPI - Simcha Dinitz, head of the Jewish Agency, said Thursday the relatively tiny number of Soviet Jews settling in Jerusalem and the occupied territories is being used as ''a convenient weapon with which to strike Israel.''

Dinitz, director of the non-profit agency authorized by the Israeli government to absorb immigrants into Israel, made no direct reference to the U.S. government, which has raised the settlement issue with Israel. But Dinitz, a former Israeli ambassador in Washington and a former member of the Israeli Knesset, did accuse ''Israel's neighbors,'' meaning the Arab nations, of inflaming the issue.

''Our neighbors find it a convenient weapon with which to strike Israel,'' he said.

Dinitz said that approximately 18,200 Soviet Jews came directly to Israel in January and February of this year.

Of those, he said, 135 chose to settle in the occupied West Bank and another 1,100 found housing in Jerusalem. Israeli statistics do not distinguish between East and West Jerusalem.

President Bush raised a political storm in Israel when he said 10 days ago that it is U.S. policy to oppose further Jewish settlements in the occupied territories and East Jerusalem, which were both taken over by the Israelis in 1967.

Dinitz said that the Bush statement about settling in East Jerusalem was not the cause of the Israeli political crisis, as some Israeli and American commentators have said. Dinitz said that there was sufficient political tension within the Israeli political structure to cause the split and it was not necessary to seek an external cause for the crisis.

He was more directly critical of a statement by Secretary of State James Baker, who said that the administration would oppose a Senate bill for $400 million in housing loan guarantees for Israel unless the Israeli government would guarantee no further expansion of civilian settlements in the occupied territories.

The Israeli government had said that none of the loans would be made on housing in the territories, but Baker said that the United States was concerned about the ''fungibility question,'' meaning that any money sent to Israel would free other funds that could be used to finance expansion of the settlements.

Dinitz said, ''There is no honest way that the Israeli government could guarantee that. ... It's an absurdity, and something that was never raised until now.''

He estimated that each migrant family gets between $20,000 and $25,000 in the first year from the Israeli government to help them adjust to life in Israel. The total cost of the estimated migration will be about $3 billion over a four-year period. The loss of the American loan guarantee would not make the program impossible, but it would make it more difficult he said.

But he predicted that the flow of migrants will help prospects for peace in the Middle East.

Historically, he said, ''Israel has never negotiated from a position of weakness. But a stronger, more secure Israel would be more willing to make compromises in any peace settlement'' and the new population will help make the country economically strong.

He predicted that the flow of immigrants will lead to a 6 percent annual increase in the Israeli gross national product.

ALGIERS, ALGERIA (MARCH 15) UPI - Libyan leader Col. Moammar Gadhafi said Thursday his government was investigating whether West German intelligence services were responsible for a fire that destroyed most of a factory the United States suspects was used to make chemical weapons.

The state-run Libyan news agency JANA, which initially said there were ''an undetermined number of victims,'' later said nobody was hurt in the blaze that erupted Wednesday night at the facility at Rabta about 40 miles south of the Libyan capital Tripoli.

Diplomatic sources in Tripoli reached by telephone from Algiers also said they could not confirm any casualties.

Gadhafi said his government was investigating the fire and threatened to expel West German citizens.

''If the inquiries under way prove that the West German intelligence services are implicated in whatever act in the Libyan interior the West German economic presence will be eliminated from Libya,'' the Libyan strongman said in a brief statement on Tripoli Radio, ''and that state which is involved in espionage and sabotage in the interests of imperialism and Zionism will lose out.''

Gadhafi's remarks evidently were prompted by a West German statement Friday that Libya had produced 30 tons of mustard gas in a test run at the plant.

The mercurial Libyan leader said Libya would not conceal it if it were making ''weapons of destruction,'' but he said Libya would need another 20 years to make a chemical bomb on its own.

''I challenge any company or state to come to Libya to build a chemical factory,'' Gadhafi said. ''Then I would personally sign the contract without hesitation, and I would pay a thousand million.

''Our stand toward the Bonn government and its intelligence service depends on the investigations that have started now,'' Gadhafi said.

''Whatever the case we distinguish between the German government and its hireling intelligence service,'' Gadhafi said. Tripoli-based diplomats say East German advisers have long been prominent in the Libyan secret services.

In Bonn, a West German Foreign Ministry spokesman said any allegations his country was involved in the fire were ''totally unfounded.''

In Rome, the Italian news agency ANSA said Italian intelligence services were the first to report the fire to the United States and other allied governments, using contacts in Tunisia and other unspecified countries.

A caller claiming to speak for the ''National Wing of the Libyan Army,'' a previously unknown group, telephoned the offices of West German television in Cairo and claimed responsibility for starting the fire.

The caller, speaking in Arabic, said the organization was opposed to Gadhafi's regime and said the fire was started ''after we made sure the plant was producing poison gas.''

The caller also added, ''We hold (the) West German government responsible for building the plant.''

Arab diplomatic sources in Algiers told United Press International the fire was set by a commando team that traveled to Libya from neighboring Tunisia. The saboteurs were disguised as tourists, said the sources.

The Arab sources said they considered the raiders most likely were members of a Libyan opposition organization.

The Libyan news agency, in a statement in Algiers, earlier had accused the United States and Israel of setting the fire. Washington and Israeli officials denied involvement.

''Most of the factory has been destroyed,'' the Libyan agency said.

''Libyans accuse the Israelis and the United States,'' the agency said in its brief statement made in Algiers.

Some 2,000 Libyan demonstrators gathered outside the West German Embassy in Tripoli Thursday to protest the incident. The factory was built with the assistance of West German companies.

JANA said ''a large angry crowd marched on the embassy carrying banners that said 'Germans out,' 'Leave our homes you spies and liars,' 'You were the first to leak rumors,' and 'We do not have to deal with spies and agents.' Gadhafi frequently stage-manages demonstrations in Tripoli.

A West German Embassy spokesman in Bonn said that the Libyan Foreign Ministry summoned West German Ambassador Juergen Hellner but he was unable to leave the mission because of the angry demonstrators.

BOSTON (MARCH 15) UPI - The AIDS epidemic in the United States may be on the wane and the eventual number of cases may total just 200,000 - far below previous estimates, a controversial study showed Thursday.

Using a mathematical model of epidemics devised 150 years ago, two researchers calculated the number of new AIDS cases already has peaked and will drop to a relatively low level before the year 2000.

Indications are that ''incidence of new cases has started to decline and will continue downward,'' Dennis Bregman and Dr. Alexander Langmuir wrote in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

However, other AIDS investigators questioned the figures, noting government health officials recently estimated that 1 million Americans are now infected with the AIDS virus. If that is correct, AIDS cases by 2000 will ''substantially exceed'' 200,000, they said.

Bregman and Langmuir used a model known as William Farr's Law of Epidemics to predict that new U.S. AIDS cases among three groups considered most at risk - homosexual and bisexual men and intravenous drug users - will dip to 921 cases in 1995, about the same annual level as recorded in 1982. AIDS was first recognized in the United States in 1981.

According to Farr's Law, epidemics generally rise and fall in a bell-shaped curve, starting out with a small number of cases, rising steadily and then falling off at about the same rate.

In editorials accompanying the study, AIDS researchers at the federal Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta and Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore sharply questioned its conclusions and methods.

The CDC researchers noted Farr based his 19th century calculations on epidemics that spread at a constant rate among a ''closed'' group of individuals that did not grow in size.

They said it was ''inappropriate'' to apply Farr's law to AIDS because the disease spreads in a more complex manner than epidemics in Farr's time and it affects a population that is fluctuating, rather than constant.

Bregman, of the University of Southern California, acknowledged his calculations were bound to stir controversy. But he added: ''If we go out and tell the public that the AIDS epidemic is continuing when the figures indicate that it is not, a lot of credibility will be lost.

''Our message is that the epidemic appears to have crested,'' he said, adding it may be time for health agencies to take a new approach to dealing with AIDS.

Bregman and Langmuir, former chief epidemiologist at the CDC, said they believe AIDS will eventually evolve into a health problem that is persistent among a relatively small number of people.

''We're not claiming that AIDS is going away,'' Bregman added.

Using projections based on Farr's law, the researchers estimated that new AIDS cases among the high-risk groups peaked in 1988 at 21,978 and will decline to 18,363 in 1990. They predict a drop-off to 13,497 in 1991, with further declines to 4,715 in 1993 and 921 in 1995.

By the end of 1989, total reported cases in the United States had reached 117,781, according to the CDC. The growth in new cases had slowed from 58 percent in 1988 to 8 percent in 1989.

In a separate study appearing in the medical journal, public health officials in California calculated that AIDS cases in San Francisco alone could reach 17,022 by June 1993, with up to 12,767 deaths by that time.

The study estimated the average incubation period for AIDS among homosexuals and bisexuals infected with the virus that causes it to be 11 years - somewhat longer than earlier studies predicted.

(MARCH 15) UPI - Britain retaliated against Iraq today by recalling its ambassador after Iraq hanged a London-based journalist accused of espionage. British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd said he was ''shocked and repelled'' by the execution, which was carried out despite international appeals for clemency. The 31-year-old journalist was accused of spying for Israel when he entered an unauthorized military complex near Baghdad last September. He was investigating an explosion reported to have killed hundreds of people.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 15) UPI - Gen. Mikhail Moiseyev, chief of the Soviet General Staff, has been invited to testify before the House Armed Services Committee this spring, Chairman Les Aspin, D-Wis., said Thursday.

Aspin also announced that he was expanding contacts with the Defense and State Security Committee of the Supreme Soviet, the Soviet Legislature's counterpart to his committee.

''The more we know about the remarkable changes going on in the Soviet Union, the better we'll be at deciding how to buy the right stuff for America's defense,'' Aspin said in a statement announcing the invitation.

Rep. Bill Dickinson, R-Ala., the senior Republican on the committee, said he hopes Moiseyev accepts the invitation because ''the military forces of both countries are facing great change in the years ahead. Although the United States should base its military posture on Soviet capabilities and not intentions, meetings like this are always constructive in nature.''

Moiseyev plans to be in the United States in May. Marshal Sergey Akromeyev an adviser to Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev and Moiseyev's predecessor as chief of staff, testified before Aspin's committee last year.

Aspin said his panel and the fledgling Soviet Committee are exchanging information on both defense issues and on legislative procedure and practice. A delegation from the Soviet committee sat in on one of Aspin's hearings earlier this year and watched as members of the committee criticized the secretary of the Air Force and the Air Force chief of staff over key programs such as athe B-2 bomber.

The Armed Services Committee already has made one visit to the Soviet Union and hopes to make another this year or early next year.

NEW YORK (MARCH 15) UPI - A Wall Street bond trader and his wife may be spooked by the idea of living with ghosts floating around in ''Revolutionary-era'' garb but that doesn't give them the right to back out of a home purchase agreement, a judge ruled Thursday.

''Would you want to bump into George Washington in the middle of the night?'' asked William Stein, an attorney for the reluctant purchaser, Jeffrey Stambovsky of Manhattan.

In documents filed at state Supreme Court in Manhattan, one of the ghosts in the Nyack home was described by the seller, Helen Ackley, as an elderly man with a ''round, apple cheeked face... and piercing blue eyes under thick white eyebrows.''

Ackley also said the phantom was ''wearing a blue suit with ruffles at the wrist, knee britches, white stockings and black patent leather shoes with silver buckles.''

The Stambovskys, parents of a newborn child, lost their battle to win back a $32,500 down payment on the $650,000 gray Victorian home overlooking the Hudson River in Rockland County.

Justice Edward Lehner said in his ruling Ackley, whose writings about her poltergeist housemates were published in Reader's Digest, ''had no duty to reveal her beliefs with respect to supernatural inhabitants, nor to disclose the articles written about her home.''

He said the Stambovskys defaulted on their Aug. 15, 1989, contract by failing to complete the sale and are not entitled to the return of their down payment.

Ackley, a widowed grandmother, is baffled by the buyers' reluctance to set up house in the 18-room, other-worldly home. She claims they were informed by the realtor about the home's eerie reputation, but decided to back out of the deal only when problems surfaced with their mortgage.

''They went ahead with the ghost thing. I didn't understand that. I thought it was a little ridiculous,'' Ackley said in an telephone interview from her home.

Besides, said Ackley, the ghosts are entertaining, thoughtful and even generous.

''They left gifts. My two older granddaughters received rings. We had scoured the area shopping for baby rings and we couldn't find anything. Then we found a baby ring on the table in one bedroom. It fit perfectly. The same thing happened with the second child,'' said Ackley.

One day while Ackley was painting her living room, she spotted the ethereal ''older gentleman'' watching her, sitting in ''midair, smiling at me from in front of the cold fireplace ... He was the most cheerful and solid-looking little person I've ever seen.''

In a moment he vanished, she said.

''You just kind of blink your eyes and they're gone,'' Ackley said.

Two other ghosts were spotted by two of her four children, Ackley said. Throughout their teenage years, two of the children were woken for school each day by their beds shaking in the early morning. During school breaks, when they informed the ghosts they wanted to sleep late, the shaking stopped, she said.

Her daughter was frequently visited in her bedroom by the spirit of a girl in her early 20s who often wore a hooded cape. Once she appeared in a loose bathrobe, brushing her long blond hair, Ackley said.

Her son, William, was in his 20s and closing the basement door when he came ''eyeball to eyeball'' with the ghost of a young man wearing the uniform of the U.S. Navy from the Revolutionary War period, Ackley said.

''William said he was too young for his hair to be that white. William just closed and locked the door,'' she said.

Ackley said she knows little of the history of the home, which was built in 1900 on the grounds of an orchard.

Ackley said she has another buyer interested in the property. She said her anticipated move to Florida has nothing to do with fleeing poltergeists but rather escaping soaring Rockland County taxes.

(MARCH 15) UPI - Striking teachers in West Virginia rejected the governor's plan for ending the walkout, and today the state board of education agreed to seek a court ruling in the case. The board wants the court to force the teachers to return to the classrooms. The state board also agreed to seek other options if the strike continues, including allowing volunteers to teach classes. Governor Gaston Caperton has said teachers face losing their jobs if they don't return to work on Monday.

Facing a NO-confidence vote that could bring down his government, Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir today defended his actions as necessary to the future of the Jewish people. Likud and Labor party leaders are manuevering for support from ultra-orthodox religious parties that hold the key to the political future. If Shamir falls by a vote of NO confidence, his would be the first Israeli government to collapse under such a parliamentary procedure.

The Soviet Union and the Vatican today agreed to set up diplomatic contacts... one step short of full diplomatic relations. In announcements from Moscow and the Holy See, authorities indicate the official exchange of representatives of ambassador rank ''at a personal level.'' A statement from the Vatican recalled a meeting between Pope John Paul and Soviet leader Gorbachev last December when they agreed to ''give an official character to the contacts between the Holy See and the Soviet Union.''

WASHINGTON (MARCH 15) UPI - Members of the National AIDS Commission took a White House drug policy adviser to task Thursday for failing to back ''treatment on demand'' for drug users for addictions that put them at high risk for AIDS.

Appearing before the AIDS panel, Dr. Herbert Kleber, a deputy director of the Office of National Drug Control Policy, defended his recent statements that a treatment on demand system would be costly and impractical. Kleber estimated 10 percent of drug addiction treatment slots would have to be routinely kept open to make such a plan work.

The White House official said he favors quicker access to treatment, but he thinks requiring immediate help may just ''speed up the revolving door'' by allowing ''impulsive'' addicts to jump in and out of treatment programs.

Treatment on demand means addicts must receive treatment beginning the day they seek help.

The Bush administration has increased federal funding for drug treatment 70 percent since fiscal 1989 and this year allocated $100 million to help states reduce waiting lists of people seeking treatment, said Kleber, deputy director for demand reduction.

Dr. David Rogers, a Cornell University medical professor and co-chairman of the 15-member AIDS commission, said he thinks failure to adopt treatment on demand is a disgrace, especially in light of the strong link between drug use and AIDS, a deadly infection that destroys the body's disease-fighting immune system.

''I know of no other fatal disease in which we say, 'Go, away. We'll treat you later.' I consider intravenous drug use a fatal disease,'' Rogers said.

Several other members of the commission, created by Congress to oversee the nation's AIDS policy, echoed Rogers' concerns, saying it is cheaper to provide drug treatment on demand than to pay $20,000 a year or more to treat an AIDS patient.

The AIDS virus is spread by sexual or blood-to-blood contact, such as intravenous drug users sharing needles. An infected woman can also pass the virus to her baby.

Crack cocaine users also are considered high risks for AIDS infection because of the practice of exchanging sex for the drug.

Kleber said there are major differences between treating drug addiction and treating cancer, heart disease or other life-threatening disorders. The doctor, who has treated addicts for 20 years, said behavior plays a major role in drug addiction, many users do not really want to be cured, and there are no good treatments for some addictions, like cocaine.

But Rogers countered, ''By denying treatment on demand, we are saying, 'You are bad people and I'm not going to treat you.' I don't do that with lung cancer patients and we don't really know how to treat that.'' He noted the majority of lung cancer cases are linked to a behavior - smoking.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 15) UPI - A three-day nationwide crackdown on child labor law violators uncovered 7,000 children working illegally at more than 40 percent of the businesses investigated, Labor Department officials announced Thursday.

The officials said their ''conservative'' estimate was that $1.8 million in fines would be assessed against the 1,400 companies found to be breaking the law during ''Operation Child Watch.'' None of the companies were named.

Among the violations were the employment of nearly 200 children under age 14 and the use of youngsters to operate hazardous machinery - including one case in which a 16-year-old working illegally suffered two crushed fingers.

In announcing the operation, Labor Secretary Elizabeth Dole warned that increasing numbers of businesses might consider hiring children because of labor shortages developing in some sections of the country and pledged that her department would not tolerate such practices.

''Through 'Operation Child Watch' I want to deliver a clear message,'' Dole told a news conference. ''The cop is on the beat. Violators, whether motivated by greed or ignorance, will not be tolerated.''

The announcement came one day before the House subcommittee on employment and housing was to examine enforcement of child labor laws and sparked criticism that the department lacks the resources to do a good job.

''What is clear from the sweeps is that there is a desperate need for more inspectors,'' said Rep. Tom Lantos, D-Calif., chairman of the panel, who said the operation uncovered nearly as many violations as were found in all 1989.

Lantos also criticized the department for not identifying the companies that broke the law and promised to do so himself at his hearing Friday's, saying adverse publicity is a potent weapon in discouraging violations.

John Zalusky of the AFL-CIO said Dole's effort ''is not sustainable'' because the department's 953 investigators have been given additional responsibilities during the 1980s and he predicted child labor law violations will increase.

Zalusky agreed that violators should be identified, and called on the department to use its powers to seek criminal penalties.

''I think that would be a real deterrent,'' he said. ''Word would certainly get around the community.''

William Brooks, the department's assistant secretary for labor standards, said the companies found in violation were not identified because their cases were still open. He acknowledged some companies might never be named if they entered into consent agreements.

''I think that goes beyond our responsibility,'' Brooks said of releasing names. ''I don't think we should come out with a laundry list.''

Dole also said she was yet prepared to ask for additional funds for enforcement. She said the task at hand was to ''maximize those resources that we have right now'' and see if they are sufficient.

More than 500 investigators took part in the crackdown in all 50 states, Washington, D.C., and Puerto Rico, which ended Wednesday night.

About 3,400 businesses known to employ large numbers of young people were examined. Violations were found at 1,400 businesses, involving 7,000 minors, said William Brooks, the department's assistant secretary for labor standards.

Most of the violations involved 14- and 15-year-olds working too many hours or too late at night, usually at service jobs in businesses like fast-food restaurants. One restaurant employed 150 children illegally, Brooks said.

He said 900 youths, usually 16- and 17-year-olds, were found performing hazardous jobs such as operating power-driven meat slicing machinery or driving moter vehicles - including the child whose fingers were crushed when a load shifted on the back of a truck on which he was working on illegally.

The investigators found 198 youths under age 14 who were employed. Officials said they did not know the age of the youngest child found to be working.

Dole said the sweep was part of a continuing effort to enforce child-labor laws. Other measures taken recently include increasing fines for violators and a suit filed against Burger King in Miami, alleging the company allowed children to work too many hours and to operate power-driven meat slicers.

Analysis By: Vernon Scott

HOLLYWOOD (MARCH 15) UPI - The annual Academy Awards is the most smoothly orchestrated event in all of show business. While the two-to-three hour TV extravaganza may fall short as entertainment, the build-up to it is better than for the annual Super Bowl which, by the way, regularly beats the Oscars in the ratings.

Oscar publicity and speculation begins every December when various polls are published by critics and others selecting what they think are the best pictures and performances of the year. Moviegoers also begin debating the merits of their favorite films at year's end and word-of-mouth spins the turnstiles.

Then, come January, the muscled public relations firm of Ruder Finn - with offices in Los Angeles, New York, Chicago, and Washington - begins its silken campaign to focus entertainment writers and reporters on the Oscar show. Remember, this is when the show - which this year falls on March 26 - is still three months away.

Working hand-in-hand with the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, Ruder Finn announces the producer of the Oscar presentations - this year Gil Cates.

Then, every day or two, new announcements trickle out to the increasingly thirsty entertainment media:

Jan. 2 - It is announced that Billy Crystal will serve as host.
Jan. 3 - It is announced that Ray Aghayan will costume the entertainers.
Jan. 8 - It is announced that 217 films qualify for Oscars.
Jan. 9 - It is announced that Paula Abdul will choreograph the show.
Jan. 9 - The writing staff for the Oscar show is announced.
Jan. 19 - It is announced that balloting has begun.
Jan. 22 - It is announced that Geena Davis will announce the nominees.

Thereafter a veritable Niagara of big-name stars are announced, one or two at a time, who will participate in the show as entertainers or presenters. The academy likes to invite as many previous Oscar winners as possible to take part in the show. But the producers are also aware that fresh, young, popular faces are vital to capturing a big TV audience and holding its interest. So they seek a balance of grand old names and exciting new ones.

Bob Hope and Johnny Carson, two of the most popular and durable emcees, long ago gave way to Chevy Chase and now Billy Crystal. The academy still loves Bob and Johnny, but show biz is show biz.

For the same reason, Steven Spielberg - whose films have sold more tickets than any others - is currently the most popular director-producer. He, of course, will participate this year, it was announced. Making his debut on the Oscar show will be producer George Lucas, whose "Star Wars" trilogy and "Indiana Jones" films have made him a superstar.

The beloved oldtimer contingent on this year's show includes Gregory Peck, Charlton Heston, Walter Matthau, Jack Lemmon. All are one-time Oscar-winners for best actor.

Then there is a middle group, neither young nor old, for film buffs in their middle years - Jane Fonda, Robert DeNiro, Warren Beatty and Jack Nicholson - all Oscar holders.

Younger stars appearing as presenters this year are Tom Hanks, Glenn Close, Mel Gibson, Kevin Kline, Geena Davis, Rachel Ward, Bryan Brown, Jessica Lange, Anjelica Huston, Dan Aykroyd and Melanie Griffith.

Nearly all of the participants this year have either won Oscars or have received nominations for one. A special group of presenters usually consists of comedians. This year the funnymen will be Steve Martin, John Candy, and Rick Moranis.

The academy and Ruder Finn keep the Oscar pot boiling with announcements of balloting and closing dates and little sidebars such as the news that all four winners of last year's acting Oscars will be presenters this year:

Best actress Jodie Foster will present the award to this year's best actor. DeNiro will announce the best actress, Kline will present the best supporting actress and Davis the best supporting actor.

It is announced that 100 Oscar statuettes are being cast for this year's awards - although there are only 23 regular categories. This year as a special fillip, the Oscar show will include live (by satellite) segments from Moscow, Buenos Aires, London, and Sydney.

Then there is the Oscar nominees luncheon, usually held two weeks before the Big Show, honoring all the nominees who are wined and dined and then photographed en masse.

The crescendo builds as newspaper and magazine stories and dozens of radio and TV shows devote themselves to predictions. Then, POW, it's Oscar night. Then, ho hum, it's July and most people can't remember who won what.

BEIRUT, LEBANON (MARCH 15) UPI - The captors of three American hostages threatened Thursday to execute them unless the United States meets their demands and vowed to attack airports and airlines involved in transporting Soviet Jews to Israel.

The Islamic Jihad for the Liberation of Palestine expressed outrage over the increased migration of Soviet Jews to Israel but did not spell out its demands in a statement given to the An-Nahar newspaper.

In the past, the group has called for freeing about 400 Arabs imprisoned in Israel.

''We will start to undertake adequate measures to prevent the arrival of the Soviets,'' the group said, referring to the immigration of thousands of Soviet Jews to Israel. ''All airports, airlines, its offices and airplanes will become our direct targets.

''This is an ultimatum and a threat at present addressed to every one to back off from future involvement'' in Soviet Jewish immigration to Israel, the groupwarned.

The group did not mention a time frame for meeting its demands.

Attached to the handwritten, two-page statement in Arabic delivered to the independent newspaper was a Polaroid photograph of hostage Alann Steen, 51 who appeared to have lost weight during his captivity.

The bearded Steen, wearing a light yellow T-shirt, appeared defeated. He stood in front of a wall in a dimly lighted room.

The group also holds Jesse Turner, 41, and Robert Polhill, 54.

All three Americans were professors who were snatched from the campus of the American-affiliated Beirut University College by men disguised as police Jan. 24, 1987.

The group had demanded in the past that Israel release some 400 Arabs jailed in Israel on charges of agitating the Palestinian uprising in the Israeli occupied territory of the West Bank and Gaza strip.

The group dennounced recent reported behind-the-scenes efforts to try to gain freedom for the hostages.

''We call on those who were concerned with the movements (of the hostages) to stop their interference in this issue because we are holding spies plotting against our people and they will be executed if the American adminstration did not meet our demands,'' the group said.

''We announce that the issue will not be solved except within the framework of exchanging (hostages for prisoners),'' it said.

MOSCOW (MARCH 15) UPI - Firebrand lawmaker Boris Yeltsin attended only one day of the Congress of People's Deputies this week because he was home resting after a flareup of his arrhythmic heart condition, an aide said Thursday.

Vladimir Mezentsev, an aide to the Inter-Regional Deputies' Group of which Yeltsin is a co-chairman, denied reports in the Western media that Yeltsin had suffered a heart attack.

''He didn't have a heart attack,'' Mezentsev told United Press International. ''He just had heart trouble - arrhythmia.''

Mezentsev said that Yeltsin's arrhythmia, or occasional irregular heartbeat, was likely aggravated by his recent European tour to promote his autobiography ''Against the Grain.''

''He was in seven countries in five days on his book tour,'' Mezentsev said. ''When he returned to Moscow (Sunday), he had no time to rest and went straight to the Soviet Communist Party plenum.''

Yeltsin went to the Congress on its opening day Monday but did not attend the rest of the sessions. The Congress ended Thursday after creating a new presidential system and electing Mikhail Gorbachev to the strengthened executive post.

''His heart felt bad,'' Mezentsev said. ''There is nothing seriously wrong. He needs to rest - he is a person, too. He leads a very active life.''

Yeltsin's roller-coaster career and controversial exploits over the past several years have made him the second most famous politician in the Soviet Union, after Gorbachev.

The bloc of radical lawmakers he helped to establish last year has become the main parliamentary opposition, and Yeltsin announced last month he would seek the influential presidency of the dominant Russian republic.

''Today he is still at home,'' Mezentsev said. ''I think he'll be up and about in the next few days.''

NEW YORK (MARCH 15) UPI - The dollar mostly declined Thursday in New York trading as a result of foreign exchange market movements created by expectations of a hike in Japan's central bank interest rate late this week.

Currency traders said the dollar initially moved up strongly against the yen, hitting 153 yen, after Bank of Japan Governor Yasushi Mieno, back from consultations with European monetary officials, demurred on whether he would move up his institution's official discount rate.

The market took this as further vacillation over the long-awaited hike in the rate from its present level of 4.25 percent. A rise in the rate, which banks pay on loans from central reserves, is needed to defend the yen.

Economist James Merrill of McCarthy Crisanti & Maffei Inc. reported market "disappointment earlier ... when Mieno came out and seemed very calm about present rates." But the yen later firmed on a rumor the Bank of Japan would shortly lift the rate by a strong 1.25 percentage points.

Late in the New York trading session, the dollar was quoted at 1.6975 German marks, down from 1.71 marks Wednesday. The U.S. currency was changing hands at 152.20 Japanese yen, up slightly from 152.15 yen.

Chief trader Graham Beale of the Hongkong & Shanghai Banking Corp. said the deutsche mark strengthened on technical factors related to the suspense over the Japanese rate hike. He said there had been a large movement from marks to yen on the expectation the Bank of Japan would act.

"That was not forthcoming," said Beale, "so the (deutsche mark) positions unwound (into yen) were reinstated (in marks) towards the end of Far East trading." That large-scale repurchase of marks reinforced the German currency and pushed the dollar off its recent highs, he said.

Late prices also reflected the squaring up of positions by traders awaiting a full slate of U.S. economic statistics Friday, including wholesale inflation data, housing starts and industrial performance figures.

Merrill expected "fairly strong" industrial data and a "modest" rise in the U.S. producer price index, tending to reinforce market conviction that the Federal Reserve Board will hold interest rates steady.

Other dollar rates: 1.5170 Swiss francs, off from 1.5240; 5.7345 French francs, down from 5.7750; and 1,253.25 Italian lire, off from 1,262. The British pound moved up to $1.6225 from $1.6095.

In Europe the dollar closed mixed against the main currencies. It was lower in Frankfurt at 1.7055 German marks against 1.7135 Wednesday, but it gained in Zurich at 1.5260 Swiss francs against 1.5250.

The U.S. unit was down in Paris, Brussels and Milan to 5.7830 French francs compared with 5.7920, 35.52 Belgian francs against 35.56, and 1,263.10 lire against 1,264.15 at the previous day's close. In London, the pound rose to $1.6175 against $1.6085.

In Tokyo trading earlier, the dollar again moved up on the Japanese yen amid speculation the Bank of Japan might soon raise its key rate. The U.S. unit closed at 152.47 yen against 152.20 yen Wednesday.

Republic National Bank in New York closed cash gold lower at $398.25 an ounce, unchanged from Wednesday. The New York Commodity Exchange settled gold at $398.10 an ounce, up from $398. In Zurich, gold fell to $398.50 an ounce from $399 Wednesday. London gold fell to $398.25 an ounce from $399.50.

Republic closed cash silver at $5.10 an ounce, up from $5.095. Comex spot silver declined to $5.079 an ounce from $5.081. Zurich silver was unchanged at $5.10 an ounce, while London silver rose to $5.11 an ounce from $5.10.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 15) UPI - The first FBI agent to interview John Poindexter after the Iran-Contra scandal erupted in late 1986 testified Thursday that Poindexter tried to shift the blame to Oliver North, saying ''he was up to something.''

The FBI agent, Ellen Glasser, was one of two agents who drove to Poindexter's home on Nov. 28, 1986, searched his safe and then began questioning the Navy rear admiral for 15 minutes.

Poindexter had resigned as Ronald Reagan's national security director three days earlier; North was fired from the National Security Council at the same time.

Glasser testified that she asked Poindexter if he knew anything about the diversion of Iran arms profits to the Nicaraguan Contras.

''He said Oliver North was committed to the Contra program and he was up to something,'' Glasser testified.

She said Poindexter also replied: ''I discussed it with him regularly and could have stopped Ollie.''

The FBI agent said she asked Poindexter if others could have been assisting North and, ''He stated that North could do something like this on his own.''

Glasser also said she showed Poindexter a series of false White House chronologies about U.S. contacts with Iran and asked if he recognized them. He did, she said.

Glasser asked Poindexter if the chronologies were accurate and ''he replied that they were,'' she testified.

During the Poindexter trial, North testified that the chronologies were altered at the orders of Robert McFarlane, a former national security adviser who was not in the government at the time but was assisting the White House in the hostage negotiations.

North said he forwarded the false chronologies to Poindexter after they had been changed. Various drafts of the chronologies have been introduced into evidence bearing handwritten notations by Poindexter.

Glasser also testified about almost 6,000 messages that were deleted from Poindexter and North's computer files as the scandal erupted in November 1986 with the disclosure that the United States secretly sold missiles to Iran as part of a deal designed to free U.S. hostages in the Middle East. Some of the profits then were diverted to the Contras.

Glasser testified that her review of White House computer records showed that Poindexter ''logged on'' to an electronic communications system at 4:30 a.m. on Nov. 24, 1986. By 9:30 a.m. the same day, Poindexter had deleted all 5,012 messages, Glasser testified.

She testified that Poindexter normally kept printouts of his computer messages, filed by month, but ''this massive deletion only occurred in late October 1986.''

Under cross-examination, Glasser said the agents went to Poindexter's house because ''we were there conducting a criminal investigation.'' Pressed further, she said, ''I think it was safe to say we were looking at him as a potential criminal suspect.''

U.S. District Judge Harold Greene questioned Glasser sharply on why the FBI agents did not read Poindexter his rights as a suspect. She said they did not because Poindexter ''was not in custody.''

Poindexter, 53, a former national security adviser, is accused of five felony counts of lying to Congress and obstructing its investigation of the scandal.

During a pre-trial hearing, North had described Poindexter as the only person ''who didn't hang Ollie out to dry.'' North testified for four days during the Poindexter trial and tried hard to avoid implicating his former boss in any criminal activity.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 15) UPI - A bipartisan congressional delegation asked President Bush on Thursday to encourage democratic change in South Africa with financial support for opposition groups preparing for negotiations with the government.

Rep. William Gray, D-Pa., said Bush was told during a White House meeting that U.S. aid could help ensure that blacks in South Africa are ''prepared to really negotiate'' when talks begin with the white minority government.

''The president, I think, responded favorably,'' Gray, who led a group of House members on a recent trip to South Africa, later told reporters. ''He acknowledged that there was a need. But exactly a definite commitment? No, not at this time.''

The South African government is poised to begin negotiations this year with the African National Congress, the opposition group recently legalized after 30 years in exile, on ending the country's racial conflict.

The release last month of jailed ANC leader Nelson Mandela, signaling a possible move toward national reconciliation, has led to a reassessment of U.S. policy rooted in pressure on South Africa to end apartheid.

Although South Africa has not yet met terms set by Congress for the repeal of U.S. economic sanctions, some administration officials believe it could do so by the time negotiations on a multiracial political system commence.

In the interim, Gray and other members of his delegation underscored the need to ensure that opposition groups have political strength at the bargaining table.

Rep. Stephen Solarz, D-N.Y., suggested $10 million as ''a ballpark'' estimate of what the United States could allocate to the ANC and other groups to develop new political institutions ''necessary to establish an enduring democracy in South Africa.''

With those groups facing ''the daunting task of developing a political organization'' in a country where the black majority has enjoyed few political rights, Solarz likened the situation to aid for other emergent democracies.

''We think just as we've taken initiatives like this for Nicaragua, for Poland, for Chile and other countries, the time has now come for us to act in a similar fashion in South Africa as well,'' he said.

Solarz suggested aid could be provided through the National Endowment for Democracy, which Congress created to support fledgling democratic movements and electoral processes abroad.

The assistance proposed by Solarz would have no bearing on the U.S. sanctions against South Africa, which by law must remain in place until the release of all political prisoners, repeal of the state of emergency and certain apartheid laws, and the start of formal talks on power-sharing.

Bush, who opposed the sanctions as vice president, has agreed to hold to those conditions. Gray, chief architect of the sanctions Congress enacted over President Reagan's veto, credited Bush with seeking ''bipartisan unity'' in the U.S. policy toward South Africa.

LOS ANGELES (MARCH 15) UPI - District Attorney Ira Reiner on Thursday sent letters to more than 150 employees of Lincoln Savings and Loan, asking them to voluntarily assist his office in its criminal investigation of the thrift's collapse.

Some of the letters were also sent to employees of Lincoln's parent company, American Continental Corp.

The letters ask the employees to contact Reiner's investigators if they have any information regarding the marketing and sale of Lincoln's junk bonds.

Reiner spokesman Mike Botula said investigators are trying to gather as much information about the sale of the junk bonds before a special grand jury is impaneled next month to hear testimony in the probe.

Reiner said the letters were sent to lower-level and middle-level employees, none of whom were targeted for possible prosecution in the case.

''We're not interested in prosecuting them,'' Reiner said. ''We're looking for the decision makers. We want to get to the officers and the executives.''

He said that by responding to his letter, the low-level and mid-level employees will ''eliminate'' any chance of being prosecuted.

''We understand they were under great pressure from their employers to do certain things,'' Reiner said. He did not elaborate.

He said the letter was sent out in part because none of those employees have yet come forward with information about the case.

Reiner and Sacramento County District Attorney Steve White, at the request of state Attorney General John Van de Kamp, agreed in December to take over the Lincoln investigation. They are looking into the financial collapse of Lincoln in which some investors lost their life savings by buying worthless junk bonds.

NEW YORK (MARCH 15) UPI - Stocks closed higher in lightly moderate trading Thursday as the market braced itself for a flurry of economic reports Friday and for quarterly "triple-witching hour" expirations.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which rose 13.29 Wednesday, gained 7.88 to close at 2695.72, just shy of the key 2700 level. The blue-chip indicator passed 2700 after midday and was up more than 20 points at midafternoon.

Among broader market gauges, the New York Stock Exchange composite index rose 0.52 to 186.20 and Standard & Poor's 500-stock index gained 1.20 to close at 338.07. The price of an average share gained ten cents.

Advances led declines 741-670 among the 1,943 issues crossing the NYSE tape. Big Board volume totaled 144,410,000 shares, compared with 145,060,000 shares traded Wednesday.

Analysts attributed the modest gains to a firm bond market, where prices were little changed in late trading, and to a bout of computerized program buying, used to profit on price spreads between stocks and stock-index futures.

Program buying in the early afternoon pushed prices up from mixed levels and on to their session highs. Blue-chip stocks set the pace, as they did in Wednesday's advance.

Late in the day, though, prices eased and trading slowed with many investors staying on the sidelines before Friday's round of economic reports and "triple-witching hour" expirations of stock-index futures and options as well as options on individual stocks.

Analysts said that unless there are some surprises in the economic data, they expect expiration-related trading, which causes volume to swell, to be absorbed by the market easily.

The reports scheduled for release Friday are February housing starts, producer prices, industrial production and capacity utilization. The producer price index report is expected to generate the most interest, analysts said. The index is expected to be unchanged from January, when it jumped 1.8 percent, because of the elimination of weather-related gains in food and energy prices from the cold spell earlier this winter, which boosted the overall index.

"The market is showing some decent underlying strength, said Alfred Goldman, market strategist at A.G. Edwards and Sons Inc. in St. Louis. "We were up today despite some profit taking in the bond market.

"Some people have been wasting their time for the past month belittling the rally but forgetting that it's a rally," he went on. "Granted, volume hasn't been as heavy and breadth not as strong as we'd like. It hasn't been perfect, but it's not a perfect world," said Goldman.

He said the light volume and narrowly based gains reflect the uncertain outlook for the economy, interest rates and the dollar. "You don't get a rose garden market with that kind of fundamental background, but I wouldn't knock it, I'd enjoy it," he said.

On the trading floor, Unisys, the subject of frequent takeover speculation was the most active issue, unchanged at 16 5/8 after rising sharply Wednesday.

Browning-Ferris Industries followed, down 1 3/4 to 33 3/4 after what were said to be negative comments from an analyst related to violations of hazardous waste regulations by one of its units. General Electric was third, up 1/4 to 63 1/4.

Among the blue chips, AT&T was unchanged at 41 after disclosing Thursday that it has begun negotiating with two telecommunications unions about early retirement incentives to reduce its work force by 20,000 people this year. IBM rose 3/4 to 107, Merck added 3/4 to 69, Westinghouse climbed one to 74 5/8, and Alcoa gained one to 66.

Elsewhere, Mortgage and Realty Trust, which did not open for trading until late afternoon, lost half its value, plummeting 6 3/8 to 6 3/8 after failing to make a payment on some medium-term notes. It is said to be in talks with lenders on funding needs.

Xtra, which put itself in play a few weeks ago, sank 4 1/8 to 26 1/4 after saying it has suspended efforts to sell the company at this time.

MCA, which has agreed to acquire Geffen Records, extended its sharp decline, tumbling 2 1/8 to 52 3/8. Under the buyout agreement, MCA will issue one million shares of a new series of convertible preferred stock.

And AMP jumped 1 3/8 to 49 1/8 after reportedly saying it expects first-quarter profits to top those of a year ago.

Volume of NYSE-listed issues, including trades in stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 170,328,420 shares, compared with 172,899,620 shares traded in the previous session.

Prices closed higher in moderate trading on the American Stock Exchange. The Amex Market Value index rose 0.90 to close at 362.27. The price of an average share was up three cents. Advances led declines 271-233 among the 766 issues traded. Composite volume totaled 15,879,500 shares, compared with 15,223,070 traded Wednesday. Amdahl led the Amex issues, off 3/8 to

The National Association of Securities Dealers composite index rose 1.91 to 438.06.

NEW YORK (MARCH 15) UPI - Assets of the nation's 501 money market mutual funds increased $60.3 million to $390.77 billion for the week ended Wednesday, the Washington-based Investment Company Institute reported Thursday.

The institute said broker-dealer fund assets increased $133.3 million to $166.14 billion, assets of general purpose funds increased $716.5 million to $133.62 billion and institutional fund assets decreased $789.5 million to $91.01 billion.

The Investment Company Institute, a national association of the American investment company industry, reports the assets of money market funds to the Federal Reserve Board each week.

The Donoghue Organization of Holliston, Mass., said average 7-day simple yields on money market funds were up to 7.65 percent from 7.63, while 30-day simple yields were unchanged at 7.64 percent. The average maturity of fund portfolios rose to 43 days.

The Bank Rate Monitor of North Palm Beach, Fla., reported that rates at competing banks and savings and loan institutions mostly rose in the latest week.

The Monitor's index of average rates: money market deposit accounts 6.07 percent, down from 6.08; Super-Now accounts 5.01 percent, unchanged; 6-month certificates of deposit, 7.67 percent, up from 7.66; 1-year CDs 7.74 percent, up from 7.72; 2 1/2-year CDs 7.72 percent, up from 7.71; and 5-year CDs, 7.78 percent, up from 7.76.

The average rate for a 1-year adjustable rate mortgage was 8.57 percent, up from 8.51.

The average rate on a 15-year, fixed-rate mortgage rose to 9.94 percent from 9.89 and the average rate on a 30-year, fixed-rate mortgage rose to 10.13 percent from 10.09.

The average rate for a 4-year automobile loan rose to 12.19 percent from 12.18.

(MARCH 15) UPI - Life is beginning to return to normal in Haiti after the fall of dictator Prosper Avril, who went into exile in Florida on Monday. Interim President Ertha Pascal-Trouillot held talks with a variety of groups today in an effort to form a Cabinet. In Port-au-Prince, most businesses and industry resumed operations. But some violence persists. Radio Haiti Inter says two people were killed in sporadic violence in the capital during the night.

Poland is welcoming the decision allowing it to take part in talks on German unification. A spokeswoman for Poland's Solidarity government calls it ''the first great victory of independent Polish diplomacy.'' The German unity talks began yesterday in Bonn, and six nations participating agreed to invite Poland to join in when matters affecting its borders are discussed. Poland wants to ensure that a united Germany will guarantee the current border between East Germany and Poland.

The Food and Drug Administration is banning the use of sulfites on fresh potatoes because they can cause allergic reactions. The ban mainly affects restaurants and restaurant suppliers, which use sulfites to keep peeled potatoes white and firm. Officials say the F-D-A has received nearly one-thousand complaints of adverse reactions to sulfites since 1985. Most were mild, but officials say there have been four deaths.

NEW YORK (MARCH 15) UPI - The narrow definition of the nation's basic money supply known as M1 rose $2.0 billion in the latest reporting week, while the broader M2 and M3 aggregates also grew, the Federal Reserve Board said Thursday.

M2 gained $4.9 billion and M3 rose $2.1 billion.

M1, which is made up of cash, checking accounts and NOW accounts - money that is available for immediate spending - rose to a seasonally adjusted average of $807.0 billion in the week ended March 5 from a revised $805.0 billion the week before.

For the latest 13 weeks, M1 averaged $797.6 billion, a 5.2 percent rate of increase from the previous 13 weeks, the Fed reported.

The broader M2 money measure averaged an estimated $3,269.3 billion in the latest week, up from a revised $3,264.4 billion. M2 includes M1 plus passbook savings, small time deposits including money-market deposit accounts, consumer money-market mutual funds and certain other short-term assets.

M3, which includes M2 plus large time deposits, repurchase agreements longer than one day at banks and thrifts and institutional money market funds, averaged $4,074.7 billion in the latest week, up from a revised $4,072.6 billion, the Fed said.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 15) UPI - President Bush said Thursday he is confident Mikhail Gorbachev will use his new powers as Soviet president to continue reforms, not to become a dictator.

Bush also sent Gorbachev a congratulatory letter on his election Wednesday as president, White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said.

Speaking to a members of the board of directors of the National Newspaper Association, Bush was asked whether there is any danger Gorbachev will use his expanded powers to become a dictator.

''I think there's less danger today (of a Soviet strongman emerging) because they've come out of a totalitarianism of the past,'' the president said. ''They've given their president new powers, but I don't see it as a threat. Certainly not at this juncture in history.''

''We support perestroika and reform,'' said Bush, ''and we want to see Gorbachev succeed. I'm convinced one of the reasons we've had peaceful change is the approach Gorbachev brought to bear on the problem.''

''I think he is a reasonable man,'' said Bush of Gorbachev.

Fitzwater said that in his letter, Bush wished Gorbachev well ''as he leads the Soviet Union into the next stage of perestroika and democratization.''

''The president looks forward to the forthcoming summit in June as an opportunity to broaden ... cooperation between our two countries,'' the spokesman added.

Fitzwater also disclosed that West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl telephoned Bush on Thursday morning to discuss the agreement reached Wednesday by the four allied powers and the two Germanys to permit Poland to participate in discussions regarding the borders of a reunified Germany.

Fitzwater said Kohl wanted to be sure that Bush was aware of the decision to permit Poland to join in the talks and ''supported it.''

He noted that Bush has stressed the ''inviolability'' of the post-World War II Polish borders, which include areas Germany had ruled in the past.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 15) UPI - The government could encourage farmers to adopt soil- and water-conserving practices by eliminating biases in the farm program, but that step will not guarantee success for alternative agriculture, a report said Thursday.

''Farmers identified a great many barriers that make it difficult to adopt alternative agriculture,'' the General Accounting Office said in the report.

Alternative agriculture is a catch-all title given to practices that can range from crop rotation and less use of chemical fertilizers and pesticides to making use of natural predators to control insects and weeds.

Interest in alternative techniques has blossomed amid concern about chemical residues in food, preventing groundwater contamination and the costs of current production systems.

Some environmental groups want the farm policy law written this year to include language that would encourage protection of resources and further safeguards for the food supply.

The GAO report agreed with arguments that farm policies now create barriers to adoption of some alternative techniques. However, it said farmers are influenced by many other factors, such as market prices, in deciding which crops to grow and which tillage methods to use.

It concluded that a more flexibile farm program would give farmers the opportunity to change their methods, but ''a different farm program may not be sufficient by itself to bring adoption of alternative agriculture.''

The GAO, the investigative arm of Congress, said its survey of 74 farmers found they believed the alternative methods ''may require greater management skills and cause greater weed problems, lower yields and lower profits.''

''The lack of farm labor and the opinion that their work loan may increase also appeared to discourage farmers from embracing alternative practices '' the report said.

The report was presented at a House Agriculture subcommittee hearing on conservation practices.

Mike Moeller, deputy Texas agriculture commissioner, made a similar point in his prepared testimony.

''Sustainable agriculture won't sweep the nation simply because conservationists and environmentalists sing its praises,'' he said. ''Sustainable agriculture will catch on only if it helps farmers increase their earnings.''

Agriculture Department officials described research projects aimed at developing farming methods that would reduce the risk of pesticides and fertilizers leaching into water supplies.

According to one estimate, up to one-third of the counties in the United States contain soil that could be susceptible to leaching.

Rep. Fred Grandy, R-Iowa, urged the department to put more effort into working with state agencies to prevent groundwater contamination.

Rep. Jim Ross Lightfoot, R-Iowa, suggested small-size wetlands, such as those less than 1 acre in size, should be exempted from programs to restore wetlands.

BOSTON (MARCH 15) UPI - The cause of a potentially fatal disorder linked to the food supplement L-tryptophan may not be a contaminant, but the way some people's bodies react to the substance, researchers said Thursday.

A study of seven people who developed a rare blood disorder while taking L-tryptophan suggests the problem stemmed from abnormal metabolism, rather than an unknown contaminant, according to medical investigators in Washington, D.C.

A team led by Dr. Daniel Clauw of Georgetown University said the muscle pain, fever, rashes and breathing difficulties the people experienced may have resulted from a build-up of blood components known as serotonin.

Clauw and his colleagues said that in these people, the L-tryptophan may have blocked the body's ability to metabolize serotonin, leading to the development of a disorder marked by a high white blood cell count.

It is still possible, however, that a contaminant in the formerly popular food supplement is responsible for the health problems that affected hundreds of L-tryptophan users in the past year, the researchers said in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

L-Tryptophan, an amino acid, was used in the United States for more than three decades as a nutrition supplement and a treatment for insomnia and depression before the Food and Drug Administration banned it last November because of many reports linking it to health problems.

At the time it was taken off the market, health officials suspected a chemical contaminant was responsible for illnesses that have so far affected 1,369 Americans and resulted in 19 deaths, according to figures compiled by the federal Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

But no contaminant has been found, either in the over-the-counter products previously sold under more than a dozen labels or in the raw material produced by six Japanese companies and shipped to the United States.

Dr. Leslie Swygert, an epidemiologist at the CDC, said if metabolism plays a role in the development of L-tryptophan-related disorders, it may do so in combination with a contaminant.

''We still believe that some change took place in 1989,'' she said, since L-tryptophan ''had been marketed for decades and many patients had been taking large doses of it for years'' without developing previous problems.

If a still undetected contaminant got into the L-tryptophan, it could cause changes in the way some - but not all - people's bodies were able to absorb and use the substance, she said.

Swygert said the L-tryptophan phenomenon has so far stymied researchers because no one has developed a way to induce in laboratory animals the same L-tryptophan problems seen in humans.

''We have no animal models, and there are no other substances that we know of that cause this type of syndrome,'' she said, predicting that ''unless we get very lucky, it could take a long time to figure this out.''

The CDC is still receiving scattered reports of illnesses associated with L-tryptophan use, apparently because ''some people stockpiled it and continued to use it and some stores sold it until very recently,'' Swygert said.

Nevertheless, she said, there has been a dramatic drop in new cases of disorders associated with the supplement since the FDA ban.

In Washington, a trade association representing the nutritional supplement industry said the Georgetown study opened a new window on the L-tryptophan problem, but added that the presence of a contaminant ''still remains a very solid possibility.''

''We're saying this work is good and it adds to our body of knowledge, but it is still a very small study,'' said Katherine Smith, a spokeswoman for the Council for Responsible Nutrition. She said it is estimated that annual L-tryptophan sales topped $60 million before it was banned.

(MARCH 15) UPI - The White House says it has confirmed there was a fire at a Libyan plant suspected of making chemical weapons. Spokesman Marlin Fitzwater says damage at the plant was ''extensive'' but emphasized that U-S information on the incident was scarce. Fitzwater again denied that Washington had ''any involvement of any kind'' in the fire.

The Libyan news agency reports that Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi is hinting at West German involvement in the fire. Gadhafi, in a statement reported by JANA, says that if inquiries implicate West German intelligence services- quote- ''the West German economic presence will be eliminated.''

Britain's Prime Minister Thatcher reacted angrily today to Iraq's execution of a London-based journalist who had been accused of espionage. WASHINGTON (MARCH 15) UPI - The Food and Drug Administration warned parents Thursday against feeding soy-based beverages other than infant formulas to babies as a sole source of nutrition.

The agency said it was sending letters to manufacturers of soy drinks asking them to include label warnings against use as an infant formula.

The action came after the FDA learned of a 5-month-old infant in critical condition in Arkansas Children's Hospital in Little Rock after becoming severely malnourished from having been fed a soy drink since just after birth.

The infant's parents apparently erroneously believed a soy beverage sold in a health food store could be used as an infant formula, the FDA said.

''Soy-based drinks, sometimes improperly called 'soy milks,' may be consumed by children and adults as part of a balanced diet ... but they are not the same as soy-based infant formulas, and are not nutritionally complete,'' the agency said.

Following a similar incident in 1985, undercover FDA investigators found employees in stores, primarily health food stores, told customers soy beverages were suitable as infant formulas, the FDA said.

The FDA said it warned the owners and other responsible officials of each store that such misrepresentations were against the law and could cause harm infants.

The agency is seeking information about any other health problems stemming from the use of soy drinks as infant formula and any promotion of soy-based beverages as an infant formula.

There are soy-based beverages specifically designed for infants that are appropriate, the FDA said. But other such beverages lack necessary nutrients, it said.

CAPE CANAVERAL, FL. (MARCH 15) UPI - Engineers radioed commands to a stranded $150 million satellite Thursday to fire on-board rockets in a bid to boost the errant relay station into a higher, long-term storage orbit amid work to devise a salvage plan.

A spokesman for the International Telecommunications Satellite

Organization, owner of the Intelsat 6 spacecraft, said late Thursday preliminary results indicated the liquid-fueled rockets were firing as planned in a procedure expected to continue all night.

If all goes well, the satellite will be parked in a safe, circular orbit at an altitude of 150 miles sometime Friday, preventing an inadvertent re-entry into the atmosphere and giving engineers plenty of time to come up with a way to rescue the relay station.

The second stage of the satellite's Titan 3 rocket is expected to plunge back into the atmosphere as early as next Wednesday, but officials said most of the booster would burn up during re-entry and any debris that survives likely would fall into an ocean.

Intelsat engineers, meanwhile, are debating a variety of options to salvage the costly communications station, including the feasibility of a shuttle rescue mission. NASA issued a statement late Thursday indicating the agency would consider such a flight if the satellite is placed in a safe orbit.

''NASA has not been approached for assistance in rescuing the Intelsat spacecraft but it is following and is keenly interested in the results of this mission,'' the space agency said in a statement.

Should Intelsat succeed in raising the spacecraft to a more stable orbit, ''questions of planning for such a complex mission, crew training and modifications to the shuttle would have to be evaluated.'' Otherwise, it would be ''premature for NASA to make any judgment on recovery.''

NASA Administrator Richard Truly was briefed on the satellite problem Thursday, and many space agency observers viewed the official statement as a clear sign the agency would seriously consider such a rescue mission.

The Intelsat 6 satellite was stranded in a useless, lopsided orbit shortly after launch Wednesday when it failed to separate properly from the second stage of its Titan booster.

''The Intelsat 6 satellite currently is in a safe low-Earth orbit,'' said Intelsat spokesman Tony Trujillo. ''We have telemetry contact and are able to execute commands to the spacecraft. We are taking all steps necessary to place the satellite in a stable, higher orbit where it could remain indefinitely.''

The satellite currently is in an orbit with a high point of about 224 miles and a low point of just 104 miles. Trujillo said Intelsat managers want to maneuver the spacecraft into a 150-mile-high orbit.

While that will allow the satellite to orbit Earth safely for months to come, the spacecraft will be written off as a total failure if some way cannot be devised to boost it to its operational altitude of 22,300 miles above the equator.

U.S. Space Command in Colorado, which tracks objects in Earth orbit, conducted a radar analysis overnight Wednesday and predicted the satellite's 33-foot-long Titan 3 second stage couild fall back into the atmosphere as early as March 21.

A Space Command spokesman said Intelsat 6 would re-enter about four days later based on its current orbit, although that prediction will change once the spacecraft's altitude is raised.

The Intelsat 6 communications satellite was stranded in space Wednesday after it failed to separate from the Titan 3 second stage as planned 25 minutes after liftoff from veral Air Force Station.

The separation was required so the satellite's solid-fuel booster could fire to put the spacecraft in an elliptical orbit with a high point of more than 25,000 miles. The on-board liquid-fueled rockets then were to be used to circularize the orbit at an altitude of about 22,300 miles high.

After the separation maneuver failed, however, ground controllers ultimately radioed commands to the relay station that caused it to separate instead from its ''perigee kick motor,'' the solid-fuel rocket required to boost it toward its final orbit.

Intelsat released a statement Wednesday that said a variety of options was under study to save the satellite, including the possibility of a shuttle rescue flight.

NASA rescued or repaired four satellites during three pre-Challenger shuttle missions, but agency engineers generally were skeptical about the chances of such a flight for Intelsat 6 because of the shuttle's heavily booked flight schedule and given that the cost of such a mission would far exceed the cost of the satellite.

Intelsat 6 was the second in a series of five super-powerful communications satellites built by Hughes Aircraft Co. of El Segundo, Calif., under a contract valued at $700 million. The first was successfully launched last October by an Ariane 4 rocket.

(MARCH 15) UPI - World oil prices rose sharply Thursday in the wake of a shutdown of one of the pipelines delivering crude from the U.S. Gulf Coast to the Midwest to repair a leak.

The benchmark West Texas Intermediate crude for April delivery jumped 33 cents to end the day on the New York Mercantile Exchange at $20.38 a barrel after trading as low as $20.10 a barrel.

WTI gained 30 cents on the U.S. Gulf Coast cash market to $20.40 a barrel.

Unleaded gasoline for April delivery zoomed 2.09 cents to 57.94 cents a gallon on the Merc, while May delivery rose by the 2-cent limit set for that contract to 62.94 cents a gallon.

On the New York Harbor cash market, unleaded gasoline for prompt delivery rose 2.2 cents to 56.05 cents a gallon.

ARCO Pipeline Co., Independence, Kan., said it closed down one of the main pipelines delivering crude from Houston to its Cushing, Okla., distribution terminal to repair a leak.

ARCO spokesman Joe Killins said there would be no falloff in scheduled Midwest deliveries if the pipeline can be repaired in two to three days. It has been shut down since early Tuesday, he said.

Scheduled deliveries can be satisfied for up to three days by crude stored along the pipeline, Killins said.

He said the leak occurred at the pipeline's crossing of the Red River separating the states of Texas and Oklahoma.

The pipeline has a daily capacity of 50,000 barrels, which Killins called ''a small percentage of the overall movement of crude from Houston to Cushing.''

Bill Hinton of Stotler & Co. in New York said Thursday's sharp price increases resulted from a combination of factors: the shutdown of the pipeline, reports that Libya will reduce its crude output and a technical rebound to recent declines on the market.

''The market realized technical support for April crude at $20 a barrel and we bounced off of that,'' Hinton said.

Libyan oil minister Fawzi Shakshuki also was reported as saying that Libya was prepared to drop oil production by 300,000 barrels a day in remarks as he arrived for a meeting of the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries in Vienna, Hinton said.

Several OPEC officials have said in the last week that there would be no decisions regarding production limits made at the cartel's market monitoring committee of eight ministers, which starts Friday.

But, Hinton said, ''there are indications that there will be something more to the meeting than just eyewash. Apparently, there's going to be a lot of discussion about production.''

OPEC in November set a 22 million-barrel-a-day output ceiling, but because of cheating on quotas, mainly by Kuwait and the United Arab Emirates, the cartel has been pumping more than 23 million barrels daily.

The upward movement of prices also was helped by unfounded rumors of a fire at Exxon's huge Baton Rouge, La., refinery.

''No, there's not a fire and there hasn't been. I don't know how that thing got started,'' said Exxon Baton Rouge spokesman Dave Gardner.

The market apparently shrugged off Wednesday's preoccupation with a change in gasoline vapor-pollution standards for the pipeline running from the U.S. Gulf Coast to the Northeast announced by the operator, Colonial Pipeline Co.

Market fears were generated that there would not be enough gasoline to satisfy Colonial's pollution requirement of 8.5 pounds-per-square-inch vapor pressure.

But early Thursday the Merc said its board had decided to relieve traders of the requirement of meeting Colonial's specifications for the summer driving months.

The gasoline market ''would have rallied'' if the standard had stayed at the 8.5 level, said James Fiedler of E.D.F. Man International Futures Inc. in New York.

On the European spot market, Britain's widely traded Brent crude climbed 32 cents to $18.60 a barrel.

The United Arab Emirates' Dubai light, the key OPEC crude from the Middle East shipped mainly to the Far East, rose 30 cents to $15.85 a barrel.

On the Merc, home heating oil for April delivery was up 0.96 cent to 54.98 cents a gallon. It gained 2 cents to 58.75 cents a gallon on the New York Harbor cash market.

ANCHORAGE, AK (MARCH 15) UPI - The defense rested its case Thursday in the Joseph Hazelwood trial, and the Exxon Valdez skipper did not take the witness stand to defend himself against charges arising out of the worst spill in U.S. history.

With the jury out of the room, state Superior Court Judge Karl Johnstone asked Hazelwood if it was truly his wish not to testify. The defendant responded to the judge's questions, twice saying, ''Yes'' and once replying, ''That's correct'' in his only spoken comments in court since his trial began seven weeks ago.

But the jury did not hear Hazelwood speak - except in his taped report of the grounding and in a brief taped interrogation, both played by prosecutors.

The jury will not get to hear the skipper's own version of what happened March 23 in Valdez and March 24 when his loaded tanker smashed into Bligh Reef, cracking open and releasing nearly 11 million gallons of Alaska crude.

Prosecutors say Hazelwood spent most of March 23 drinking vodka in Valdez bars before he sailed his loaded tanker out into Prince Wiliam Sound that night, that he irresponsibly left the bridge to unqualified crew while the tanker was on a detour around ice, and that he recklessly tried to rock the tanker free after it hit the rocks.

The defense acknowledges that Hazelwood had two or three drinks, fewer than alleged, while maintaining that he was not impaired and acted prudently.

If Hazelwood had taken the stand to defend himself, he would have been subject to wide-ranging cross-examination about his drinking, among other disputed topics that the jury will have to consider without Hazelwood's help.

Defense lawyers may have feared opening the door to Hazelwood's drinking history, including past drunken-driving convictions and alcohol treatment.

Hazelwood's silence began almost immediately after the accident and now continues through his own trial. Jurors are not supposed to let a defendant's decision against testifying influence their judgment.

The six-man, six-woman jury was expected to get the case Wednesday. The judge scheduled legal debate for Friday and Monday over the laws Hazelwood is accused of breaking and their interpretation for jurors. Lawyers were to make closing arguments Tuesday, then Hazelwood's fate will be up to the jury.

Forty-five witnesses testified for the prosecution; 15 for the defense.

Hazelwood, 43, of Huntington, N.Y., faces up to seven years and three months in jail and a $61,000 fine if convicted of reckless endangerment, operating the tanker while intoxicated, negligent discharge of oil and criminal discharge - three misdemeanors and a felony.

The final defense witnesses Thursday, two men in charge of salvaging the grounded tanker, said Hazelwood caused no more damage or pollution during maneuvers after the grounding.

One final prosecution rebuttal witness, a Texaco tanker captain, offered a view of tanker skipper conduct more akin to the way prosecutors say Hazelwood should have commanded his ship before the wreck than the typical conduct portrayed by the defense.

Besides Hazelwood, one conspicuous potential witness who never testified was Coast Guard Cmdr. Steven McCall, the Valdez port commander at the time of the grounding who is heard on tape with Hazelwood. His past comments have supported the defense in part, the prosecution in part, and apparently both sides were afraid to subpoena him.

Exxon Valdex salvage supervisor Julius Leitz, testifying for the defense, said Hazelwood's job of ''managing the crisis was very professional.''

Leitz and his Portland, Ore., salvage company got the stricken tanker off Bligh Reef, but he said there was no evidence Hazelwood tried to get it off the rocks - as the prosecution said and as Hazelwood himself said he wanted to do in a radio conversation with McCall.

''His actions indicated that he didn't try to get off the reef no matter what he said - deeds not words,'' Leitz said.

Hazelwood told the Coast Guard several times he wanted to get off the reef and prosecutors said that would have risked ship, crew and unbreached oil tanks. Leitz echoed earlier testimony that it was impossible to move the impaled ship - whether Hazelwood knew it or not - adding, ''There was no way that ship was going to come off. It would take levitation.''

''Everything that he did in my opinion was aimed at keeping the vessel on the rock, which in my opinion was a prudent thing to do,'' Leitz said. ''Not a single thing he did would indicate to me that he was trying to get it off.''

Leitz refloated the Exxon Valdez after two weeks of work, using pressurized gas in the tanks to help obtain buoyancy, employing six tugs and, at high tide, nudging the the damaged ship off the underwater rocks into deep water for temporary repairs in a nearby bay. Leitz and naval architect Don Hudson, who was the last defense witness, sailed the damaged tanker on its 38-day voyage to a San Diego shipyard for repairs.

Texaco tanker Capt. Robert Mackintire, who sailed the Brooklyn out of Valdez hours before the Exxon Valdez, said he would never leave the bridge in Prince William Sound; that his detour around ice was slower; that he would not put his ship on automatic pilot in those waters, and that nearly always obeyed Coast Guard requirements that his tanker have a ship pilot or an officer with a pilot license in the sound - conduct that contradicted Hazelwood's actions, which the defense portrayed as typical.

VIENNA (MARCH 15) UPI - NATO officials Thursday introduced proposals for destroying tens of thousands of weapons that would be eliminated under a conventional arms reduction agreement expected by year's end.

After presenting the proposals to the Warsaw Pact at the start of the sixth round of Conventional Forces in Europe talks in Vienna, NATO said all key components of the accord are now on the table.

''The West has now proposed all major elements of a CFE treaty,'' the Icelandic delegation said in a statement on behalf of all 16 members of the Western alliance.

Both sides expressed optimism that if the negotiations continue to progress as rapidly as in past sessions, they should easily be able to conclude the treaty by the target date, Dec. 31, 1990.

''With things happening so fast in Eastern Europe it's a tremendously opportune time to negotiate,'' said a U.S. official close to the talks. ''Right now everyone is anxious to get an agreement. If we loose this opportunity it's going to be much harder to get an agreement later on.''

The new NATO proposals deal with the question of how to eliminate large numbers of tanks, aircraft and other weapons that would be have to be scrapped under the treaty.

They spell out specifically which types of weapons would have to be physically destroyed, which ones could be converted for other use and how the process should be monitored.

The Soviet ambassador to the CFE talks, Oleg Grinevsky, told a news conference he was a ''little disappointed'' with the plan, saying the Warsaw Pact wants more allowances for converting or finding non-military uses for certain types of military vehicles.

''They (Soviets) have the idea you can take tanks and make them into tractors or take helicopters and make them into cranes,'' the U.S official said. ''We think that's crazy .... If you're really going to increase stability you've got to destroy them.''

Grinevsky said the Soviets still favored a proposal, suggested but not formally tabled at the end of the last round, that the two military blocs set a ceiling of 700,000 to 750,000 for the total number of troops each side can deploy in Central Europe.

Grinevsky conceded even some of Moscow's Eastern European allies do not support the plan, but added, ''We are still at the beginning of the round. We will see what happens.''

The proposal has drawn sharp criticism from the U.S. delegation, which rejects the idea of introducing a new and complicated dimension to the talks a month after the breakthrough agreement in Ottawa on limiting the number of U.S. and Soviet troops in Europe.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 15) UPI - Iraq, with the aid of several western companies, now has the ability to make medium-range ballistic missiles, ABC News reported Thursday.

The network said it obtained photographs and construction plans showing three sites for missile development, production and testing near the Iraqi capital of Baghdad.

The missiles could be equipped with nuclear warheads or poison gas, ABC said, and could hit targets in Iran, the Soviet Union and Israel.

Nearly all the technical equipment and support for the Iraqi missile program comes from companies in the west, ABC said, despite an agreement signed by the United States and its allies to stop exports that could enable countries to obtain ballistic missiles.

An Austrian engineer, whose identity was concealed because he fears Iraqi retaliation, told the network that ''certain technical work can only be done with specialized expertise.'' The engineer said the missiles could be equipped with poison gas or nuclear weapons.

U.S. officials confirm that Iraq is building a plant to produce uranium needed for nuclear weapons, although experts say Iraq will not have a nuclear warhead for five years.

Prosecutors in Germany have investigated several companies for providing Iraq the technology needed for the missiles, but ABC said the Iraqi purchasing network is so vast and sophisticated that Iraq can easily buy what it needs elsewhere, including the United States.

For example, ABC said, Iraq purchased a high-tech antenna system from an Atlanta company, Scientific Atlanta, for use in the missile program. In addition, U.S. computers were used in a test launch of an Iraqi rocket last December.

Stephen Bryen, undersecretary of defense in the Reagan administration, told the network that the Commerce Department encouraged high-tech exports to Iraq even though the Pentagon was concerned the material could be used in the missile program.

''The problem was that there were many people in the administration unwilling to have difficulty in the relationship with Iraq and felt we might upset the improving relationship with Iraq,'' Bryen said.

BURBANK, Calif. (MARCH 16) UPI - Management of Lockheed Aeronautical Systems Co. has been considering ways to cut its budget by as much as 30 percent over the next one to three years, a spokesman said Thursday.

The Lockheed Corp. subsidiary presented the possible budget reductions in a series of meetings among managers during the past week, spokesman James Ragsdale said.

The discussions were prompted by the prospect of deep cuts in federal funding for defense contractors, Ragsdale said. The division is not considering reductions in its work force, which currently stands at 23,000 he added.

Lockheed Aeronautical's major facilities are in Burbank, Palmdale and Santa Clarita, Calif., and in Marietta, Ga.

CAPE CANAVERAL, FL (MARCH 15) UPI - Despite unresolved problems, the shuttle Discovery's trip to the launch pad began Thursday for blastoff April 12 on a showcase flight to put the $1.5 billion Hubble Space Telescope in orbit high above Earth's hazy atmosphere.

The 4.2-mile six-hour trip from NASA's Vehicle Assembly Building to launch pad 39B began at 7:55 p.m. EST, more than 12 hours later than originally planned because of concern about a potential problem with a 6-inch nut that holds bearings in place around the shuttle's nose landing gear axle.

Because Discovery is bolted to an external fuel tank, its nose landing gear is stowed for launch and cannot be directly inspected without first removing the shuttle and lowering it to a horizontal position - a complex, time-consuming task that would delay launch a week or more.

Even though an analysis of the problem was not expected to be completed until Friday or later, sources said shuttle program chief Robert Crippen decided the agency had nothing to lose by proceeding in the meantime with rollout and routine preparations for launch.

''If further analysis indicates a problem does exist that would jeopardize Discovery, the vehicle would be brought back to the VAB and removed from the external tank for access to the forward landing gear,'' NASA said in a statement.

A source who requested anonymity said he believes there is a 50-50 chance the shuttle may have to be rolled back off the pad later to replace the suspect nut, delaying blastoff. But he said the time needed to roll the ship back was minor compared to the impact of the replacement work ''and we might as well go for it.''

The goal of the 35th shuttle mission is the long-awaited launch of the $1.5 billion Hubble Space Telescope, the most powerful such instrument ever built to operate above Earth's obscuring atmosphere. Assuming launch processing stays on schedule, the telescope will be taken to the pad March 26 for installation in Discovery's cargo bay.

The landing gear problem cropped up after engineers discovered possibly cross-threaded nuts used to secure axle bearings on the nose landing gear of the shuttles Columbia and Atlantis. Engineers believe a similar problem exists for Discovery.

In a worst-case scenario, the bearings could seize, which could result in a landing gear tire blowout, said one official.

The nut on Columbia's nose gear was scheduled to be removed and shipped back to its manufacturer by jet late Thursday for extensive tests to determine if the problem would pose any danger to Discovery or if the shuttle can be cleared to fly as is.

Hoping for the best, shuttle skipper Loren Shriver, co-pilot Charles Bolden and astronauts Steven Hawley, Bruce McCandless and Kathryn Sullivan were scheduled to fly to the Kennedy Space Center Monday to participate in a dress-rehearsal countdown.

A formal flight readiness review to assess launch processing is scheduled for March 30 and 31.

The highlight of the mission will come the day after liftoff when Hawley, operating Discovery's 50-foot robot arm, lifts the $1.5 billion Hubble Space Telescope from the shuttle's cargo bay and releases it in orbit.

''We are now less than 30 days from the planned launch of the Hubble Space Telescope,'' said Lennard Fisk, NASA's associate administrator for space science. ''The delays and the setbacks are about to be forgotten in the excitement of ... witnessing what will literally be the dawn of a new era in astronomy.''

The giant, bus-size instrument is expected revolutionize optical astronomy with the most perfect optical system ever built. If the Earth's surface were as smooth as the telescope's 94-inch mirror, Mount Everest would be about 5 inches high.

''Never before has humankind had the opportunity to increase its knowledge of the universe than we will in the 1990s,'' Fisk said at a briefing. ''It's as though we currently have 20-over-200 vision and we're about to be given a pair of glasses that brings the universe into 20-20 clarity.''

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (MARCH 15) UPI - Another defendant in the PTL case has been admitted to the same federal psychiatric hospital where fallen evangelist Jim Bakker was treated, it was reported Thursday.

One-time evangelist John Wesley Fletcher has reported to the Federal Medical Center at Butner, N.C., WBTV reported.

U.S. Magistrate Paul Taylor ordered Fletcher, a resident of Durham, N.C., undergo a pschiatric evaluation, the station said.

Taylor wrote in the order that Fletcher ''may presently be suffering from a mental disease or defect rendering him mentally incompetent.''

Fletcher already has told federal court officials he may use insanity as a defense in his perjury trial which is now scheduled for June.

He is charged with lying to a federal grand jury that indicted fallen PTL leader Jim Bakker about his role in introducing Bakker to former church secretary Jessica Hahn.

Bakker's tryst with Hahn in a Florida hotel eventually led to the ministry's collapse. He was later indicted and convicted in U.S. District on charges of wire fraud and conspiracy.

He is serving a 45-year prison term at a federal prison in Rochester, Minn.

In August, Bakker was confined to the Butner facility after U.S. District Judge Robert Potter ordered him there for a pschiatric evaluation.

Fletcher, twice-defrocked by the Assemblies of god Church for alcoholism, is the man who is the man who brought Hahn to the motel room where she claims she was raped by Bakker in December 1980.

Fletcher was indicted on a single perjury count for lying under oath about why he flew Hahn to Florida on Dec. 6, 1980, the day she had sex with Bakker in a Clearwater hotel room.

The perjury charge resulted from Fletcher's appearances before the grand jury in September 1987 and again in September 1988. The first time he testified he did not pay Hahn's way to Florida for sexual purposes.

But in his second appearance before the grand jury, Fletcher said Hahn was taken to Florida expressly for having sex with Bakker.

Fletcher will be at Butner at least until mid-April.

(MARCH 15) UPI - Israeli government falls in NO-confidence vote... Gorbachev selected Soviet president... government clamps down on child labor... Britain protests Iraq execution of journalist... and Libya accuses the United States and Israel of chemical plant fire. U-P-I has the latest stories, and more, next:

Israel's Parliament today approved a vote of NO-confidence against the government of Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir. The 60-55 roll call marks the first time in Israel's 42-year history that a government has been ousted by a vote of NO-confidence.

Shamir now heads a caretaker government... while President Chaim Herzog decides which political party- Labor or Likud- he thinks has the best chance of forming a government.

The NO-confidence motion was brought by the Labor Party, whose leader, Shimon Peres, has accused Shamir of blocking the Middle East peace process.

Peres and Shamir have differed sharply over a U-S-sponsored proposal for peace talks with Palestinians. Peres wants the proposal approved, but Shamir appeared to balk at it.

Just one hour before the NO-confidence vote, Shamir and Labor Party leaders attempted to reach a compromise.

President Bush sent a letter to Mikhail Gorbachev today, congratulating him on his election to the Soviet presidency.

The White House says Bush wished Gorbachev well- quoting now- ''as he leads the Soviet Union into the next stage of perestroika and democratization.'' Spokesman Marlin Fitzwater says Bush ''looks forward to the forthcoming summit in June as an opportunity to broaden'' co-operation between the two countries.

Gorbachev won election today to the new executive presidency in a vote by the Soviet parliament. He ran unopposed for the post that gives him sweeping new powers that he says are needed to save his reform program.

On another front, the Vatican and the Soviet Union announced today that they will set up permanent diplomatic contacts just short of full diplomatic relations.

Pope John Paul and Gorbachev will exchange official representatives of ambassador rank ''at a personal level.''

(MARCH 15) UPI - The Labor Department says it has found thousands of violations of the nation's child labor laws during a three-day sweep.

The government conducted a nation-wide crackdown on child labor law violators and uncovered seven-thousand children working illegally at more than 40 percent of the businesses investigated.

The officials estimate that one-point-eight-Million dollars in fines will be assessed against the companies found to be breaking the law during ''Operation Child Watch.'' And they say that estimate is ''conservative.''

Officials say the violations included the employment of nearly 200 children under age 14... many 14- and 15-year-olds working too many hours or too late at night... and the use of youngsters to operate hazardous machinery.

Labor Secretary Elizabeth Dole cautioned that increasing numbers of businesses may be hiring children because of labor shortages developing in some sections of the country. But she warned- quote- ''Violators, whether motivated by greed or ignorance, will NOT be tolerated.''

LOS ANGELES (MARCH 16) UPI - NBC filed suit Thursday against Sony Corp. and its Columbia Pictures unit, alleging the two companies have sabotaged a home video business that is half-owned by NBC.

The Superior Court lawsuit alleges Sony and Columbia used inside information, made deals behind NBC's back and cost the network, a General Electric Co. subsidiary, more than $250 million in damages.

''Sony and Columbia have been engaging in a scheme of intentional misrepresentations and self-dealing designed to appropriate the assets, business opportunities and profits of RCA/Columbia Home Video for their own companies,'' the suit said.

Columbia and RCA, which is also owned by GE, formed two home video partnerships in 1981 and 1982, one for foreign distribution and one for domestic. NBC said the company, which operates the two ventures as a single entity, is worth more than $1 billion.

The suit said the home video company generated more than $470 million in revenues and more than $74 million in profits to the partners in 1989. The venture has the rights to more than 500 titles beyond 1992, according to the suit.

The suit said the alleged scheme dates from Sony's $3.4 billion acquisition of Columbia last October, when Sony announced it would launch a competing home video distribution business to the RCA/Columbia venture.

''Since the acquisition, Sony, Columbia and their affiliates have engaged in a systematic scheme to destroy the partnership venture as a competitor in the home video business and to misappropriate for themselves the assets goodwill and business support of the venture,'' the suit said.

A Columbia spokesman in New York said the company had no comment on the suit.

''We haven't even seen the complaint and we are surprised to hear about the litigation since we've enjoyed a mutually beneficial relationship with NBC,'' the spokesman said.

Rick Cotton, general counsel at NBC, ''Our attempts to resolve this issue outside of court have been consistently rebuffed.''

NBC said the court action was triggered by a $175 million deal announced Feb. 12 between Columbia and Orion Pictures Corp. in which Columbia obtained overseas theatrical distribution and home video distribution rights for the next six years on all Orion films, its next 50 videocassettes and some Orion television shows.

An NBC statement said the same deal was offered to RCA/Columbia Home Video but that Columbia then declined to proceed without disclosing that ''Sony and Columbia were secretly negotiating their own deal with Orion.''

The suit asks that Columbia be ordered to cease misappropriating assets and cease interfering with the management of the venture and cease ''disclosing and using to the partnership's detriment confidential and proprietary partnership information.''

The suit said Columbia has access to confidential information, including lists of customers, terms of agreements with independent producers, information on availability of new products and actual results of sales and marketing efforts.

(MARCH 15) UPI - British Prime Minister Thatcher is reacting angrily to Iraq's execution today of a London-based journalist... calling it ''deeply repugnant'' and ''an act of barbarism.''

Despite world-wide protests, the Iraqi government hanged 31-year-old Farzad Bazoft, an Iranian who worked for British newspapers. The execution was carried out just five days after Bazoft was sentenced to death by an Iraqi military court on charges that he spied for Israel.

The killing prompted Britain to recall its ambassador from Baghdad in retaliation against the Iraqi government. Britain also suspended all planned ministerial visits to Iraq and said Iraqis training with the British Defense Ministry will be sent home.

The slain journalist was working for the Observer newspaper in London when he visited- without authorization- a military complex north of Baghdad to investigate a report that an explosion had killed hundreds of people.

British consul general Robin Kealy, who witnessed Bazoft's execution inside a Baghdad prison, told the B-B-C that Bazoft insisted as he was led to the gallows that he was a journalist going after a scoop.

In London, a prayer service was held in the news room of the Observer, and some colleagues wept.

TAHOE CITY, CA (MARCH 15) UPI - A skier was killed Thursday when an avalanche swept him over a cliff and down a steep mountainside in the Tahoe National Forest, the Placer County Sheriff's Department said.

The man, whose name was withheld until relatives were notified, was skiing in the Munchkin Chute area about a half-mile outside the boundaries of Alpine Meadows Ski Area, Sheriff Donald Nunes said. The remote snow-covered cliffs are popular with expert skiers.

The victim and his friend, Kenneth Boehland, 24, left the posted boundaries of the 2,000-acre ski resort about 80 miles northeast of Sacramento to ski in the undeveloped area, Nunes said.

The victim plunged over a 100-foot cliff and was carried for another 150 feet before his body came to rest, Nunes said.

Boehland, who was not injured, went to a house at the bottom of the mountain and notified rescuers.

Dan Nourse, director of communications for the ski resort, said the two men both had skiied Munchkin Chute before.

''They were locals. They certainly knew their way out there. They had skiied it before,'' Nourse said. ''It is very steep and very demanding, but very popular with skiiers. It's a good hike (from the resort).

''If you ski out-of-bounds, it's public service lands and it's not illegal but you forsake all of the precautions that we take to make your skiing safe (at the resort),'' he said.

(MARCH 15) UPI - The question of who is responsible for a fire at a Libyan chemical plant has become more muddied.

Libya's official news agency blames the United States and Israel for yesterday's fire, which reportedly destroyed most of the suspected chemical weapons plant at Rabta, about 40 miles south of Tripoli.

But the agency later backed away from that accusation, saying it was NO longer valid in light of a statement today by Libya's Colonel Moammar Gadhafi.

Gadhafi said his government was investigating the fire, and he hinted that ''West German intelligence services'' were suspected.

West German officials say some two-thousand Libyans demonstrated today outside the West German Embassy in Tripoli.

In Cairo, someone claiming to represent a group called the National Wing of the Libyan Army telephoned West German television and claimed responsibility for the fire.

A former White House computer expert today gave some potentially damaging testimony at John Poindexter's Iran-Contra trial in Washington.

Kelly Williams is an Army staff sergeant once assigned to the White House Communications Agency. He said Poindexter and Oliver North deleted almost six-thousand messages from their computer files as the scandal unraveled in November 1986.

Williams said the deleted computer messages were later re-created because the White House kept back-up tapes of information contained on computer discs.

Williams' testimony could hurt Poindexter's case because of a key message he says Poindexter sent to North in August 1986 saying ''well done,'' after North lied to Congress about his links to the Contra rebels.

The testimony explaining the complexities of a computerized White House electronic mail system will make it difficult for Poindexter to argue that his ''well done'' message was NOT to congratulate North for lying to the congressmen.

Poindexter, a former national security adviser, is accused of five felony counts of lying to Congress and obstructing its investigation of the scandal.

Prosecutors say they expect to rest their case against Poindexter by Monday.

(MARCH 15) UPI - A 150-Million-dollar communications satellite is circling the Earth, stranded in a useless orbit while engineers try to decide if it can be saved.

The satellite ended up in an unstable orbit yesterday when it failed to separate from the second stage of a Titan-3 rocket shortly after liftoff from Cape Canaveral.

The immediate plan is to fire the Intelstatboard rockets to move it to a higher, safe orbit. Intelstat engineers also are looking at a variety of options to save the satellite, including a possible shuttle rescue.

But some observers question the wisdom of a 350-Million-dollar manned space mission to rescue a 150-Million-dollar satellite.

And there's another problem. The U-S Space Command in Colorado says that if NOTHING is done to change the orbit, the Titan-3 second stage could fall to Earth as early as March 21st. Officials say the risk of debris surviving re-entry to hit the ground is remote.

A kaleidoscope of weather conditions covers the nation today... with a heat wave in the East, snow and high winds in Minnesota and rain in the Midwest.

Folks in much of the eastern half of the nation sweated under a freak heat wave as winter played out its final days before the beginning of Spring next week. The nation's capital reported 74 degrees by mid-day today.

It was 63 in Chicago. But just a few hundred miles away, winter was alive and kicking as heavy snow fell in southwestern Minnesota. Five to six inches are already on the ground around Worthington, and the snow is still coming down.

Fierce winds gusting to 70 miles an hour sent two semi trucks toppling end-over-end in the Rochester area in southeastern Minnesota and blew trees and power lines across highways.

Rain was scattered in Illinois, and authorities are watching the skies anxiously as already swollen rivers are lapping dangerously close to the top of their banks.

Creeks and rivers in southwest Missouri also are up to their banks following downpours.

Thunderstorms moved through east and south Texas early today... tossing marble-sized hail near Corpus Christi. Thundershowers were reported in Mississippi. Nearly every city in New England reported morning fog or haze.

BOSTON (MARCH 15) UPI - Police arrested a second suspect Thursday in the murder of a liquor store clerk who was shot for a jar of coins during a 10-week-old crime wave that has turned Boston into one of the nation's most violent cities.

The arrest came as state, local and federal officials held a ''crime summit'' to map plans for dealing with the violence in which a record 32 people have died since the beginning of the year and which prompted one judge to call for the National Guard.

Since Jan. 1, Boston has had almost as many murders as Atlanta and San Francisco combined.

Gov. Michael Dukakis offered at Thursday's meeting to bring in state police to help patrol high-crime areas where most of the killings have taken place. Mayor Raymond Flynn declined the offer, but said city police would begin rounding more than 100 alleged members of teenage gangs believed responsible for most of the murders.

Flynn predicted that the dragnet would have a ''profound impact in reducing the violence in Boston neighborhoods'' and would ''send a very powerful message to other young people.''

''There are a relatively small number of people who are at the core of this violence, and our job is to go out there and find them, arrest them, prosecute them, and put them in jail,'' Dukakis said.

Police Commissioner Francis Roache noted, ''These are criminals capable of putting a hole in your head in a matter of seconds. We're going to find them.''

Massachusetts Attorney General James Shannon, U.S. Attorney Wayne Budd and Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., also attended the meeting of more than two dozen officials.

Patrick Nerette, 17, was being held for arraignment Friday in the slaying of Jeanne Strandberg, who was among three people shot to death and four others who were wounded Tuesday in the bloodiest single day of violence since the outbreak began.

Strandberg, 57, the first victim of the day, was shot in the head during a robbery at a liquor store in the city's Dorchester section around 1 p.m. by a suspect who fled after grabbing an Easter Seals collection jar half-filled with coins.

Michael Adams, 17, who was arrested shortly after the robbery, pleaded innocent Wednesday in state District Court, where a judge ordered him held on $1 million surety bail pending a pre-trial conference.

During the arraignment, Judge Darrell Outlaw suggested Dukakis order state police and even the National Guard, if necessary, to help Boston police restore order in crime-ridden areas.

The judge said street crime in the city was ''running rampant and drastic steps must be taken.''

Another of those killed Tuesday was Delores Newberry, 33, a mother of five who was gunned down outside her home after she tried to fight off with a pitchfork a gang of youths trying to burn down her home.

The 32 deaths in Boston this year is more than 50 per cent higher than the 21 who died in the same period in 1989.

Boston, with a population of 620,000, is greatly overshadowed by Washington, D.C., which has had 108 killings among its 630,000 residents so far in 1990.

But Boston has seen almost as many violent deaths as San Francisco and Atlanta combined. San Francisco, with a population of 727,400, has had only 14 murders as of Jan 1. Atlanta, with a population of 453,000, has had 21 homicides this year.

Boston now also has a slightly higher murder rate than two of the nation's largest cities. Los Angeles, with 3.2 million people, had 158 murders as of March 7. Chicago, with 3 million people, had 147 murders through March 14.

(MARCH 15) UPI - Israel's government collapsed today on a NO-confidence motion. Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir rejected a last-minute compromise that included acceptance of a U-S peace proposal for holding talks with the Palestinians. The Parliament then passed a NO-confidence motion, 60-55 swaying the outcome in favor of Shamir's rival Labor Party. The parliamentary procedure brought down an Israeli government for the first time in the country's nearly 42-year history.

A controversial study says the AIDS epidemic in the United States might be on the wane. The study says the number of new AIDS cases might already be declining and could drop to a fairly low level before the year 2000. Other researchers question the figures, which were arrived at using a mathematical model devised 150 years ago.

Federal researchers report the worst of the flu season may be over. The Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta says influenza is NO longer at epidemic levels in the United States, with Iowa and New York the only two states still reporting widespread cases of the flu. But Dr. Walter Gunn, a C-D-C epidemiologist, warns that although the worst probably is over, the number of flu cases could increase again this season.

It appears the White House response to Dan Rostenkowski's deficit reduction plan is NOT as warm as initially thought. Budget Director Richard Darman gave Congress an outline today of Bush administration objections to the proposal by Rostenkowski, who is chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee. The list prompted Representative Lee Hamilton to say- ''There does NOT seem to be much room for bargaining'' on the proposal, which calls for tax hikes.

The Bush administration is moving to renew a U-N-sponsored food aid program for the Sudan in north-central Africa. The program fell apart in October when a cease-fire broke down between the government and the Sudan People's Liberation Army. The government has since agreed to let the food aid resume.

(MARCH 15) UPI - A NO-confidence vote by Israel's Parliament today brought down the government of Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir. The parliament, or Knesset, approved the NO-confidence motion after Shamir refused to compromise on the Middle East peace process and accept a U-S proposal calling for Israeli-Palestinian talks. The vote was a victory for the Labor Party, which has pushed for Israeli acceptance of talks with a Palestinian delegation.

In Moscow, an aide says Soviet lawmaker Boris Yeltsin is suffering from an arrhythmic heart condition that forced him to miss all but one day of the Congress of People's Deputies this week. The aide denies reports in the Western media that the maverick communist had a heart attack. The aide says Yeltsin's arrhythmia, or occasional irregular heartbeat, was likely aggravated by his recent seven-country European tour to promote his autobiography ''Against the Grain.''

The state-run Libyan news agency JANA now says NO one was hurt in last night's fire at a suspected chemical weapons plant near Libya's capital of Tripoli. The news agency initially said there were- quote- ''an undetermined number of victims.'' Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi says his government is investigating whether West German intelligence is responsible for the blaze... and threatens to expel West German citizens.

An F-B-I agent testified today in John Poindexter's Iran-Contra trial that Poindexter tried to shift the blame to Oliver North after the scandal erupted in late 1986. Ellen Glasser was the first agent to interview Poindexter about the diversion of Iran arms profits to the Nicaraguan Contras. Glasser said Poindexter told her during a 15-minute interview at his home that North was committed to the Contra program and that North was- quote- ''up to something.''

(MARCH 15) UPI - Intelsat engineers are exploring a number of options aimed at boosting the stranded Intelsat-6 satellite into a higher orbit. The 150-Million-dollar communications satellite was left in a useless orbit yesterday when it failed to detach from a Titan-3 rocket. NASA has NOT been officially requested to explore a shuttle rescue mission, and Intelsat says the satellite is in NO immediate danger of re-entering the atmosphere.

Two researchers are out with a controversial study showing that the AIDS epidemic may have already peaked. Using a mathematical model of epidemics developed 150 years ago, the researchers say the number of cases will drop annually to a low level by the year 2000 and that total cases may eventually number a relatively slight 200-thousand.

University of Maryland researchers say concern over the preservation of the Amazon rain forest is even more dire than was feared. The study uses a computer simulation to show that denuding the rain forest could raise temperatures in the region and make reforestation impossible.

The Calaveras County Fair Board has voted to allow African Goliath frogs to compete in the annual Jumping Frog Jubilee. But the frogs must obtain a passport from California officials setting standards to make sure they are NOT released and that they do NOT mix with other frogs. The Goliath frogs are three times the size of the average bullfrog, and their entry has caused concern among jumping-frog purists in Calaveras County.

(MARCH 15) UPI - F-B-I agent Ellen Glasser took the stand today in the Iran-Contra trial of John Poindexter. She testified that when she first questioned the former national security adviser about the scandal in 1986, Poindexter tried to direct blame toward Oliver North. But, Glasser also quoted Poindexter as saying he ''could have stopped Ollie.''

The Labor Department has completed a three-day crackdown on violators of child-labor laws, and the results are startling. The department turned up violations at 40 percent of the businesses it investigated, discovering seven-thousand children working illegally. The businesses involved may be assessed a total of more than one-point-eight-Million dollars in fines.

Mikhail Gorbachev was sworn in as Soviet president today, promising to use his new, streamlined powers to wage war on bureaucrats blocking his reform movement. Gorbachev was elected to the post by the Congress of People's Deputies in voting that took place yesterday. The results were released today. Gorbachev said ''perestroika should be radicalized,'' but he also promised NOT to abuse his new powers.

Israel's coalition government failed to survive a no-confidence vote today. Prime Minister Shamir refused to accept compromises on the Middle East peace process. Shamir had been pressed to accept a U-S plan for direct talks with Palestinians. It's the first time the Israeli government has been brought down by a no-confidence vote.

(MARCH 15) UPI - There's another threat against the American hostages in Lebanon. The Islamic Jihad for the Liberation of Palestine says it will execute the three Americans it's holding unless the United States meets the group's demands. The group did NOT spell out its demands in a statement delivered to a Beirut newspaper, but in the past it has called for freeing about 400 Arabs imprisoned in Israel. It also vows to attack airports and airlines involved in transporting Soviet Jews to Israel.

An Iranian journalist working for British newspapers was executed today in Iraq for espionage, despite international protests. British Prime Minister Thatcher called the execution of 31-year-old Farzad Bazoft ''an act of barbarism.'' Bazoft was hanged at a Baghdad prison after he was sentenced to death Saturday for spying for Israel when he entered an unauthorized military complex north of the Iraqi capital last September. A British consulate official says Bazoft went to the gallows insisting he was a journalist after a scoop.

Exxon today announced plans to resume clean-up efforts along Alaska's beaches, soiled in the nation's worst oil spill a year ago. Officials say cleanup crews will begin tackling the shores May 1st. But, there will be fewer people and less equipment than the massive effort undertaken following the March 24th spill of 11-Million gallons of oil from the grounded Exxon Valdez. Exxon President Lee Raymond says ''a stroll on the beach'' last week convinced him Exxon's two-BILLION-dollar response last year did NOT go far enough.

A study released today found that drug education classes aimed at teen-agers helped in curbing cigarette and marijuana use. RAND Corporation researchers who conducted the two-year program in 30 junior high schools in California and Oregon say cigarette smoking declined by as much as 60 percent among youths who had experimented with smoking. The researchers say the program also apparently prevented one-third of the teen-agers from trying marijuana for the first time. But they say it failed to discourage teens from drinking.

(MARCH 15) UPI - Moamar Ghadafi.. John Poindexter... Joseph Hazelwood... President Bush... names making news today. Details of their stories and more, coming up next from United Press International.

Libya hints at West German involvement in last night's fire that destroyed a suspected chemical weapons plant near its capital.

Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi says his government is investigating whether West German intelligence had anything to do with the blaze that destroyed most of the factory... and he's threatening to expel West German citizens from Libya.

In Bonn, a West German Foreign Ministry spokesman says allegations that his country was involved in the fire are ''totally unfounded.''

Libya's state-run news agency JANA says nobody was hurt in the blaze at the facility about 40 miles south of Tripoli. JANA initially reported there were ''an undetermined number of victims.''

Arab diplomatic sources in Algiers say the fire was set by a commando team that traveled to Libya from neighboring Tunisia... and that the saboteurs, disguised as tourists, most likely were members of a Libyan opposition organization.

Libya earlier had accused the United States and Israel of setting the fire but officials in Washington and in Israel deny involvement.

In Washington, the United States... unsure whether the fire will permanently close the plant... again called for its prompt dismantlement.

The United States suspects the plant was used to make deadly chemical weapons. But Gadhafi insists the factory only produced medicines.

(MARCH 15) UPI - Exxon is giving in to public and governmental pressure and will resume the cleanup along the Alaskan coast.

The president of the world's biggest oil company, Lee Raymond, admitted today- in his words- ''we know there's more work to be done.''

Raymond said he reached decision after taking what he called ''a stroll on the beach'' in Alaska last week. He said the two-BILLION-dollars the company has spent has NOT adequately cleaned up the 11-Million-gallon Valdez tanker spill, the worst oil spill in U-S history.

Exxon abandoned the cleanup with the onset of winter last year and had threatened NOT to return.

As for Valdez tanker Captain Joseph Hazelwood, he rested his case today in defense against charges stemming from the spill, declining to testify on his own behalf. The trial should go to the jury next Wednesday following closing arguments Tuesday.

Hazelwood could face more than seven years in prison and a 61-thousand-dollar fine if found guilty of all charges.

President Bush today conceded some concern about the nation's economy. He urged businesses to focus on what he called ''the long-term thinking and investment-in-the-future thinking that produced today's healthy economic climate.''

Speaking to newspaper executives in Washington, the president acknowledged the economy isn't as robust as he'd like it to be and conceded there are-quote- ''some signs that worry me.'' He admitted the deficit figures remain too high.

But overall, Bush said the economy remains ''the largest, strongest, most productive economy on Earth.'' He noted the U-S boasts a standard of living one-third higher than West Germany or Japan and accounts for more than 25 percent of the world's production.

But he said the United States must act to protect its competitive edge against ''dramatic new challenges in the world market.''

Earlier, he urged the National Association of Manufacturers to support his proposed cut in the tax on capital gains, the profits from certain investments.

(MARCH 15) UPI - West Germany is working to ease Czechoslovakian concerns about a re-united Germany.

West German President Richard von Weizsacker today visited Prague, where he asked the Czechoslovak people to forgive the Nazi takeover of 51 years ago. He called the invasion ''a profound injustice.''

Weizsacker also promised a re-united Germany would NOT press any claims to altering the boundaries of its neighbors.

Czechoslovak President Havel responded with harsh criticism of the Nazis, but in doing so appeared open to re-unification.

He blamed Adolph Hitler for the Nazi invasion, calling him ''a lunatic in jackboots.'' But Havel added... ''We have to understand we were NOT violated by the German people but by a concrete person.''

A new government crisis in Israel today.

The Israeli Parliament approved a NO-confidence motion that brought down the coalition government of Prime Minister Shamir. It's the first time since Israel was founded nearly 42 years ago that a parliamentary procedure has caused the government to collapse.

The Knesset, Israel's parliament, passed the no-confidence motion on a 60-55 vote with five members absent. The vote came after Shamir refused to compromise on the Middle East peace process and accept a U-S proposal for holding Israeli-Palestinian talks.

That means the Middle East peace process started by Shamir a year ago is likely to be put on hold indefinitely while a new government is formed. And movement of the peace process will be a central issue in the formation of a new coalition.

Today's vote was a victory for the Labor Party, which favors Israeli acceptance of talks with a Palestinian delegation.

(MARCH 15) UPI - Intelsat engineers report progress in getting rockets on board the stranded Intelsat-6 satellite to fire.

The engineers hope the 150-Million-dollar communications satellite can lift itself into a higher orbit, easing concerns about its possible re-entry into the atmosphere.

The satellite was left short of its intended orbit level when it failed to detach from the second stage of a Titan-3 rocket following launch yesterday morning- a major embarrassment for the U-S commercial space program.

The satellite eventually was freed from the rocket yesterday, and the second stage is said to be due to re-enter the atmosphere as early as next Wednesday. Space officials say it will probably burn up on re-entry, and that any surviving debris will probably plummet into an ocean.

Intelsat engineers intend to keep firing the satellite rockets through the night in an attempt to fix the satellite in a firm orbit.

Two reseachers are out with a study sure to provoke controversy in how to treat the AIDS epidemic.

The study says the epidemic already has peaked and that total cases of the disease may eventually number 200-thousand- well below previous estimates.

Dennis Bregman, of the University of Southern California, and Doctor Alexander Langmuir, formerly of the Centers for Disease Control, used a mathematical model of epidemics, first devised 150 years ago, in their study.

The so-called Farr's Law says epidemics generally follow a bell curve.

The study posits that the disease is already on the wane and that by 1995 fewer than one-thousand new cases will be discovered- about the level of 1982, when AIDS was just beginning to cause concerns.

AIDS researchers at the Centers for Disease Control and at Johns Hopkins University reject the study, saying AIDS spreads in a more complicated manner than the 19th-century epidemics that Farr's Law was originally designed to explain.

A Mexican Embassy official in Washington says his government is demanding an explanation from U-S officials about the apparent unauthorized use of a satellite to locate marijuana plantations in Mexico. He says Mexico was never consulted about any satellite surveillance.

In New York today, the Reverend Jesse Jackson visited 12-year-old David Aupont, who suffered burns on 50 percent of his body after being torched by another youth. Jackson condemned the incident, calling it an ''intolerable'' example of escalating black on black crime.

Cuban President Fidel Castro says in an interview with Brazilian media that he intends to follow the orthodox path of communism and NOT the liberalization movement of the Soviet Union and other East Bloc nations. He also says Cuba has prepared contingency plans for a possible drop in Soviet economic aid. Castro is in Brazil for the inauguration of President Fernando Collor de Mello.

After Collor de Mello took the oath of office today, he moved swiftly to right Brazil's troubled economy. Collor de Mello immediately signed deficit-reduction orders trimming the cabinet by one-half and allowing the sale of government homes and apartments in Brasilia. He also planned to announce anti-inflation measures tomorrow.

Former national security adviser John Poindexter once tried to shift the blame for the Iran-Contra scandal to Oliver North. That's according to testimony today at Poindexter's criminal Iran-Contra trial in Washington. Ellen Glasser, the first F-B-I agent to interview Poindexter after the scandal erupted in late 1986, said Poindexter told her he discussed the arms-for-hostages deal with North regularly and that North- quoting now- ''was up to something.''

(MARCH 15) UPI - Police officials in Nashville, Tennessee, are trying to calm racial tensions that flared following the killing of a mentally impaired black woman by a white patrolman. Police Chief Robert Kirchner met with N-double-A-C-P leaders today and promised a speedy investigation into the incident. 26-year-old Jacques Brooks was shot four times by officer Bill Sneed from his squad car when he answered a call for a domestic disturbance at her home.

Jailed former Black Panther Richard Moore will get a new trial. A state Supreme Court justice in New York City today ordered a new trial for Moore who has been imprisoned for 18 years for attempted murder in the machine gunning of two police officers. Justice Peter McQuillan overturned Moore's 1973 conviction, citing the prosecutor's failure to disclose evidence that Moore claims would have helped him at trial.

Another defendant in the P-T-L case reportedly has been admitted to the same federal psychiatric hospital where disgraced T-V evangelist Jim Bakker was treated. A report by a Charlotte, North Carolina, T-V station says a U-S Magistrate ordered one-time evangelist John Fletcher to undergo a psychiatric evaluation at the Federal Medical Center at Butner, saying Fletcher may be suffering from ''a mental disease or defect.'' Fletcher already told court officials he may use insanity as a defense in his perjury trial in June.

CLEVELAND (MARCH 16) BUSINESS WIRE - Ameritrust Corp. announced Friday that it is in the precess of issuing $60 million of preferred stock.

The offering is being made through a private placement with several institutional investors and is anticipated to be completed by the end of March.

The preferred stock will qualify as Tier 1 capital under federal banking risk-based capital guidelines. Upon issuance, the corporation will have almost $1 billion in Tier 1 capital, which represents 10.30 percent of risk-based assets at year end 1989.

Proceeds from the issue will be used to finance a portion of the acquisition of MVestment Corp, the trust and investment management subsidiary of MCorp. Ameritrust completed the purchase of MVestment on Feb. 27, 1990, following approval by the Federal Reserve on the previous day. The acquisition places Ameritrust among the top 20 trust operations in the United States. The new subsidiary has been renamed Ameritrust Texas Corp.

''When we announced the acquisition of MVestment in October of last year, we conservatively projected initial year earnings per share dilution of less than 4 percent,'' said Jerry V. Jarrett, chairman and chief executive officer of Ameritrust. ''Now that we have completed the acquisition, we believe that we still will be comfortably within our expectations.''

SALT LAKE CITY (MARCH 16) BUSINESS WIRE - Questar Corp. (NYSE:STR) is negotiating the sale of Interstate Brick Co. with Pacific Coast Building Products Inc. of California.

The proposed transfer date is March 26.

Interstate Brick, located in West Jordan, Utah, is a wholly owned subsidiary of Questar subsidiary Entrada Industries. It manufactures and sells a variety of brick products. In 1989, Interstate Brick sold 67.7 million brick equivalents. Its West Jordan plant is the largest brick-manufacturing facility between Denver and Los Angeles.

Pacific Coast Building Products Inc., which has facilities in Salt Lake City, under the terms of the proposed sale would purchase a major portion of Interstate Brick's plant and equipment. A corporate affiliate, PacBric Inc., would acquire the brick company's remaining assets by purchasing all Interstate Brick Co. common stock.

The contemplated transaction is in line with Questar's goal to focus on its primary, energy-related lines of business: natural gas exploration and production, transmission and distribution. The corporation also markets telecommunication services, an area of expertise developed to facilitate its energy-related operations.

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. (MARCH 16) BUSINESS WIRE - ASK Computer Systems Friday announced that it has appointed Peter West to the newly created position of vice president of business development.

In this capacity West, 35, oversees product marketing, strategic selling, third party relationships, and technical and product strategy communications with customers, employees and vendors.

''ASK is evolving itself into a company for the 1990s. Peter and his department will play an important role in this by communicating our strategy to all parties concerned, and by working closely with them to implement it,'' commented Sandra Kurtzig, chief executive officer of ASK.

West has had a 12-year association with ASK. In 1987 he was promoted to product marketing manager. Previously he had been sales and marketing director for ASK's United Kingdom subsidiary.

West joined the company in 1986 when ASK bought back the license to market its software in the United Kingdom, from its distributor, Scicon. While at Scicon, West held marketing, sales, technical support and software engineering posts.

West was born in Great Britain and educated at King's College School, Wimbledon. He earned a bachelor's degree (honors) in computer science from Warwick University.

ASK Computer Systems is the leading provider of enterprise-wide information systems for manufacturing companies. There are 950 ASK employees worldwide supporting 300,000 ASK system users.

Over 25,000 ASK software products operate at customer manufacturing sites worldwide. ASK completed its 1989 fiscal year in June with revenue of $186 million and net income of $13.5 million.

SANTA CLARA, CA (MARCH 16) BUSINESS WIRE - Rational Friday announced that it has elected a new board of directors and restructured corporate management to better meet its corporate goals for growth in the 1990s.

Increasing U.S. business, significant new international opportunities, and Rational's new business relationship with IBM contributed to the need for realigning the board and executive staff. In January, Rational and IBM jointly announced that IBM has acquired an equity investment in Rational.

''With Rational reaching the 10-year mark, this restructuring prepares us to meet the demands of our customers into the next 10 years,'' said Paul D. Levy, president and co-founder of Rational. ''It will also help us take advantage of the significant new opportunities that we see for increasing our customer base in North America, Europe, and the Asia-Pacific region. In addition, the IBM-Rational relationship can best be capitalized on with this new corporate staff.''

Michael T. Devlin, former executive vice president and co-founder of Rational, becomes chairman of Rational's board succeeding Harry H. Wetzel, who held the position for the past four years.

Other members of the board are Larry E. Druffel, director of the Software Engineering Institute at Carnegie Mellon University, Richard F. Hartung, vice president of Information Services at Lockheed Missiles and Space Company Inc., Paul D. Levy, president of Rational, and Arthur Rock, principal of Arthur Rock & Company.

The new corporate officers are all promotions from within the company. Bob Bond, formerly the vice president of marketing, now asumes the position of executive vice president. Knut Ripken, who has been named the technical director of Rational Europe, has been named to vice president and managing director of Rational Europe.

John Lovitt and Thomas Rappath, formerly U.S. regional sales managers, are now vice president of field operations and vice president of sales, respectively. Brett Bachman, formerly the director of marketing, is now vice president and general manager of Rational's Consulting Division.

Rational offers software engineering solutions for the development of Ada software systems. Its customers are among the largest defense, aerospace, and commercial companies in the United States, Europe, and the Asia-Pacific region.

The company is headquartered in Santa Clara, and has sales and support operations throughout the United States, Europe, and the Asia-Pacific region.

SEATTLE (MARCH 16) BUSINESS WIRE - Qantas the Australian air carrier that holds the world's record for the longest nonstop flight -- London to Sydney flown by a 747-400 -- is offering a one-time-only opportunity to fly its latest 747-400 from here to Sydney, Australia and back to the United States for as low as $649.

The offer, to celebrate Qantas' taking delivery of its new Boeing, ''The City of Perth,'' departs Seattle-Tacoma Saturday, April 7. The return flights are on regularly scheduled Qantas services from Sydney to Los Angeles or San Francisco.

The flight is scheduled to take 15 hours and 20 minutes and to cover 8,279 miles, the longest nonstop from here ever.

The world's record, also make by a Qantas 747-400, was achieved on Aug. 17 1989. That flight, took 20 hours and 9 minutes to fly 10,543 miles leaving Heathrow Airport in London and arriving at Charles Kingsford Smith Airport in Sydney.

Qantas spokesman, David Welling, the airline's District Sales Manager, Pacific Northwest, said the flight would offer the regular Qantas in-flight service and its three-classes of travel -- economy, business class and first class, and ''give travelers the opportunity to participate in a history-making journey on a brand new airplane.''

The $649 fare is for economy class both ways. ''There is also the opportunity to fly business class from here to Sydney, with economy class return for $1199 and first class to Sydney with economy class return for $1199 and first class to Sydney with economy class return for $1999. These fares are the lowest ever, from this area, Welling said.

''In connection with the one-time only Qantas flight, Alaska Airlines is offering a special one-way fare of $99 from Los Angeles or San Francisco to Seattle or Portland,'' Welling said.

''Seats are limited for the Qantas Seattle-Sydney nonstop,'' Welling said.

He also said some restrictions apply such as the condition that there be a minimum of five days stay after arrival in Sydney and a maximum of 60 days. Payment and ticketing must be made within 72 hours of flight confirmation. There are no discounts for children. For more information call Qantas at 800/227-4500.

MILPITAS, CA. (MARCH 16) BUSINESS WIRE - Koala Technologies Corp. (ASE:KOA) Friday announced that it has entered into letters of intent with Superior Circuit Assembly and SiCLONE Manufacturing, both of Milpitas.

Superior Circuit Assembly, an assembler of printed circuit boards, is currently in Chapter 11 bankruptcy proceedings in the U.S. Bankruptcy Court in San Jose. With interim approval of the Bankruptcy Court, Koala has become the operating authority for Superior Circuit Assembly and has advanced interim financing to Superior.

Koala's letter of intent with Superior Circuit Assembly looks toward acquisition by Koala of substantially all of Superior's assets, subject to the approval of the Bankruptcy Court as required. The transactions involved will require court-approved treatment of Superior's existing debts.

SiCLONE Manufacturing, which is also involved in printed circuit board assembly, is not in bankruptcy. Under the letter of intent with SiCLONE Manufacturing, Koala has an option to acquire either all of the stock or substantially all of the assets of SiCLONE Manufacturing.

To facilitate its role in Superior Circuit and SiCLONE Manufacturing transactions, Koala has moved its corporate offices from San Jose to Milpitas.

In December 1989, Koala has announced plans to acquire SiCLONE Manufacturing, an affiliated company, SiCLONE Sales and Engineering, and its parent company, SiCLONE Industries, in exchange for common stock of Koala. The Chapter 11 filing by Superior Circuit Assembly, which has business relations with SiCLONE Manufacturing, caused a change in those plans.

''Koala continues to believe that its intended transactions with Superior Circuit Assembly and SiCLONE Manufacturing offer significant future benefit to Koala, and its presence in the computer component and OEM industry,'' said Douglas Kenny, president of Koala Technologies.

Koala today announced financial results for the three months ending Dec. 31, 1989. The company reported a loss of $195,900 on revenues of $2,380,400. In the like quarter a year earlier, Koala reported a loss of $411,100 on revenues of $2,650,100.

The company said it has a loss of $99,900 for ongoing operations, and a loss of $98,800 from discontinued operations for the three month period.

For the first six months of Koala's fiscal 1990 year, the company reported a loss of $256,400, compared with a gain of $878,600 for the like period a year earlier.

Koala Technologies Corp. is a diversified company. Its Koala division developed the MacVision video digitizer for Apple computers and the Koala Pad input device, also for Apple computers, MacVision is distributed through Egghead software, SoftKat, Ingram/MicroD, ComputerLand stores and various catalogs.

Koala also operates Rotational Molding Inc., a plastics manufacturer for industrial, agricultural and recreational applications.

SAN DIEGO (MARCH 16) BUSINESS WIRE - Mitek Systems Inc. (NASDAQ/MITK) Friday announced that it has purchased certain assets of the TEMPEST Products Operation (TPO) of Atlantic Research Corp. (ARC), a unit of Sequa Corp., in a transaction including cash and notes plus the assumption of certain liabilities.

Further details of the purchase were not disclosed.

Based in Sterling, Va., TPO had 1989 sales of over $20 million. Mitek's 1989 sales amounted to $18 million. Like Mitek, TPO modifies computer products to meet U.S. government TEMPEST specifications to prevent electronic interception by unauthorized parties.

Commenting on the acquisition, Phillip C. Thomas, president and chief executive officer of Mitek, said: ''The purchase of TPO, which will significantly expand our product line and customer base, represents a major step forward for us. With the consolidation of both of our operations, Mitek will become one of the largest independent TEMPEST manufacturers in the industry.

''We will have a strong service component to better support our customers and more certified TEMPEST professionals than any other TEMPEST manufacturer in the nation. We will have successfully strengthened our presence in the Washington, D.C., area, which is home to many of our key customers. We expect this acquisition to increase revenues and contribute to our profitability in a meaningful way.''

Mitek Systems Inc., based in San Diego, is a value-added manufacturer of sophisticated TEMPEST-accredited computer products that are modified to prevent electronic eavesdropping by unauthorized parties. Mitek's value-added TEMPEST products are used by U.S. and NATO governments and private industry in high-security applications.

KANSAS CITY, MO (MARCH 16) BUSINESS WIRE - BMA Corp. Friday announced that its board of directors held a special meeting on March 16 to consider various uses of the cash proceeds from the previously announced stock sale of its insurance subsidiary, Business Men's Assurance Company of America, which is expected to take place in July l990.

The board previously established a special committee comprised of three outside directors to work with management to consider and make recommendations to the full board.

W. Thomas Grant, president and chief executive officer of BMA Corp., said the board expressed an intent, conditioned on and after closing of the transaction and receipt of the cash proceeds, to:

Make a special, one-time dividend of $3.70 per share, representing approximately 25 percent of the anticipated cash proceeds.

Authorize up to $70 million for the corporation to enter the market from time to time, for the purpose of acquiring shares of BMAC and/or Home Office Reference Laboratory (HORL) common stock. Of the total authorized, it is expected that up to $20 million might be utilized to repurchase HORL stock.

Grant also confirmed the board's intention to continue the regular quarterly dividend of 30 cents per share. Because the next board meeting is scheduled for mid-June, the board declared the regular second quarter dividend of 30 cents per share, which will be payable June 1 to shareholders of record on May 22.

Additionally the board confirmed management's intention to materially reduce the size of the real estate portfolio in an orderly manner, over a period anticipated to cover several years.

The corporation has engaged The Strategic Planning Institute of Cambridge, Mass., to assist in establishing strategic plans consistent with the corporation's current presence in serving the information needs of the insurance industry. This includes the possibility of exploring expansion into health-related fields compatible with laboratory testing opportunities.

CARROLLTON, TX (MARCH 16) BUSINESS WIRE - Westcott Communications Inc. (NASDAQ:WCTV), a leader in the emerging field of business television and operator of the Law Enforcement Television Network (LETN) and the Automotive Satellite Television Network (ASTN), announced Friday that more than 1,500 law enforcement agencies have subscribed to LETN.

As of Dec. 31, 1989, over 5,100 automobile dealerships subscribed to ASTN which provides industry tailored programming to automobile dealerships.

LETN began its full time broadcast schedule on July 3, 1989. The network delivers training, educational and law enforcement news television programming to law enforcement agencies 24 hours a day, five days a week.

LETN's subscribers include police and sheriff departments as well as numerous federal agencies. LETN is the only operation of its kind serving the sworn officers of law enforcement agencies across the country.

The rapid penetration of the law enforcement market is attributable to agencies' need for cost efficient, high quality training and timely news information which can be met through LETN.

TACOMA, WA. (MARCH 16) BUSINESS WIRE - Gary C. Lange has announced that he will leave his position of president of Puget Sound Savings Bank, a Puget Sound Bancorp (NASDAQ: PSNB) subsidiary, at the end of May to pursue other personal and business interests.

Lange will also step down from Savings Bank's board of directors. A successor has not been named.

''I've thoroughly enjoyed my career with Puget Sound, and am eager to explore other opportunities and to spend more time with my family,'' said Lange. ''I believe in the bank and its strategy of independently serving the local market. I plan to remain one of their biggest boosters in the community.''

''We are grateful for the leadership Gary has provided,'' said Roy Henderson, president and chief operating officer of Puget Sound Bancorp. ''Although we are disappointed to see him leave, we wish him much success.''

Puget Sound Savings Bank's nine home loan centers operate throughout the Puget Sound area. Last year, it was the second largest residential real estate lender in its market area, closing over 3,000 home loans. Puget Sound Savings Bank was acquired by Puget Sound Bancorp in 1986.

NORTH CANTON, OH (MARCH 16) BUSINESS WIRE - Belden & Blake Energy Co., a publicly traded master limited partnership (AMEX:BBE) Friday announced results for the fourth quarter and 12 months ended Dec. 31, 1989.

For the 1989 fourth quarter, Belden & Blake Energy Co. reported working capital from operations (net loss plus depletion, depreciation and amortization) of $345,617, or 6 cents per limited partner unit (''unit''), compared to $(286,979), or (6 cents) per unit during the fourth quarter of 1988. Working capital from operations for the year totaled $2,001,306, or 37 cents per unit. This compares to working capital from operations of $941,609, or 20 cents per unit in 1988.

The company had total revenues of $2,824,570 for the fourth quarter with a resulting net loss of $1,440,575, or 25 cents per unit. This compares with a net loss of $1,622,817, or 33 cents per unit in the fourth quarter of 1988. The fourth quarter of 1989 includes a one-time non-cash write-down of oil and gas assets of approximately $1,077,000 related to the write-off of certain marginal Pennsylvania producing properties. For the year, revenues were $11,034,611 with a net loss of $1,294,409, or 23 cents per unit.

This compares with a net loss of $2,608,494, or 53 cents per unit on revenues of $9,084,896 in 1988. Net loss for 1989 includes income resulting from the cumulative effect of change in accounting principle of $699,714, or 13 cents per unit.

The company recently declared a quarterly cash distribution of 5 cents per unit, payable April 20, 1990, to unitholders of record on March 31, 1990. The company expects to sustain this level of quarterly cash distribution throughout 1990.

The company also announced that it is currently involved in the offer of up to $10 million of convertible subordinated debentures in a European private placement. Proceeds from the debentures will be used to reduce more expensive long-term debt and increase the company's oil and gas reserve base through both developmental drilling and the acquisition of additional producing properties.

Henry S. Belden IV, co-general partner of the company, said, ''1989 was a year of great accomplishments. We set high goals for ourselves at the start of 1989, and worked relentlessly to achieve them. As a result of our efforts, we successfully acquired additional interests in 1,144 producing oil and natural gas wells, acquired a 75 percent interest in seven pipeline systems, completed a $10 million loan agreement with Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co., resumed drilling operations and successfully drilled our first horizontal well.''

VANCOUVER, BRITISH COLUMBIA (MARCH 16) BUSINESS WIRE - Naxos Resources Ltd. (ASE:NXR) has entered into a letter of intent to complete a joint venture agreement to put into production four placer leases and 13 placer claims on Thibert Creek near Dease Lake, British Columbia.

The company has agreed to spend up to $725,000 to acquire an 80 percent interest in the placer leases and claims. Naxos will receive 80 percent of all profits earned by the joint venture.

The Thibert Creek property has a long history of gold production. From 1874 to 1915 annual reports of the gold commissioner indicate that 109,280 oz of gold were produced on the property. Recoverable gold reserves are estimated to be in excess of 50,000 oz.

Acquisition of production equipment has commenced and first gold production is estimated to begin in May 1990. Rate of production is expected to be 2,500 cubic yards per day.

The company is negotiating the acquisition of a further 100 percent interest in 233 units of mining claims overlying the placer claims covering an area in excess of 12,000 acres.

Private placement documents involving 400,000 special warrants, as previously announced, have been executed and the company has now received $460,000 in trust. Shares issued pursuant to the exercise of the warrants will be qualified by way of a prospectus. These funds along with existing working capital will be used to finance the joint venture.

Naxos is also pleased to announce that the joint venture agreement with Mr. Culbert and Mr. Harmon to explore certain areas of southern Chile has now been duly executed and the exploration program is now underway.

VANCOUVER, WA (MARCH 16) BUSINESS WIRE - PacifiCorp (NYSE:PPW) and its 87 percent owned subsidiary, Pacific Telecom Inc. (NASDAQ:PTCM) announced Friday that separate letters of intent had been signed by which a subsidiary of PacifiCorp would acquire, by mergers, Postville Telephone Co. and Thorp Telephone Co.

Both transactions are subject to execution of definitive purchase agreements and approvals by certain regulatory agencies. The mergers are expected to close in the second half of 1990. Upon completion of these mergers, it is expected that Postville and Thorp will become subsidiaries of Pacific Telecom.

Postville, located in Iowa, provides telephone service to 1,400 subscribers and owns a cable television business serving 500 subscribers. Thorp, located in Wisconsin, provides telephone service to 1,950 subscribers, owns a cable television business serving 480 subscribers and has ownership interests in two Wisconsin cellular Rural Service Area partnerships.

C.E. Robinson, chairman, chief executive officer and president of Pacific Telecom said: ''The Postville and Thorp acquisitions are an affirmation of our desire to increase our presence in the Midwest. These acquisitions, as well as our pending acquisitions of North-West Telecommunications and Turtle Lake Telephone Co. will increase our subscriber base in the Midwest to over 90,000 subscribers when all of the transactions are completed. We hope to further increase our presence in Wisconsin and Iowa as both states represent attractive telecommunication environments.''

LOS ANGELES (MARCH 18) BUSINESS WIRE - ERLY Industries Inc. (OTC:ERLY) and American Rice Inc.(ARI) (OTC:RICE) announced Friday that they have entered into a merger agreement with Comet Rice Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of ERLY.

The agreement calls for a merger between American Rice and Comet that would result in all of the assets and liabilities formerly held by Comet to be held by a wholly owned subsidiary of America Rice. ERLY would receive approximatley 17.2 million shares of convertible preferred in exchange for all the stock of Comet.

Before the merger, Comet would transfer its 48 percent interest in American Rice to ERLY, and ERLY will pay cash to Comet which will allow Comet to pay off certain of its long-term debt. The merger and the transfer would increase ERLY's total interest in ARI to approximately 75 percent of ARI's total shares.

The combined sales of American Rice and Comet in calendar 1989 were in excess of $400 million.

The transaction contemplated by the agreement is subject to several closing conditions and will require approval by nearly all of American Rice's and Comet's lenders and will require certain debt to be refinanced. Definitive Proxy materials, the preliminary draft of which should be filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission next week, is expected to be mailed to American Rice's shareholders in late April or May 1990.

The shareholder's meeting to approve the transaction is expected to be held approximately one month after such mailing.

ERLY is a food processing company with its principal operations in rice milling, juice and wine. Comet, a wholly owned subsidiary of ERLY, is a diversified rice milling and marketing concern. ERLY's other activities include fire retardant chemicals and international agribusiness consulting. ERLY's and Comet's corporate headquarters are located in Los Angeles.

American Rice is an international rice firm active in all phases of rice processing, trading and marketing. In April 1988 American Rice was reorganized from an agricultural marketing cooperative into a publicly held business corporation. American Rice's corporate headquarters are located in Houston.

MONROVIA, CA (MARCH 18) BUSINESS WIRE - Vision Sciences Inc.

(NASDAQ:LENZ) Friday announced the closing of the second phase of its previously announced venture capital financing.

The venture capital investment group includes funds of The Sprout Group, an affiliate of Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette, Alan Patricof Associates Inc., and Investech, L.P. The company has been funded with the last $600,000 of the $1.5 million financing.

Gerry Keahl, Vision Sciences president, said the company received at the closing the balance of the funding of $600,000 in gross proceeds, in the form of $100,000 in debentures and $500,000 of series C convertible preferred stock.

The debentures will be convertible into common stock at 75 cents per share and the preferred stock at 50 cents per share, each subject to adjustment under certain circumstances and both subject to earlier redemption. Interest on the ten-year debentures will accrue and be added to principal for the first three years.

The debentures are secured by all of the assets of the company and the preferred stock has the equivalent rights, preferences, covenants and terms of the currently outstanding series A and series B preferred stock.

As a consequence of the issuance of the debentures, the exercise price of the currently outstanding public class B warrants was reduced to effectively $1.88 per share, and entitles the holder thereof to purchase 2.66 shares of common stock for the $5 exercise price of the warrant. No such adjustment was required with respect to the class A warrants.

SAN MATEO, CA (MARCH 18) BUSINESS WIRE - California Jockey Club and Bay Meadows Operating Co. (ASE:CJ) Friday reported preliminary results for the fourth quarter and year ended Dec. 31, 1989.

On a combined basis, revenues for the quarter were $26,001,000, compared with $25,797,000 for the comparable period in 1988. Net income for the quarter was $2,907,000, or 51 cents per share, compared with $2,427,000, or 42 cents per share, in 1988.

For the full year, revenues were $48,569,000, compared with $49,404,000 in 1988, while net income was $2,528,000, or 47 cents per share, compared with $4,445,000, or 77 cents per share in 1988.

The 1989 results reflect a tax charge which is a reversal of the prior year's tax benefit. Final audited numbers are expected to be available in about two weeks.

''The significant improvement in our fourth quarter performance represents enhanced wagering activity and control of operating expenses,'' said James P. Conn, president of Bay Meadows Operating Co.

''Our 1989-1990 race meet which ended Jan. 22 had the first increase in average daily betting handle in four years. For the meet, average handle was up 2.5 percent, with the handle for the last nine weeks up more than seven percent compared with the same period for the prior meet.''

Conn attributed the decline in income for the year to decreasing on-track attendance -- due to increased intertrack wagering -- the absence of a quarter horse racing meet during 1989, a reduction in interest income and increased depreciation expenses due to the racetrack's remodeling program.

Conn said the City of San Mateo has started hearings on the zoning of Bay Meadows' 40-acre training track site. Based on the proposed zoning, he said, California Jockey expects to develop a 1,300 unit apartment complex and approximately 25,000 square feet of commercial space. He added that this would not have any material effect on revenues or earnings for several years.

California Jockey is one of the nation's three publicly traded real estate investment trusts whose primary asset is a racetrack. Its shares are traded on a paired basis with Bay Meadows Operating Co., which operates Bay Meadows Racetrack.

FRAMINGHAM, MA (MARCH 16) BUSINESS WIRE - Aritech Corp. announced Friday that it expects to report a loss in the first quarter as a result of delayed shipments to a large customer.

In the first quarter of last year the company earned $576,000, or 19 cents per share.

A receivable of approximately $7 million is due from a single customer. Collection of this receivable has been slower than anticipated and as a result, shipments to this customer have been temporarily restricted in the first quarter of 1990. As a consequence of this, the company is in the process of securing additional credit from its principal lenders.

EMERYVILLE, CA (MARCH 16) BUSINESS WIRE - Farallon Computing Inc. will participate in a five-stop Latin American promotional tour organized by Apple Computer Inc. and Ingram-Micro D's export department.

Resellers in each country will participate in presentations and training sessions for Farallon products. Products from Apple, Claris Corp. and Symantec Corp. will also be showcased. The tour begins March 14 and concludes March 30. Countries include Puerto Rico, Costa Rica, Venezuela, Colombia and Chile.

A Spanish-language version of Farallon's Timbuktu will be demonstrated on the tour and available for shipment on March 12. Timbuktu is the leading Macintosh screen-sharing application that enables users to work collaboratively on the same document over a network. The program also features point-to-point file transfer.

Vendors will demonstrate the PhoneNET System, MacRecorder and Timbuktu from Farallon, as well as products from other companies. All product presentations will be made in Spanish. Reseller kits with Spanish materials will be available. Demo disks, coupons, product brochures and copyright information will be included.

Each stop on the tour will last two days. On the first day, Apple and Ingram-Micro D will train dealers on the elements of the dealer kit. The second day will focus on productivity issues and product training, including dealer training for how to demonstrate software applications. The theme for the sessions centers around productivity, workgroups and the Macintosh advantage.

Ingram-Micro D and Apple have developed a contest for resellers. The contest awards points to resellers for selling specific products. The points can be redeemed for a trip to a MacWorld Conference, among other prizes. Farallon products are included in the contest.

Farallon is the world's leading provider of twisted-pair networks, with more than one million PhoneNET System nodes installed worldwide in Fortune 500 companies, universities and government agencies. The company produces personal communications products and technologies, primarily for use on Macintosh computers.

Farallon products embrace a variety of communications media, including ISDN, analog and digital voice, data, fax and video. The company has more than 160 employees and is headquartered in Emeryville, with research facilities there and in Lawrence, Kan. Farallon sells its products worldwide through retail distribution and makes its technologies available through OEMs and relationships with other major vendors.

NEWARK, NJ (MARCH 16) BUSINESS WIRE - When residents of the Gloucester County town of Franklinville pick up their phones on March 18, they'll do more than place a call through a new digital electronic switching system installed by New Jersey Bell; They'll help mark the arrival of an all-electronic, intelligent network.

Serving 3,720 lines with telephone numbers that begin with 694, the system brings to 100 percent New Jersey Bell's use of electronic and digital electronic switches that route calls quickly and efficiently.

''New Jersey Bell installed the nation's first electronic switching system in 1965 in the Morris County town of Succasunna,'' said Dennis F. Strigl, vice president of operations.

Aside from switching calls more quickly and reliably, the digital system will provide many innovative services that are practical and convenient.

For example, customers may select optional Custom Calling Services, such as Call Waiting, which allows them to put the first conversation on hold and answer another call.

Beginning in June, customers also may subscribe to CLASS Calling Service, including Caller ID, which lets you know who's calling before you answer the phone.

Other CLASS services include Return Call, which automatically redials the last incoming call even if the phone wasn't answered, and Call Block, which prevents callls from certain numbers from reaching you.

For the first time, area residents also will be able to choose the primary long distance carrier they want to handle calls placed outside of the Delaware Valley regional calling area.

Equal access, which is available to 99.5 percent of New Jersey Bell's customers, will be available to Franklinville residents beginning in May.

Future benefits of digital switching include services such as home banking and shopping, information retrieval from databases and other data and video services.

The system's digital capability also is compatible with advanced fiber optic, or lightwave, technology that New Jersey Bell is installing throughout the state.

LAKEWOOD, CO (MARCH 16) BUSINESS WIRE - Gambro AB (NASDAQ:GAMBY) and COBE Laboratories Inc. (NASDAQ:COBE) jointly announced that they have executed a definitive merger agreement pursuant to which all holders of COBE common stock will receive $37.00 in cash per share and COBE will become a subsidiary of Gambro.

Gambro will commence a tender offer within five business days. The aggregate purchase price for the shares will be approximately $253 million.

The boards of directors of both COBE and Gambro have unanimously approved the transaction. COBE's board recommends that all shareholders accept the offer. COBE has received an opinion from The First Boston Corp. that the consideration to be received by the COBE shareholders is fair from a financial point of view.

Robert M. Collins, president of COBE, said ''I am very positive about our agreement to combine with Gambro. Gambro's global sales and marketing organization will assist COBE in expanding the marketing of its dialysis and other medical equipment products in countries outside the United States.''

COBE, which had $237.9 million in sales and $9.8 million in net income in 1989, is headquartered in Lakewood, Colo., and designs, manufactures and markets equipment and disposables for cardiovascular surgery, blood salvage, critical care monitoring, apheresis, blood banks and dialysis.

COBE's products include perfusion management systems, oxygenators, dialysis equipment and disposable tubing sets, blood component separators and blood cell washing equipment. They are sold in the United States and abroad, including Canada, Europe, Australia, the Far East and the Middle East.

COBE has manufacturing facilities in Colorado, Mexico, West Germany, Great Britian and Italy and has 2,200 employees throughout the world.

Gambro AB, based in Lund, Sweden, is controlled by Investment Cardo AB, which in turn is 47 percent owned by AB Volvo. Gambro had U.S. $482.6 million (SEK 3,103 million) of sales and U.S. $30.9 million (SEK 198.7 million) in net income in 1989. PORTLAND, OR (MARCH 16) BUSINESS WIRE - Sequent Computer Systems announced Friday that its 1990 first-quarter net income per share may slightly exceed analysts' current estimates of $.19 to $.21 per share.

Based on preliminary data, the company currently anticipates its first-quarter net income per share is likely to be between $.20 to $.23 per share. Net income per share was $.24 per share (including $.01 of extraordinary credit) in the fourth quarter of 1989, and $.14 per share (including $.03 of extraordinary credit) in the first quarter of 1989.

Revenues for the first quarter of 1990 may also slightly exceed analysts' expectations, and exceed fourth-quarter 1989 revenues of $47.6 million. First-quarter revenues in 1989 were $26.1 million.

''More than two weeks remain in our current quarter. A significant portion of orders are received and shipments occur in the last two weeks of the quarter, and accordingly, we cannot be certain of our final results '' said Casey Powell, Sequent's chairman and chief executive officer.

Sequent made the announcement in order to clarify comments attributed to Powell following yesterday's Prudential-Bache High Technology Conference in New York. Powell made additional comments regarding the European ''$125 million business opportunity'' referred to in an earlier attribution. He said, ''Sequent has had very preliminary discussions with a European company, however, an agreement may not be reached. Furthermore it should not be presumed that any revenues will materialize in the near term even if an agreement is reached.''

Powell also clarified comments related to the company's future return-on-equity percentage. ''Although Sequent's return on equity percentage improved in 1989, we do not expect significant improvement, if any, in the near term because the company is investing heavily in research and development and in establishing its worldwide distribution network,'' he said.

The company filed a Registration Statement relating to a Common Stock offering with the Securities and Exchange Commission on February 13, 1990. Powell also stated that the offering, which a Dow Jones release stated would be priced on March 19th, will not be priced on that date.

KNOXVILLE, TN (MARCH 16) BUSINESS WIRE - CTI PET Systems Inc. (CPS) and Belgium-based Ion Beam Applications S.A. (IBA) Friday agreed to collaborate in jointly developing and producing delivery systems for current and future applications of positronemitting radioisotopes.

CPS, a joint venture between Siemans and CTI Inc., is the world's leading manufacturer of Positron Emission Tomography (PET) scanners and cyclotrons for the production of positron-emitting radioisotopes. IBA of Louvain-la Neuve, Belgium, is recognized worldwide as a leader in cyclotron technology.

Under terms of the agreement, Siemens will be responsible for worldwide distribution and servicing of the IBA radioisotope delivery system, and will remain responsible for distributing and servicing CPS products. Financial terms of the agreement, which covers both current and future applications were not disclosed.

IBA will retain and continue to develop, manufacture and market their Cyclone-30 - and other non-clinical PET related products.

Both Yves Jongen, president of IBA, and Terry Douglass, president of CPS, attribute the collaboration to the explosive rate of progress being made in the development of PET technology, and the mutual goal to make cost effective turnkey systems available to a wider range of healthcare institutions.

Year-to-date RPMs totaled 62,196,894, 4.3 percent above the level reported in 1989.

Available seat miles (ASMs) for February were 78,052,634 up 15.8 percent from the comparable 1989 month. ASMs for the first two months of 1990 were 15.1 percent above last year's same period.

Passenger load factor (the percentage of seats occupied) was 39.3 percent for February 1989, down 4.6 percentage points. The 1990 year-to-date load factor stands at 38.3 percent vs. the prior year total of 42.3 percent.

Passenger boardings for the first two months of the year have increased 0.7 percent compared to the prior year's period. For the year-to-date, the airline transported 315,182 passengers compared to 313,119 in 1989. Boardings in February trailed the number transported the same month in the prior year.

CLEVELAND (MARCH 16) BUSINESS WIRE - First Union Real Estate Investments Friday announced it is offering for sale its portfolio of 15 wholly owned shopping mall properties located in 12 states throughout the country, and has engaged Merrill Lynch Capital Markets to act as its financial adviser and sales agent.

The portfolio will be offered as a whole, and not as individual properties. First Union indicated that the offering price for the package is $425 million, which would result in a taxable capital gain of about $15 per share, assuming the full conversion of its outstanding convertible debentures. The trust stated that, if a sale materializes, it intends to distribute any such gain to shareholders as a special dividend.

First Union indicated it wishes to pursue more aggressively its decision to invest in multi-family, residential properties, and accordingly, has decided to devote more of its efforts to that area. With the present high level of interest in retail properties by institutional investors, the trust believes this is an opportune time to be offering them for sale.

First Union Real Estate Investments is a self-administered equity real estate investment trust, with investments in regional enclosed shopping malls, downtown office buildings, and multi-family complexes, located throughout the United States. The trust's shares are traded on the New York Stock Exchange.

LEBANON, NH (MARCH 16) BUSINESS WIRE - Granite State Electric Co. Thursday filed a $2.17 million rate increase request with the New Hampshire Public Utilities Commission (PUC) to cover the company's increased cost of providing electricity.

The request is an overall revenue increase of 4.9 percent over currently effective rates, and has a proposed effective date of April 15, 1990. This is the first rate increase that the company has requested since 1981. For a typical residential customer who uses 500 kilowatthours of electricity per month, the rate increase will be $1.82.

The company also has requested that $1.66 million of the requested increase be allowed to become effective immediately as temporary rates, pending PUC review of the permanent rate application. This amount would result in an increase of $1.38 per month for the typical residential customer. The company is asking for this temporary rate increase because its current earnings situation does not allow it to acquire favorable long-term financing for its capital investments.

''Granite State Electric's highest priority is providing a reliable supply of electicity at a reasonable cost,'' says Lydia M. Pastuszek, president of Granite State Electric. ''Presently, the cost of electricity to our New Hampshire customers is more than 20 percent less than it was in 1982, when you account for inflation. These price declines have occurred despite the increase in customer base of 23 percent.''

Since 1982, Granite State Electric has implemented a number of improvements in the areas of efficiency and equipment. For example, in 1985 the utility initiated the use of hand held electronic meter reading devices that have increased the number of meters read per employee, while improving overall reading accuracy. Granite State Electric also has implemented a comprehensive and aggressive conservation and load management program, which has received national acclaim.

''Even after the rate increase, Granite State Electric's customers will still pay rates that are 20 percent lower than in 1982 when adjusted for inflation, and are among the lowest electricity rates in New Hampshire and New England,'' Pastuszek continues. ''We are proud of this fact and are doing everything in our control to maintain this distinction.

''Our goal in the 1990s is to provide a reliable supply of electricity to our customers at a reasonable cost, consistent with preserving a quality environment. Achieving this goal is essential if we are to do our part in protecting and preserving a healthy New Hampshire economy,'' Pastuszek concludes.

Granite State Electric serves 33,000 customers in 23 New Hampshire communities.

ATLANTA (MARCH 16) BUSINESS WIRE - Georgia Federal Bank FSB (NASDAQ:FFMC), announced Friday that it has entered into a definitive agreement to sell its Fort Valley and Cochran, Ga., branches to The Citizens Bank of Fort Valley and Cook Banking Co. of Cochran, respectively

Both purchasers are subsidiaries of CB Bancshares Inc., a Fort Valley-based company. Georgia Federal also announced the sale of its Brunswick and St. Simons Island, Ga., branches to The Coastal Bank of Georgia, a Brunswick-based affiliate of Synovus Financial Corp. of Columbus, Ga. The transactions are subject to regulatory approval and other contract conditions.

When the transfer takes place, both CB Bancshares Inc. and The Coastal Bank of Georgia will assume all checking, passbook, statement savings and money market accounts of their respective branch purchases. Georgia Federal will retain all time deposits and loans. Customers of the branches will be notified of the agreements by mail.

Georgia Federal Senior Executive Vice President Don B. Stout explained, ''These sales are a continuation of our efforts to restructure and upgrade our statewide branch system. This restructuring is designed to allow Georgia Federal to expand in those markets we believe are most beneficial to us.''

Georgia Federal also announced a significant expansion of its Vineville branch in Macon, Ga. A new, larger facility will be built on the property directly behind the current location to make room for highway development. This will also help to accommodate increased traffic flow at the Vineville location and will provide more convenience for Georgia Federal customers.

The present location will remain open for business during construction of the new building. In addition to the Vineville branch, Georgia Federal operates three other branches in Macon.

Expansion and renovation of other greater Georgia branches will be taking place later this year. In addition, Georgia Federal will open a new branch at Galleria in April 1990, making it the 39th branch in the metro Atlanta region.

With assets of over $4 billion, Georgia Federal Bank is the state's largest savings institution and one of the largest retail banks. A wholly owned subsidiary of First Financial Management Corp., Georgia Federal currently operates 64 banking offices throughout Georgia, as well as a consumer finance company with operations in eight Southeastern states.

ROCHESTER, NY (MARCH 16) BUSINESS WIRE - Sandia National Laboratories and Hampshire Instruments have announced a cooperative effort to transfer laser technology developed at Sandia to Hampshire Instruments.

The focus of the effort is to improve the efficiency and throughput of Hampshire's X-ray lithography systems.

X-ray lithography is a method of producing extremely small features on integrated circuits. These small features make it possible to put more transistors and other devices on a single chip than was previously possible.

''We are actively encouraging closer relationship with U.S. industry to aid in commercialization of government-developed technologies,'' explains Gerold Yonas, director of laboratory development at Sandia.

''Congress recently enacted the National Competitiveness Technology Transfer Act of 1989. This law allows us to form close alliances with industry for the purpose of transferring commercially valuable technology.

We are interested in partnering with industries that have strategic value to our national security as well as companies that can benefit from our technology by increasing their competitiveness in world markets.''

Dr. James Forsyth, vice president of technology and a founder of Hampshire Instruments, describes the project in more detail. ''Sandia National Laboratories is helping us develop a new front-end for our laser that has the potential to boost its power, and efficiency.

''They have unique experience and capabilities in the design of an injection-seeding system for the Hampshire high power Q-switched laser. The laser is used to produce a soft X-ray source utilized in submicron microlithography.''

Q-switching is a means of producing high instantaneous power from a laser by storing photon energy and then releasing it in a short burst.

Injection seeding of laser produces pulses of light that are not only high in power, but also high in spectral purity -- that is, light at only one optical frequency.

The term ''injection seeding'' refers to the fact that the light from a miniature laser is amplified by a large laser to produce a much more powerful pulse that is still spectrally pure -- ''sort of like planting a small seed of corn and having a lot of corn grow from it,'' says Sandia scientist Larry Rahn.

Rahn and Randal L. Schmitt, both of Sanida's Diagnostics Research Division in Livermore, Calif., developed the laser technology in collaboration with Del Owyoung and Peter Esherick of Sandia's optoelectronics and microsensor research department in Albuquerque, N.M. The technology will be transferred by Schmitt working with Hampshire Instruments to adapt Sandia's injection seeding technique to fit Hampshire's laser.

''The relationship with Sandia is a key ingredient in a long-term product development plan that will increase the performance and throughput of our lithography systems. It is also part of a business strategy that includes forming strategic alliances with other technology leaders,'' says Dr. Moshe J. Lubin, president and chief executive officer of Hampshire Instruments.

''The Sandia project is a unique opportunity to accelerate our laser development program. By utilizing Sandia's injection seeding system, we can concentrate on increasing laser performance in other areas,'' says Dr. Joseph Abate, director of laser development at Hampshire Instruments.

Hampshire Instruments produces the Series 5000 X-Ray Stepper system which is used in the manufacture of integrated circuits with device feature sizes down to 0.5 microns and smaller. These devices include high density DRAMs, high speed SRAMs and GaAs (gallium arsenide) devices. The Series 5000 uses a unique laser-based soft X-ray source that exposes single-layer novolak resin-based photoresists.

Because of their much shorter wavelength, X-rays have several advantages over light sources in optical steppers. These advantages include higher resolution, greater depth of field and a larger exposure field, all requirements for printing advanced semiconductor devices.

Hampshire is a privately held developer and manufacturer of X-ray lithographer systems with headquarters in Rochester, and a customer support center in Marlborough, Mass. The company is actively involved in industry and government programs to recapture U.S. global leadership in semiconductor manufacturing. Hampshire is a member of SEMI/Sematech and is a prime contractor to the U.S. government's microelectronics and national X-ray lithography programs.

Sandia National Laboratories is a multiprogram research and development facility operated for the U.S. Department of Energy by AT&T. Sandia's main facilities are located in Albuquerque and Livermore.

DALLAS (MARCH 16) BUSINESS WIRE - AMRE Inc. (NYSE:AMM), a Dallas-based direct consumer marketer of home improvement products, today announced its results for its third quarter and nine months ended Jan. 31.

THIRD QUARTER

Sales for the third quarter, ended Jan. 31, were $58 million, 33 percent higher than the $43 million recognized for the third quarter, ended Jan. 31, 1989. The company's Cabinet Division, acquired in October 1988, contributed $11.3 million in revenues for the third quarter, vs. $5.5 million for the same period last year.

The Siding Division's revenues increased 23 percent to $47 million from $38 million, for the same period last year.

On a continuing operations basis, the company recorded a loss of $340,000, 2 cents per share, in this year's third quarter; vs. a loss of $999,000, or 7 cents per share, for the same period last year.

On a discontinued operations basis, the company recognized a gain of $73,000 in this year's third quarter; compared with a loss of $1 million, or 7 cents per share, in last year's third quarter.

These resulted in a bottom line net loss of $267,000, or 2 cents per share for the third quarter ended Jan. 31, 1990; vs. a net loss of $2.0 million or 14 cents per share, for last year's third quarter.

CASH AND CASH FLOWS

At Jan. 31, AMRE had $18.4 million in Cash and Marketable Securities, compared with $10.3 at the end of the second quarter, $7 million at the end of the first quarter and $1.6 million at April 30, 1989. During the third quarter, the company received approximately $3 million in tax refunds.

Cash flow from continuing operations was a positive $18.2 million for the nine months ended Jan. 31, (including approximately $6 million in tax refunds), compared with a negative $2.4 million for the same period last year.

NINE MONTHS ENDED JAN. 31

AMRE's sales increased 41 percent to $187 million, for the nine months ended Jan. 31, from $133 million for the same period last year. The company's Cabinet Division, acquired in October 1988, contributed $31.8 million in revenues during the nine months ended Jan. 31. The Siding Division's revenues increased 23 percent to $155 million compared with $126 million for the nine months ended Jan. 31, 1989.

Income from continuing operations was $3.6 million, or 25 cents per share, compared with $5.1 million, or 38 cents per share, for the first nine months of last year. The company recognized a gain from discontinued operations of $399,000, or 3 cents per share; vs. a loss of $2 million, or 15 cents per share, for the same period last year. Net income was $4 million, or 28 cents per share, and $3.1 million, or 23 cents per share, for the nine months ended Jan. 31, 1990, and 1989, respectively.

10TH CONSECUTIVE QUARTERLY CASH DIVIDEND

The company also declared today its regular quarterly dividend of 2 cents per common share, payable on April 11, to shareholders of record on March 28. This marks AMRE's tenth consecutive quarterly cash dividend. The company currently has 14,072,020 shares outstanding.

AMRE Inc. is the largest direct consumer marketer of home improvement products in the United States and Canada. Its product lines include exterior home siding, kitchen cabinet refacing, and related home improvement products.

GARDEN CITY, NY (MARCH 16) BUSINESS WIRE - Esselte Business Systems Inc. (NYSE:ESB) and Esselte AB, a Swedish Company which owns 78 percent of the shares of Esselte Business Systems, Friday announced that the Board of Directors of Esselte AB has approved, and the special committee of the Board of Directors of Esselte Business Systems has advised that it will recommend, a revision in the terms of the previously announced merger of Esselte Business Systems with a subsidiary of Esselte AB.

Under the revised terms of the merger, which are subject to approval by the board of directors of Esselte Business Systems, each share of common stock of Esselte Business Systems not owned by Esselte AB would be exchanged for $47.64 per share (representing $47.40 plus $0.24 in lieu of a dividend which would otherwise have been paid in April).

If the merger is not completed on or before May 15, the cash amount for each share of common stock would be increased by an amount equal to nine percent per annum of such amount starting May 16, to the effective date of the merger.

Under the original announced terms of the proposed merger, each share of common stock not owned by Esselte AB would have received $46.50 per share, plus $0.24 per share in lieu of an April dividend, and interest on the $46.50 basic merger price at the rate of 7.7 percent per annum from April 7, to the merger date.

Esselte Business Systems and Esselte AB stated that the proposed revised merger terms are the result of discussions between Esselte AB and the special committee of the board of directors of Esselte Business Systems following suspension by the special committee of their recommendation of the previously agreed terms in light of the announcement in February that Esselte AB's two largest shareholders were interested in acquiring the entire equity interest in Esselte AB. That transaction is not now being pursued.

Esselte Business Systems stated that it expects its board of directors to act upon the proposed revised merger terms recommended by its special committee shortly and, if such revised terms are approved, to establish record and meeting dates for a shareholders' meeting to act upon the proposed merger.

Esselte Business Systems is the American holding company for Esselte AB's office supplies, graphic arts supplies, and retail supplies and equipment operations. Esselte AB's shares are listed on the Stockholm and London Stock Exchanges.

NEW YORK (MARCH 16) BUSINESS WIRE - Congress Video Group Inc. (OTC:CVGI) Tuesday announced it will be relisted on the National Association of Securities Dealers and Automated Quotations (NASDAQ) system, on Monday, March 19.

Congress Video Group, under the direction of its chairman and chief executive officer, Richard E. Burke, has gone from a $2.74 loss per share in fiscal 1988, to less than a 16 cents loss per share in fiscal 1989. Congress expects to be in the black by the end of its current fiscal year, March 1990.

''A streamlined library, new packaging, new high quality programming such as HBO theatrical titles and an aggressive marketing effort have generated tripled sales and tripled gross profit,'' says Burke.

''With all the improvements at Congress, the momentum from our profitable last quarter and our relisting on NASDAQ, we look forward to an exciting year.''

Congress Video Group is a New York City-based independent publisher and distributor of quality sell-through prerecorded videocassettes to mass merchants and specialty retail chains across the country.

Its archive video library consists of more than 150 licensed titles and 100 titles in public domain.

In addition to producing their own programming, Congress' video library includes programs exclusively licensed from United Entertainment, Elvis Presley Enterprises and Home Box Office, among others. Programs are categorized into 13 series which include: action, automotive, children's, Christmas, comedy, fitness, horror, how-to, Latin, lifestyles, movie classics, special features and sports.

NEW YORK (MARCH 16) BUSINESS WIRE - CMP Publications Inc., the leading business-to-business publisher, Friday launched Electronic Marketing News (EMN), its first publication dedicated solely to electronics marketing.

EMN is a tabloid, 16 pages to start, printed in four-color on coated stock. It will publish eight times in 1990, according to Ken Cron, vice president and group publisher.

''EMN fills a niche that is open in the marketplace,'' said Cron. ''There is no publication specifically focused on the electronics marketing community. We created Electronic Marketing News to deliver the latest industry news to the industry we know so very well.''

CMP already publishes key electronics publishers Electronic Buyers' News, Electronic Engineering Times, High Performance Systems and Electronic World News.

Electronics group editorial director Bob Henkel is EMN's editorial director and chief writer. Tim Moran is managing editor; Donna Moran, art director; Jim Pizzo, production manager; and Genni Higgins, marketing dierctor. They were all instrumental in EMN's development and startup.

EMN is structured with news leading off, followed by special sections on marketing, advertising, public relations and the media; ''People on the Move'' and a major feature each issue; company and agency profiles; and guest columns on technology marketing and other topics.

''We'll cover new product launches, breaking ad campaigns, market trends, shows and conference, market research and strategies, and include an industry marketing calender and much more,'' said Cron.

NEW YORK (MARCH 16) BUSINESS WIRE - The following is a summary of a presentation Friday at the New York Society of Security Analysts by Dr. Anthony J. F. O'Reilly, chairman, H.J. Heinz Co.

The chairman of the H. J. Heinz Company expressed his confidence that Heinz will continue its exemplary record of consistent growth in the coming decade. He noted that his corporation has not relied on ''extraordinary phenomena'' for its record growth during the last decade. ''Commodity cost savings, major restructurings, LBOs, tax benefits, lesser competition -- these have not given us much comfort in the '80s and their decline or demise in the '90s will not affect us as it might others in our business,'' he said. ''Heinz management expects to continue to follow the strategies that have produced superior growth and substantial returns to Heinz shareholders.''

In an address before members of the New York Society of Security Analysts, Dr. Anthony J. F. O'Reilly, Heinz chairman, president and chief executive officer, noted that the companys sales in fiscal 1989 increased for the 25th consecutive year and exceeded $5.8 billion. For the most recent five fiscal years, sales grew at a compound rate of 8 percent. Operations overseas accounted for 40 percent of consolidated sales.

Based on results to date and our current sales forecasts, Dr. O'Reilly explained, this year we should exceed $6 billion for the first time.

As for earnings, Dr. O'Reilly noted that from 1985 to 1989, Heinz shareholder saw their earnings per share grow at a 14.5 percent compounded rate, while dividends advanced at 15.5 percent.

Dr. O'Reilly noted the average annual return for Heinz exceeded 30 percent fo the last 10 years. This compared with an annual average of 17.5 percent for the S&P 500 and 21.4 percent for the S&P Food Index.

On price appreciation alone, the executive pointed out, Heinz stock beat the market and almost every other stock in the S&P Food Index. While the S&P 500 increased to more than three times its initial valuation and the S&P Food Index grew by a factor of seven, the market price of Heinz stock at the end of 1989 was more than ten times its price at the start of 1980.

At the beginning of the decade, the market capitalization of Heinz was $908 million, compared with a market capitalization of nearly $9 billion at the end of 1989.

A Heinz shareholder who reinvested dividends realized an impressive total return of 1,396 percent for the decade -- equivalent to a 31 percent annual compounded return, the CEO explained.

JACKSONVILLE, FL. (MARCH 16) BUSINESS WIRE - All picketing at Greyhound's Jacksonville, Fla. terminal is prohibited under a tough new order issued last night in Duval County by Florida 4th Judicial Circuit Judge Major B. Harding.

The Amalgamated Transit Union, its officers and members were ordered to cease all picketing, patrolling and demonstrating at or adjacent to all Greyhound facilities and equipment, including buses, in Duval County.

The company asked for a tougher court order because the union violated terms of the consent order issued March 9.

Seven shots were issued March 11 on a Greyhound bus near Jacksonville. Seven people wer hospitalized, two with serious injuries requiring surgery. Greyhound has offered a $25,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person or persons responsible.

The Jacksonville incident is one of 14 cases in which shots have hit Greyhound buses. Ohio Governor Richard Celeste and Florida Governor Bob Martinez have moved forcibly to protect their state highways, assigning state highway patrol officers to monitor Greyhound schedules.

Drivers in those two states have been assigned CB radios to help the state highway patrols in monitoring activities.

NEW YORK (MARCH 16) BUSINESS WIRE - Innovation Technologies Inc. (Over-The Counter) announced Friday that it will look to boost the market share of its wholly owned subsidiary M. Schacht Seafood Inc. of New Jersey.

M. Schacht Seafood was acquired by Innovation Technologies on Feb. 23 in certain related transactions.

M. Schacht Seafood has a 25 year operating history and is an importer, processor and distributor of fresh and frozen seafood and other products. Schacht's customers include hotels, restaurants and supermarket chains in the Metropolitan New York City area and in the Caribbean.

For the fiscal year end July 31, 1989, the subsidiary posted sales of $16.6 million and a net loss of $104,489. Todd DeMann, vice president of Innovation Technologies said that, ''this loss prior to our acquisition of the company was primarily due to the fact that operations were idle for a substantial portion of the year due to the death of M. Schacht Seafood's previous president.

''Another contributing factor was the write-off of bad receivables from several restaurant clients during this period. M. Schacht Seafood remains a stong presence in the fresh and frozen seafood business. We are looking right away to strengthen our client base in Schacht's traditional businesses.

Also, we are simultaneously concentrating on increasing our market share in the sizeable chain supermarket end of the business and are planning an aggressive entry into the profitable airline food service and educational institution segments of the seafood market.''

Innovation Technologies announced that its subsidiary's new management team will include Arthur Tiberi as chief financial officer. He will be responsible for running the subsidiary's day to day financial operations. Tiberi will also serve as secretary and treasurer of Innovation Technologies. His background includes experience with Security Pacific Business Credit and National Westminster Bank USA.

DeMann also stated that Innovation Technologies is continuing negotiations for the acquisition of Terry Laboratories. In a related development, the company is examining the possible acquisition of aloe producing properties in the Caribbean.

NEW YORK (MARCH 16) BUSINESS WIRE - Enzo Biochem Inc. (AMEX:ENZ), a New York based biotechnology company, Friday reported operating results for the fiscal second quarter and first half periods ended Jan. 31, 1990.

Revenues for the three months ended Jan. 31, 1990, were $5,260,000 as compared to $3,129,000 for the same period the year before. The $2.1 million revenue increase between these two periods results from higher diagnostic service revenues due to a laboratory acquisition in April 1989, improved product sales, and reduced research contract revenues and investment income.

The net loss for the second quarter of fiscal 1990 was $1,539,000, or 14 cents per share. This compares to a net loss of $1,105,000, or 10 cents per share, in the second quarter of the prior fiscal year. The rise in expenses between the two periods reflects some up-front investments for expanded sales and marketing capabilities and start-up costs to improve overall efficiencies with the planned consolidation of the diagnostic service facilities.

For the first six months of fiscal 1990 revenues totalled $10,795,000, over $4.5 million ahead of the $6,210,000 recorded in revenues for the first half of fiscal 1989. The net loss for the first half of fiscal 1990 amounted to $2,309,000. This compares to a loss of $2,074,000 reported for the same period in fiscal 1989.

Enzo Biochem Inc. is engaged both in the research, development and manufacture of innovative health care products based on molecular biology and generic engineering techniques and in providing diagnostic services to the medical community.

TEMPE, AZ (MARCH 16) BUSINESS WIRE - Arizona Instrument Corp. (NASDAQ: AZIC) Friday reported results for the fourth quarter and year ended Dec. 31, 1989.

Revenue for the year was $8,952,210 compared to $10,224,405 in 1988. The net loss for the year was $2,222,852, or 95 cents per share. For 1988, Arizona Instrument reported a net loss of $873,769, or 38 cents per share.

For the quarter ended Dec. 31, 1989, revenue was $2,271,214 compared with $2,658,802 for the same period one year ago. The net loss for the quarter was $1,343,949, or 57 cents per share, versus a net loss of $674,546, or 29 cents per share in 1988.

Hudnall said that for a variety of reasons, the demand for monitoring equipment did not increase. He pointed out that while the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency regulations on USTs were put into effect at year end, the regulations allowed states and regional governments to impose stricter standards.

Many have yet to finalize those standards, and most others have failed to begin enforcing those regulations which are in place, discouraging the purchase of monitoring equipment by national UST operators.

At the same time, while the EPA regulations require a $1 million liability insurance policy for any UST operator with less than $10 million net worth few insurance companies are offering policies.

Hudnall said most of those which are available are several thousand dollars over 1988 premium levels, making them too expensive for the UST operators. ''Consequently,'' he said, ''many operators have put off upgrading their systems until these issues are resolved.

BASKING RIDGE, NJ (MARCH 16) BUSINESS WIRE - Science Management Corp. (AMEX:SMG) Friday announced sales from continuing operations of $74,830,000 for the year 1989 compared with sales of $75,651,000 in 1988.

A loss from continuing operations of $10,063,000, or $3.60 per share was incurred compared with income of $755,000, or 27 cents per share for the same period of 1988.

The loss in 1989 resulted primarily from decisions made at year end to write off certain goodwill, establish a reserve for expected future losses on a lease, and provide for deferred rent on another lease, together with operating losses in several businesses in the fourth quarter.

The company had a net loss from discontinued operations of $311,000, or 11 cents per share compared with a loss of $222,000 or 8 cents per share in the same period of 1988. There were extraordinary items representing benefites from the utilization of net operating loss carryforwards of $41,000, or one cent per share and $94,000 or three cents per share in 1989 and 1988, respectively.

The net loss for the year was $10,333,000, or $3.70 per share compared with net income of $627,000 or 22 cents per share for the same period of 1988.

The comapny recently assessed the value of its business in marketing and proscessing services for publishers and decided to write-down as of year end the goodwill attributable to the original purchase of this business to its estimated current value. This resulted in a $4.5 million non-cash charge against earnings.

Executive search and compensation services incurred a loss of $2.4 million in 1989. A significant part of this loss was a $1.2 million reserve, established as of year end, for expected future losses in subleasing excess office space in New York City in light of continuing deterioration in the office rental market there during the fourth quarter and in early 1990.

Lower revenues in the fourth quarter also contributed to an operating loss in the period.

Mechanical engineering and related services for utilities had a loss of $1.6 million on lower revenues. This included a loss of $1.1 million in 1989 from efforts begun in late 1988 and, curtailed in the last quarter of 1989, to expand the scope of the unit's services to utilities.

A provision made as of year end to accrue deferred rent on an office lease in the comapny's Information Systems Division together with project overruns on certain fixed price commerical information systems contracts contributed a loss of $1.5 million.

These losses overshadowed the significant gains in management services in productivity in North America; the gains made in environmental services, and design engineering and construction and continued healthy results from European management service operations.

Commenting on the company's operating results, James A. Skidmore Jr., chairman and chief executive officer of SMC, said, ''SMC was caught in the cross currents of rapid change taking place in many of the markets for our services last year. We moved as swiftly as possible to deal with some difficult problems, reduced costs where possible at both the corporate and operating unit levels, and have intensified our marketing efforts. As we enter 1990, markets in some areas of our business continue to be difficult. We expect a loss in the first quarter primarily due to softness in new business in executive search toward the end of 1989, the rebuilding of our executive compensation practice and lower new bookings in recent months in productivity management services in North America.

MORRISTOWN, NJ (MARCH 16) BUSINESS WIRE - Anthony M. Aquino, Jr., a career banker, has been named chairman and chief executive officer of Morris Savings Bank, a unit of First Fidelity Bancorporation.

Aquino, who assumes his new position immediately, had been serving as president and chief operating officer of First Fidelity Bank, N.A., North Jersey, of Totowa.

He succeeds Richard F. Schaub, who has served as chairman and CEO of Morris Savings since 1986. Schaub, a veteran bank executive and former New Jersey State Banking Commissioner, resigned to pursue other business opportunities.

''We thank Dick Schaub for his many leadership contributions at Morris Savings and previously at First Fidelity's former West Jersey unit, which he also served as CEO,'' Anthony P. Terracciano, First Fidelity chairman, president and chief executive officer, said. ''We wish him every success in his future endeavors.''

''Tony Aquino will continue to build on Morris Savings Bank's reputation as an outstanding consumer savings bank and strengthen its already close links to its customers and its communities,'' Terracciano said.

Aquino has served with First Fidelity Bank, North Jersey, and a predecessor institution for 38 years, starting as a messenger at the age of 17. He was elected president and chief operating officer of First Fidelity North in 1989.

''I am excited about this opportunity to manage this special and unique financial institution,'' Aquino said. ''Customer service will continue to be Morris Savings' first priority.''

Aquino is a member of the Passaic Valley Council of the Boy Scouts of America and chairman of the Scouts 1990 Sustaining Membership Enrollment Campaign; chairman of the Passaic County Division of U.S. Savings Bonds, and a member of the New Jersey Bankers Association's Federal Legislation Committee. He also serves as secretary of the Charter Club of Paterson.

Aquino is a graduate of Rutgers University, the Stonier Graduate School of Banking and the Advanced Management Program of the Harvard University School of Business. An Army veteran, Aquino, 55, is a native of Paterson and now lives in Wayne. He is married and has a daughter.

A state-chartered savings bank, Morris Savings Bank operates 20 offices in Morris, Somerset, Hunterdon, Warren and Sussex Counties. Its parent company, First Fidelity Bancorporation, with $30.7 billion in assets is among the nation's 25 largest banking companies.

BETHESDA, MD (MARCH 16) BUSINESS WIRE - Survival Technology Inc. (NASDAQ:SURV) Friday announced unaudited results of operations for its fiscal 1990 second quarter and six months ended Jan. 31.

The company reported net income of $441,500 (16 cents per share) on sales of $4.8 million for the second quarter of fiscal 1990 compared with net income of $393,700 (14 cents per share) on sales of $5.1 million in the second quarter of fiscal 1989. For the first six months of the current fiscal year, the company reported a net loss of $1,051,400 (37 cents per share) on sales of $7.7 million compared with a net loss of $1,390,300 (49 cents per share) on sales of $8.1 million for the comparable six month period last year.

The company's return to profitability in the second quarter was due to the commencement of production and deliveries under two new commercial contracts and the award of a previously reported $4.1 million letter contract with the Department of Defense for production of Mark I Antidote kits.

Significant progress has been made in the expansion of the company's commercial business. During this most recent quarter, start-up production began on the company's patented CytoGuard vial adapter for Bristol-Myers Oncology Division, the exclusive U.S. distributor for this product. Second quarter revenues coupled with purchase orders received from Bristol-Myers has the company on target for CytoGuard sales to exceed $1 million in fiscal 1990.

Another commercial product in which start-up production began during the quarter ended Jan. 31 was the filling and packaging of the new FDA-approved drug Toradol for Syntex Laboratories (''Syntex'').

Toradol is a unique intramuscular injectable analgesic for the short term management of pain which is an alternative to narcotics. Syntex has issued purchase orders for three million syringes to be filled in the company's Cartrix syringe system during fiscal 1990 with the majority of these units to be produced and delivered in the third and fourth quarters.

Syntex plans to launch this product in late April or early May 1990 with its co-marketer, Hoffman-La Roche Inc. The company is continuing to negotiate with several other companies for futher expansion of its pharmaceutical contract filling and packaging services.

The current year-to-date loss is attributable to entering fiscal 1990 with no significant backlog for the production and delivery of military or commerical products which caused a discontinuation of production in October and November 1989 at the company's St. Louis manufacturing plant. This resulted in the first quarter net loss of $1.5 million and the cumulative loss of $1.1 million for the six months ended Jan. 31.

Survival Technology Inc. provides medical devices, pharmaceutical and monitoring services for the treatment of emergency medical problems. The company's products include automatic injectors for self-adminsitration by military personnel of antidotes against nerve gas and commercial auto-injectors, such as the EpiPen containing epinephrine for severe allergic reations and the LidoPen for treatment of cardiac arrhythmias.

Survival provides complete sterile parenteral contract filling and packaging services for prefilled syringes including pharmaceutical R&D. The company operates a transtelephonic cardiac monitoring service for high-risk heart patients, markets the CardioBeeper ECG transmitters and sells a line of airway and ventilation devices for use by parametic personnel.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 16) COMTEX - EuroAmerican Group Inc. filed a Form 8-K with the NASD stating it has filed suit in New York State Supreme Court against Standard & Poor's Corp. and certain persons associated with S&P.

The suit alleges that S&P and certain representatives fraudulently induced EuroAmerican to enter into an agreement in June, 1989 relating to the redistribution of the ticker data feed which was owned by S&P until June 30, 1989, when S&P sold the ticker data feed to Telekurs (N. America) Inc.

EuroAmerican charges that S&P was negotiating the sale of the ticker data feed to Telekurs at the same time it was renegotiating a previous agreement with EuroAmerican. EuroAmerican and Telekurs compete in the European market, where EuroAmerican conducts most of its business.

The suit alleges that S&P misrepresented its intentions to EuroAmerican as to its future plans to stay in the business of providing the ticker product and failed to disclose to EuroAmerican that the sale of the ticker products to Telekurs was imminent at the time S&P was renegotiating its agreement with EuroAmerican. EuroAmerican further maintains that the sale of the ticker product to Telekurs required its consent, which was not obtained.

EuroAmerican is seeking $3 million in compensatory damages and $10 million in punitive damages.

EuroAmerican is presently negotiating with Telekurs as to the course of their future relationship.

STAMFORD, CT (MARCH 16) COMTEX - The former chairman and CEO of Abbott Laboratories has sued the company over his removal from both positions earlier this year, and is asking that the company restore him to the chairman's slot and pay him compensatory damages.

Robert A. Schoellhorn filed suit March 9 in Cook County [Illinois] Circuit Court against the company and four directors, who made up Abbott Labs' organization and succession planning committees.

The four directors are W.D. Smithburg, H.L. Fuller, D.A. Jones and W.L. Weiss, according to a Securities and Exchange Commission filing.

Schoellhorn's suit challenges the propriety of the meetings and discussions between the two committees that led to his removal as CEO Jan. 1 and as chairman March 9.

On the latter day, the board elected the company's recently named CEO, Duane L. Burnham, as chairman to succeed Schoellhorn.

The suit seeks an injunction against Schoellhorn's removal as chairman and any change in his employment status.

The action also seeks compensatory and punitive damages from Abbott Labs.

SCHEDULE 13D

SEC - AMENDMENT NUMBER: 5

ANNOUNCEMENT:

On Mar. 14, 1990, Centaur Partners Group filed a complaint against National Intergroup (TICKER: NII) and its directors in the U.S. district court for the southern district of New York which stated that the board's recommendations that company stockholders should approve resolutions contained in the 1989 proxy statement would have the effect of limiting the rights plan (poison pill), and the shareholders' approval of these resolutions at the 1989 annual meeting based on those recommendations, constituted a contract between National Intergroup and its shareholders, creating a reasonable expectation that the poison pill would not be materially altered and that any new rights plan would be subject to shareholder approval.

According to the complaint, the board's announcement on Jan. 26, 1990 that it had amended the poison pill to, among other things, lower the 20 percent trigger to 10 percent is a radical and material alteration of the poison pill, which in effect, created a new pill without shareholder approval.

In addition to allegations of violations of the 1934 Exchange Act, the complaint alleges that directors breached their fiduciary duties by failing to rescind the Jan. 26 amendment or to exempt Centaur from its provisions related to Centaur's proposed purchase of up to 20 percent of National Intergroup's stock.

The suit seeks, among other things, a permanent injunction enjoining the defendants from enforcing the poison pill as to Centaur's purchases and a declaration that the amendment is unenforceable.

On Mar. 8, 1990, Centaur Partners IV filed a notice of appeal with the supreme court of Delaware with respect ot the Mar. 7, 1990 opinion and order, Delaware chancery court, granting National Intergroup's motion for summary judgment.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 16) COMTEX - The 8-K report filed at the SEC shows in a press release dated March 1, 1990, I.I.S. Intelligent Information Systems reported that revenues for its 1989 fiscal year were up six percent to $18.04 million from the previous year's totals of $17.10 million. Net income for those twelve months ended Dec. 31, 1989, was $3.90 million, or ten percent more than its 1988 total of $3.55 million. Earnings per share for fiscal 1989 and 1988 were $0.97 and $0.91, respectively.

Revenues for the quarter ended Dec. 31, 1989 were $5.43 million, up 15% from the same period in 1988, when they totalled $4.72 million. Net incomes for those periods were $918,000 and $955,000, respectively, a decrease of four percent. Earnings per share for the periods were $0.23 and $0.25, respectively.

Jacob Herbst, chairman of I.I.S. said, "The level of business in the 1989 fourth quarter was excellent. Earnings were reduced, however, because of normal year-end accounting adjustments."

He continued, "The level of business activity remains firm. In the first quarter, however, sales growth will be below average for the Company, since we are in the process of moving and consolidating manufacturing into a new facility. Shipments have been delayed, but not lost. This move will have no material impact on yearly results."

GROUP LED BY ER HOLDINGS INC OWNS 325,599 SHARES (1.643%) OF NORTON CO (TICKER: NRT) OF WORCESTER, MA.

ANNOUNCEMENT:

In a press release dated Mar. 16, 1990, BTR plc announced that ER Holdings Inc. commenced a cash tender offer to acquire all the outstanding shares of common stock of Norton Co. for $75 per share.

BTR has appealed to the Norton board for its endorsement, without which a takeover of the firm could be prevented for years under Massachusetts's tough antitakeover law.

In a March 16 letter to Norton Chairman and CEO John M. Nelson, BTR Managing Director and CEO John C. Cahill said the combination of the Massachusetts antitakeover law and Norton's ''poison pill'' shareholder rights plan could prevent a hostile takeover for three years.

In the event of a three-year delay, Cahill wrote,''the remaining shareholders of Norton would be precluded from obtaining the benefits of a combined enterprise, and would remain minority shareholders in Norton.''

Meantime, Cahill said his company is pursuing every legal option, including the possibility of proposing an alternative slate for election to the Norton board of directors at Norton's April 26 annual meeting.

London-based BTR has operations in more than 40 countries and had revenues in excess of $11.3 billion last year.

Norton makes construction materials.

TOKYO (MARCH 16) - Japanese wholesale prices in February rose 3.5 per cent from a year earlier and 0.1 percent from the preceding month, the Bank of Japan said Friday.

Domestic wholesale prices were up 2.5 percent from February last year and 0.1 percent from January, the central bank said. Export prices rose six per cent from a year earlier but were unchanged from the previous month, while import prices jumped 11.8 percent and 1.3 percent respectively.

The rise in domestic prices reflected the introduction of a three per cent comsumption tax in April last year while the surge in import prices mirrored the yen's decline againt the dollar, central bank officials said.

The overall wholesale price index for February stood at 89.8 against the base figure of 100 in 1985, the bank said.

LONDON (MARCH 16) - British conglomerate BTR on Friday launched a 1.64 billion dollar takeover bid for U.S. plastics, ceramics and abrasives maker Norton.

BTR, which earlier this week announced profits of more than a billion pounds (1.66 billion dollars) for 1989, is offering 75 dollars a share for Norton, above Thursday's New York closing price of 58.25 dollars.

The offer will become unconditional once BTR has received offers for two thirds of the capital of the Massachusetts-based group.

BTR, formerly British Tyre and Rubber, had a taxable profit of 1.08 billion pounds (1.74 billion dollars) last year on turnover of 7.02 billion pounds (11.7 billion dollars).

TOKYO (MARCH 16) - Japan's industrial output edged up 1.9 percent in January from the previous year and 0.1 percent from December, the Ministry of International Trade and Industry (MITI) said Friday.

The adjusted January figure fell from a 3.1 percent year-on-year rise in December, due largely to low production in the auto manufacturing sector, the ministry said.

The month-on-month increase for January was revised downward from a preliminary figure of 0.2 percent.

BORDEAUX, France (MARCH 16) - A French court has ordered the seizure of a Nigerian Airways plane for non-payment of five million dollars in debt.

Nigerian Airways sent the Airbus A-310 to Bordeaux in April for repairs and maintenance, but has been unable to remove it since aviation navigation company Eurocontrol in October called for its seizure against 28.6 million francs (five million dollars) it said it was owed by the Nigerian airline.

The court ordered that the plane not be moved while the case was considered, but Nigerian Airways argued that not being able to use it was costing it more tnan 31,000 dollars a day and claimed damages and interest of five million dollars.

After two weeks of deliberation, the Bordeaux appeal court on Thursday rejected the airline's argument and said the Airbus would have to stay in Bordeaux.

Two Nigerian Airways planes were seized by Airbus manufacturers Airbus Industrie last year for non-payment, but the two sides later reached agreement on a rescheduling of the Nigerian company's debt.

GOTHENBURG, Sweden (MARCH 16) - Swedish shipping company Stena Line said Friday it planned to acquire Sealink British Ferries from parent company Stena AB, making it the world's leading ferry company.

The decision came after Stena AB's successful joint takeover with Tiphook of Britain of Sea Containers.

The Stena Line board would recommend the 3.7 billion kronor (600 millon dollars) purchase to shareholders at a meeting on April 11.

Stena Line would acquire control of three cross-Channel routes operated by Sealink and two linking Britain and Ireland, as well as 15 vessels.

The move would make Stena Line the world's leading ferry company with 30 ships on 14 routes, employing 10,000 people and carrying almost 15 million passengers a year, Stena Line said in a statement.

Turnover in the first year would total some eight billion kronor (1.3 billion dollars).

WARSAW (MARCH 16) - Prices rose by 23.9 percent in Poland in February over the January level, taking price increases to 1,366 percent over a year, press reports said here Friday quoting official figures.

Prices had risen 78.6 percent in January.

Food prices rose 18.1 percent in February over the previous month's level, and 1,809 percent over the same month last year.

Non-food prices were up 32.4 percent, and 1,142 per cent on a 12-month basis.

But the figures marked a slowdown in inflation towards the end of the month, with food prices falling for the first time in the last week of February, dropping by 1.2 percent.

Households' buying power was trimmed 16.7 percent in February, after a 23.9 percent fall in January.

The Veto newspaper said that a Polish worker had to work for an hour and four minutes to earn enough money to buy a kilo (2.2 pounds) of bread, up from a mere 13 minutes in February last year.

It would take almost four hours to earn enough for a kilo of sausages, against an hour and a half a year ago, and nine hours to pay for a half litre of vodka, up from seven hours.

BONN (MARCH 16) - The first meeting of the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe (CSCE) on European economic cooperation, which opens here Monday, is unlikely to touch on questions raised by reform in Eastern Europe.

The conference, which begins a day after East Germany's first democratic election, will gather almost 1,000 delegates and aims at "bringing more openness to economic relations between European states," according to host West Germany.

But issues such as debt, restrictions on sensitive technology exports to the Eastern bloc, energy policy and Eastern European countries' entry into the European Economic Community are unlikely to be addressed because of disagreement between CSCE members on these matters.

It is the first time that the CSCE, which groups 35 countries - all of Europe apart from Albania, plus the United States and Canada, has has held a conference devoted entirely to economic questions.

West German Economy Minister Helmut Haussmann has stressed the importance of such a meeting at a time when moves towards a market economy in Eastern Europe are opening up a huge market to Western companies.

West German officials have been anxious to deny that the meeting has already been overtaken by events despite the likely failure to address many controversial issues.

Legislation on joint ventures, for example, needs to be discussed as it varies widely from country to country, and conference secretary general Waldemar Mueller-Thuns has said that "access to Eastern bloc markets still generally remains difficult."

Environment, science and the economy are one of the three areas laid down in the Helsinki Final Act of 1975, but hitherto the CSCE's activities have been dominated by the other two, security and human rights.

TAIPEI (MARCH 16) - Taiwan's Eva Airways Corp. and Austria's Lauda Air are expected to begin service between the two destinations after they gain approval from the authorities here, an Eva official said Friday.

She said Eva had secured landing rights in Austria, Vietnam, Thailand and Malaysia and was expecting approval to open services to those countries.

Lauda Air would inaugurate a twice-weekly service to Taipei with stops in Singapore and Bangkok on May 20 if the Taipei government grants the airline reciprocal landing rights, the official said.

Under an agreement signed between the two airlines in December, Eva would start serving the same route on April 1 next year with two new Boeing 767s.

The route would be the private airline's first since it was established a year ago, the official said.

Details involving its flights to Vietnam, Thailand and Malaysia are yet to be finalized, she added.

Taiwan's flag carrier, China Airlines, has experienced difficulties in obtaining landing rights in some countries because of its official status. Most countries recognize the government in Beijing and not the government here.

Eva, Taiwan's only private international airline, is a wholly owned subsidiary of the Taipei-based Evergreen Group, which runs the world largest container shipping fleet.

The airline has ordered an additional 26 passenger jets worth 3.6 billion U.S. dollars and scheduled for delivery from 1992.

It changed its name from "Evergreen Airways" after finding an airline in the United States was already using that name.

KUALA LUMPUR (MARCH 16) - Malaysia has asked Britain and Ireland to allow more locally-produced cars to enter their markets under their generalised system of preferences (GSP), Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamad said Friday.

Dr. Mahathir said exports of the Malaysian national car, the Proton Saga, had reached the limits of the GSP of both countries. The GSP allows tariff-free imports or imports at special tariff rates.

Dr. Mahathir said 10,800 Saga's were exported to Britain, its most successful overseas market, last year and 3,000 in the first three months of this year.

The request for higher limits was made at a recent ministerial meeting of the European Economic Community and the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) which groups Brunei, Indonesia, Malaysia, the Philippines, Singapore and Thailand.

The Proton Saga, which is produced jointly with Japan's Mitsubishi group, has captured 80 percent of the domestic market since it was launched in 1984.

Exports to Britain, Ireland, Singapore, New Zealand, Jamaica, Bangladesh, Brunei and Nauru amounted to 11,857 vehicles last year or 18 percent of total sales.

Dr. Mahathir said the national car plant, Perusahaan Otomobil Nasional, was expected to make a profit of 100 million dollars (37 million U.S.) for the year ending March 31 compared to 32 million dollars (12 million) in the previous financial year.

TOKYO (MARCH 16) - The Bank of Japan will ask the country's 12 major commercial banks to restrict fund lending in the April-June period, Kyodo News Service quoted a central bank source as saying Friday.

In an effort to forestall inflation, the Japanese central bank asked the commercial banks to cut their lending by 14.7 percent in January-March from the level in the same period of last year.

The Bank of Japan is expected to call for a reduction of more than 14 per cent in lending in the coming three months, the source was quoted as saying.

Johannesburg (MARCH 16) - Thousands of blacks living in townships near Johannesburg fled their homes Thursday night after seemingly unfounded rumours that right-wing Zulu vigilantes were planning to attack and kill them, police reported Friday.

While women and children sought refuge in police stations and hospitals, men remained behind to protect property in the Sebokeng township, arming themselves with garden implements and erecting barricades.

A police ''unrest report'' said a middle-aged couple died of shock when they heard the township's young men were to be executed by the ''Zulus''.

A spate of violence has left about 110 people dead this month alone and on Thursday it claimed its first white victim, a motorist.

State-run radio reported that the man had been hacked to death after being forced to stop his car on a highway near Johannesburg by a mob wielding machetes.

In Vereeniging, south of Johannesburg, a 17-year-old white schoolgirl was seriously injured when a black mob hurled a garden fork through the window of a car she was travelling in.

In Cape Town all heart and kidney transplant operations were suspended at the Groote Schuur hospital after workers in their 12th day of a wage strike rampaged through the hospital assaulting staff and damaging property.

Twenty-five Cape province hospitals have been affected by strikes.

Bonn (MARCH 16) - Morocco will receive 65 million marks (38.2 million dollars) in financing from West Germany for water-related projects in the North African kingdom, Bonn's Ministry for Economic Cooperation announced Friday.

A ministry spokesman said the bulk of the funds - 63.5 million marks - would go to Morocco as a grant intended to help guarantee drinking-water supplies and improve sewage disposal facilities.

Beyond the 65-million-mark sum, another 18.5 million marks in technical assistance was to be made available for water-quality control, training of farmers and development of renewable-energy sources, the spokesman said.

BONN (MARCH 16) - West German group Mannesmann said Friday it was to almost double its stake in British engineering concern TI Group from five per cent to 9.9 percent by buying shares on the stock market.

TI Group shares rose 17 pence in London on the news, to 467 pence.

Mannesmann said it was not setting any time limit to achieve 9.9 per cent and that it was acting in full agreement with TI Group, "as recent months have shown that there are possibilities for fruitful cooperation between the two groups."

Mannesmann took a stake in TI in September.

TI is a major sub-contractor for the auto industry. Mannesmann was originally a tube and piping maker but has diversified in recent years.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 16) - U.S. industrial production rose 0.6 percent in February following a revised decline of 1.0 percent in January, the Federal Reserve reported Friday.

The Federal Reserve attributed the gain to the return of autoworkers laid off the previous month to reduce bloated motor vehicle inventories.

"Excluding motor vehicles and related industries, production was little changed," said the Fed report.

January's output had been estimated to have fallen 1.2 percent.

In a second report, the Federal Reserve said that the operating rate of the country's factories - which measures not only output but also changes in productivity levels - rose 0.3 percent to 82.3 percent in February.

Motor vehicle production in February was more than five percent below its December level, according to the report.

ABIDJAN (MARCH 18) - President Felix Houphouet-Boigny - hemmed in by mounting political and economic pressures - has brought forward the congress of his ruling Ivory Coast Democratic Party (PDCI) by six months, paving the way for a possible power hand-over.

The congress, due in October, will be held in May or June. It meets every five years to elect the party's presidential candidate and on the past six occasions has chosen Mr. Houphouet-Boigny. He was last elected in 1985 with 100 per cent of votes cast.

But the 84-year-old West African leader's 30-year reign appears to be coming to an end amid unprecedented personal attacks and an economic and political crisis which has shaken the country to its foundations.

Ivory Coast is in the grips of its worst economic crisis. Last October Mr. Houphouet-Boigny halved the guaranteed prices paid to peasants for their crops.

To face up to the crisis the government announced on Thursday it would impose salary cuts for those earning more than 100,000 CFA francs (350 dollars) starting at eight per cent and rising, according to earnings, to 17 per cent. There will also be a five to 10 percent solidarity tax for workers in the private sector.

Ministers and state corporation heads face salary cuts of 40 percent.

The government, undoubtedly mindful of the street protests that have already erupted over the planned austerity package, has not yet said when the measures will go into effect. On March 2 demonstrators in Abdijan and other major cities took to the streets, chanting anti-Houphouet-Boigny slogans and branding him a "thief."

The Ivory Coast leader went on television Thursday to plead that he had no choice but to impose a fresh dose of austerity. "If nothing is done, the government will not be able to pay its civil servants in four or five months. Our back is against the wall," he said.

Abidjan was calm Friday although there was high profile security to deter potential demonstrators. In the Abidjan suburb of Treichville a planned demonstration in support of Mr. Houphouet-Boigny was called off at the last minute by organisers without reason.

NEW YORK (MARCH 16) - Imelda Marcos appeared Friday for a court hearing here on her rackeetering trial, which begins next week.

The widow of former Philippine president Ferdinand Marcos, who died in exile in Honolulu last September 28, entered the U.S. District Court accompanied by her attorney, Gerald Spence.

She was scheduled to appear before federal judge John Keenan with one of her co-defendants, Saudi businessman Adnan Khashoggi.

Jury selection is slated to begin Tuesday for her trial on charges of racketeering, racketeering conspiracy, mail fraud and obstruction of justice.

Mrs. Marcos, 60, arrived in New York Thursday on a commercial flight from Honolulu, where she has lived since a popular revolt ousted her husband in 1986.

Mrs. Marcos has pleaded innocent to charges of defrauding the Philippine treasury of 103 million dollars and extorting 165 million dollars from three U.S. financial institutions to buy real estate in Manhattan.

She recently refused a deal with the prosecution in which she would have pleaded guilty in order to avoid a prison sentence. Apparently negotiations snagged on the amount of money Mrs. Marcos would have to pay in fines.

CAPE TOWN (MARCH 16) - An extra one billion rand (387 million dollars) will be added to the two billion rand Social Fund launched by Finance Minister Barend du Plessis in his budget speech, President Frederik de Klerk announced here Friday.

The money, to be used to help blacks raise their living standards, is to come from the government's privatization program, Mr. De Klerk said, with the electricity generating company Eskom next on the list, following the successful flotation of the giant Iron and Steel Corporation (ISCOR) last October.

A third of the fund would be administered direct by government to upgrade black education and to buy land "for black urbanisation so that it may proceed in a well-ordered fashion wherever it takes place in South Africa " he said.

The rest, including the sum to come from selling off state assets, would "form the basis of a Trust to be administered outside the direct ambit of the government, so that the private sector and other institutions inside South Africa may also contribute to it," he said.

Moscow (MARCH 16) - Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev Friday ordered the break-away republic of Lithuania to inform him within three days of the ways in which it intended to honour a resolution of the Congress of People's Deputies labelling the republic's secessionist moves as ''illegal and invalid''.

The Tass news agency said the ultimatum was contained in a letter from Gorbachev, whose powers have been consolidated at the Congress here, to President Vytautas Landsbergis of Lithuania.

TOULOUSE, FRANCE (MARCH 16) - Bad weather conditions prevented a French satellite Friday from taking photographs of a Libyan chemical plant, said to have been ravaged by fire on Wednesday, the satellite's owners said here.

A spokesman for the Spot-Image company said the SPOT-2 satellite yielded only "pictures covered with clouds" when it overflew the plant, which several western countries have alleged is producing chemical weapons.

But the firm said that a sister satellite, SPOT-1, will fly over the plant Sunday and, weather permitting, should produce accurate photographs by Tuesday.

Libya has denied that the factory at Rabta, 80 kilometers (50 miles) south of Tripoli, is being used for the production of chemical weapons, stressing that it is a pharmaeceutical plant.

In Washington, U.S. security sources said that the plant had been virtually destroyed.

The Libyan government has said the fire was rapidly extinguished.

The French space center in this southwestern city has asked the satellite company to take pictures of Rabta.

Meanwhile in Bonn, a government spokesman issued a further denial of involvement in causing the fire at Rabta, following charges by Libyan leader Moammar Ghadhafi that West German intelligence services were suspected of involvement in "spying and sabotage for the interests of imperialism and Zionism".

Shortly after Colonel Ghadhafi's statement, 2,000 Libyans demonstrated outside the West German embassy in Tripoli.

West German Foreign Ministry spokesman Juergen Chrobog dismissed Col. Ghadhafi's suspicions and said Bonn had protested to Tripoli over the failure of the Libyan police to intervene to clear the approaches to the embassy.

Bonn condemned all attempts to "stir up the population" against West Germany, he said.

MOSCOW (MARCH 16) - A U.S. spy satellite launched by the space shuttle Atlantis two weeks ago was disintegrating over Soviet territory and could fall to earth later this month, the Novosti news agency said Friday.

The agency, citing reliable sources, said that the satellite was involved in spying, adding that it would come down over northern Soviet territory between March 19 and April 15.

Novosti, which is known to have close ties with the Soviet KGB secret police, said that four large sections of the disintegrating satellite had been detected in orbit by Soviet space control on March 7.

HONG KONG (MARCH 16) - Cambodian resistance leader Prince Norodom Sihanouk met Chinese President Yang Shangkun on Friday, the New China News Agency (NCNA) reported.

The prince, who returned to Cambodia last month to live in an area controlled by his forces, arrived in Beijing on Wednesday for a "working visit" of unspecified duration, according to the official Chinese news agency, monitored here.

Mr. Yang reportedly told Prince Sihanouk that his return to Cambodia showed that the "resistance forces have grown greatly and the liberated areas have enlarged and consolidated" under the prince's leadership.

Mr. Yang told the prince that China supported his efforts toward a peaceful settlement in Cambodia, NCNA said.

Prince Sihanouk, 68, formerly resided most of the time in Beijing until he returned to northern Cambodia on February 23, ending a decade of exile.

He has settled in a site named Sereipheap, in the district of Samrong, across from Thailand's border province of Surin.

The prince leads one of two non-communist factions joined in an uneasy alliance with the powerful Chinese-backed Khmer Rouge, fighting to topple the Hanoi-installed Phnom Penh government.

Vietnam invaded Cambodia 11 years ago to overthrow a Khmer Rouge regime blamed for genocide during its nearly four years in power.

ABIDJAN (MARCH 16) - Jean-Christophe Mitterrand, French presidential advisor for African affairs, met Ivory Coast President Felix Houphouet-Boigny, here Friday, official sources annouced.

"France is the Ivory Coast's best friend. The financial figures show it," the son of French President Francois Mitterand told the Ivorian media shortly after his meeting with the head of state.

He said he supported austerity measures, including salary cuts of five to 40 percent, taken on Thursday by Mr. Houphouet-Boigny to bring the West African country out of a deepening economic crisis.

Ivory Coast, the world's leading cocoa exporter, has been hard hit by a slump in world market commodity prices.

The country has been rocked for the past month by student riots and popular unrest against proposed austerity cuts which were formally announced Thursday.

Mr. Houphouet-Boigny, 84, took local politicians by surprise Monday when he told French television that the congress of his ruling Ivory Coast Democratic Party would choose his successor by the end of the year.

Mr. Houphouet-Boigny has ruled the country since independence from France in 1960.

Analysis By: David E. Anderson

(MARCH 16) UPI - Priests feel poorly equipped to function as confessors and lay Catholics have a diminished appreciation for the value of confession, according to a new study by the National Conference of Catholic Bishops.

The study, one of the most thorough examinations of the Sacrament of Penance among U.S. Catholics, comes in the wake of a sharp decline in the frequency of confession and penance among the laity in the past 25 years. It was based on questionnaires sent to all bishops, a random sample of 2,500 priests and a sample of the laity in three dioceses.

"The study presents us with a snapshot of the reception of the sacrament of Penance as it is in the United States today," said the Rev. Michael Walsh, executive director of the bishops' Secretariat for Pastoral Research and Practices. "What we are hoping is that people will take a look at the study and reflect on the place of the sacrament in their own lives."

Currently, there are three different rites for the celebration of the sacrament in use in the United States. The first rite - the traditional form - involves individual confession and absolution, generally in a one-on-one encounter between a person and a priest. A second rite also involves individual confession and absolution but is combined with a communal penance service.

The third rite is general absolution that is used in situations where large numbers of penitents make the hearing of individual confessions nearly impossible. While this rite has found much favor among the laity and priests, bishops generally frown on its use except in extraordinary circumstances and do not favor its expanded use.

Cultural changes may have had the most important impact on the declining frequency of Catholics going to confession. All three surveys - of bishops, priests and laity - point to a changed understanding of sin as a primary factor affecting the practice of confession. In many cases people no longer understand sin exclusively as a transgression of the law, while at the same time they have come to a new appreciation of the love and mercy of God, the study said.

"The individual Catholic's moral reasoning and judgment may be profoundly affected" by the contemporary cultural situation, including the individualism and pluralism and competing moral views that mark American society. "The naming, confronting, repenting, and confessing of one's sins is never easy. Amid the cacophony of moral claims, it becomes even more difficult."

"This culture of ours can make it extraordinarily difficult to hear that the fulfillment of human freedom is not self-determination but self-transcendence, and to acknowledge, let alone submit to, the claims on human freedom posed by God and others," the study said.

But the three groups also had some sharp disagreements on reasons for the decline of the sacrament. Bishops pointed to the "less pervasive sense of sin" as the most significant factor, which the laity put in seventh place, tied with a "general confusion over what is right or wrong," which priests named as the leading cause of a decline in the number of confessions.

The laity said "reconciliation experienced by other means" was the biggest factor in people not attending confession. It urged the church to re-articulate its role in relation to the doctrine of sin.

"The role of the church as the community which helps to form the conscience and to shape one's identity as a moral agent needs to be more conscious in the minds of people," it said.

SAN DIEGO (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - Through a joint marketing plan, Radio Shack and Jostens Learning Corp. have developed the new Home Learning System for the education market, to be sold to schools by Jostens Learning.

The basic components of the Home Learning System are a Tandy 1000 SL/2 personal computer, specially configured with an internal CD-ROM drive and one 3.5-inch, 720KB disc drive, and Jostens Learning's reading and mathematics curriculum for grades K-8.

"This is a tool that gives students more time on task by making learning fun," said John Kernan, president and CEO of Jostens Learning. "Finally education can compete with some of the other technologies in the home environment, like TV and video games."

Targeted to school districts only, the Home Learning System can be used: -- at home as an extension of the school computer lab; -- as a Felton or Chapter 1 solution for non-public schools; -- as part of a school's total instructional solution for home-bound students.

"The Home Learning System will also help to strengthen the bond between the school and the community. Schools will, in effect, be giving parents an opportunity to actively participate in the education of their children, in the familiar setting of their own homes," said Jim McGrody, vice president of the Radio Shack Education Division.

Proven by its use in more than 4,000 schools, the curriculum by Jostens Learning includes more than 1,800 self-paced, computerized lessons in reading and mathematics. It also provides interactive instruction for students and sophisticated reports for both teachers and parents.

Radio Shack, a division of Tandy Corp. (NYSE: TAN), is a major provider of MS-DOS-compatible personal computers to the K-12 education market. Company headquarters are located in Fort Worth, Texas.

Jostens Learning is the largest provider of K-12 instructional technology solutions in the United States, and is a wholly owned subsidiary of Minneapolis-based Jostens Inc. (NYSE: JOS), a supplier of school-related products for nearly 100 years.

SANTA BARBARA, CA (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - Mentor Corp. (NASDAQ: MNTR) announced today that it has agreed to acquire Mentor O & O Inc., a privately held company, for $14 million in cash, plus future royalties on a new product not yet released. The purchase is expected to be completed in April 1990.

Mentor O & O Inc. develops, manufactures and markets ophthalmic surgical and diagnostic products. For the fiscal year ended March 31, 1989, Mentor O & O Inc. generated approximately $12.6 million in revenues and $1.3 million in pretax operating income. Mentor O & O Inc. is based in Norwell Mass., employs approximately 110 people, and has no previous affiliation with Mentor Corp.

Christopher J. Conway, chairman and chief executive officer of Mentor Corp., said "This acquisition is strategically significant for Mentor because it provides a strong base for growth in an attractive surgical specialty market in addition to those we presently reach. Mentor O & O has developed a line of propriety products which are leaders in the market niches they serve. The products combine superior performance with cost-effectiveness, and we believe they are well-positioned to take advantage of cost containment pressures in the ophthalmic surgery market. We are pleased with the company's seasoned management team, which is well equipped to lead Mentor O & O for profitable growth in the ophthalmic surgical and disgnostic market. We are also very pleased to announce that Dr. Richard W. Young, chairman and chief executive officer of Mentor O & O has agreed to join the board of directors of Mentor Corporation, where his experience and expertise will be of great value to us."

Speaking for Mentor O & O, Young said, "Joining forces with Mentor Corporation will speed the development of new products and extend the applications of our technologies to new markets. Many of our products are targeted to serve the fast-growing ophthalmic markets overseas, which we can reach more effectively with a combined international presence."

Mentor Corp., based in Santa Barbara, develops, manufactures and markets surgical products for the specialties of cosmetic and reconstructive surgery and urology, and disposable products for hospital and home health care.

RICHMOND, VA (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - With the March 15 mailing of claim packets to Dalkon Shield wearers, the Dalkon Shield Claimants Trust can now settle claims under all four settlement options.

"After too many years of delay, the wheels of justice can begin to turn. Women who were injured by the Dalkon Shield now can select the option that best compensates them for their injuries," said Georgene Vairo, chair of the Dalkon Shield Claimants Trust.

Option 1, which has been available since December 1988, is designed for claimants with minor injuries or no medical records. It involves no review of medical records and offers Dalkon Shield wearers a fixed payment of $725. Approximately 85,000 claimants have already selected Option 1.

Option 2, requiring limited review of medical records, pays claimants for their most serious injury. Payments range from $850 to $5,500. Option 2 does not require claimants to prove that the Dalkon Shield caused their injury.

"Option 2 pays claimants who, if they were to take their cases to court, would possibly get little or nothing," said Vairo. "The Trust is pleased to offer these claimants more compensation than would have been possible without the bankruptcy plan."

Option 3 requires full review of medical records and proof that the Dalkon Shield caused the injuries. No payment schedule has been released for Option 3 because the Trust's settlement offer will be based on variables that will differ from case to case.

"We believe that Option 3 should be selected by claimants who have medical records that prove the Dalkon Shield and no other IUD or medical condition caused serious injury," said Vairo.

Option 4 defers review of the claim if a claimant has no injuries at this time or feels his or her injuries might worsen. Claimants can also withdraw their claim if they do not wish to pursue it.

The Dalkon Shield Claimants Trust was established in July 1988 to compensate the women, men, and children who were injured through the use of the Dalkon Shield intrauterine device manufactured and distributed by the A.H. Robins Company. The Trust was funded on December 15, 1989 when American Home Products Corporation merged with Robins and paid $2.23 billion to the Trust.

CHATSWORTH, CA (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - The Software Toolworks, Inc. (NASDAQ: TWRX) today announced that it has completed the acquisition of Mindscape Inc. through the merger of Mindscape with a wholly owned subsidiary of the company. As a result of the merger each outstanding share of Mindscape common stock has been converted into the right to receive .4375 shares of newly issued The Software Toolworks common stock.

At this exchange ratio, the approximately 3.46 million outstanding shares of Mindscape were converted into the right to receive approximately 1.52 million shares of The Software Toolworks. The Software Toolworks will account for the merger as a pooling of interests transaction. The merger is designed to be a tax-free transaction for Mindscape shareholders.

"With the acquisition of Mindscape, The Software Toolworks has become one of the larger companies in our segment of the industry," states Les Crane, chairman and chief executive officer. "This acquisition diversifies our product mix, broadens our presence in international markets, enhances our management team and will significantly increase our revenues."

Mindscape develops and distributes in North America certain game cartridges for the Nintendo Entertainment System and develops, publishes and distributes a broad line of microcomputer software products for the consumer markets, and owns software distributing and publishing subsidiaries serving European and Pacific Rim markets. For the nine months ended Sept. 30, 1989, Mindscape had revenues of $27.9 million.

Roger Buoy, president and chief executive officer of Mindscape has been named president of the entertainment and international divisions of The Software Toolworks. In addition, he will serve as the creative director of the combined companies, responsible for new entertainment product development.

Crane also announced that The Software Toolworks board of directors has declared a 100 percent stock dividend (the equivalent of a 2-for-1 stock split). The dividend is payable on April 4, 1990 to all shareholders of record of common stock as of March 26, 1990. The Software Toolworks will have 19,995,598 common shares outstanding after the payment of the stock dividend.

The Software Toolworks is a vertically integrated, diversified software company that develops and publishes entertainment, educational, personal productivity and utility software for retail distribution and for license. It also operates Priority Software Packaging, a disk duplicating software packaging and printing company. For the nine months ended Dec. 31, 1989, the company had revenues of approximately 16 million.

(NYSE: SCR) approved yesterday the company's proposed recapitalization plan calling for sale of certain container and ferry assets to Tiphook PLC and Stena AB, respectively, with part of the proceeds to be used by the Company and subsidiaries to purchase 7 million common shares at $70 per share.

The vote was 9.9 million shares in favor of the recapitalization plan and 1.6 million shares against. The company's board of directors was re-elected and its auditors reappointed.

The company also announced its earnings for 1989. Net income was $100.3 million compared with $85.2 million in 1988 on revenue of $1.0 billion compared to 875.3 million in the prior year. Net earnings on common shares were $77.0 million ($7.15 per common share) compared with $67.4 million ($5.87 per common share) in 1988. In 1988 the company enjoyed a net extraordinary gain of $22 million and if this is disregarded the improvement in operating net earnings has increased 60 percent in 1989 over 1988.

James B. Sherwood, president, said definitive asset sale agreements have now been executed with Stena and Tiphook and the path was now clear to complete the asset sales by the end of March, the target date, and to complete the share purchase program in early April.

Sherwood in his presentation said that the company is forecasting $10 per common share of net earnings in 1990, rising to $13 in 1991, based on 5 million common shares remaining in the hands of parties other than the company's subsidiaries and given a continuance of the stable market conditions which have prevailed in 1989.

In response to a question he said that he had not yet made a final determination whether to tender any part of his own shares into the tender offer but he presently anticipated holding a post recapitalization stake of 10 percent of the common shares not owned by subsidiaries.

Sherwood emphasized that the company following recapitalization would be engaged primarily in specialized marine container leasing and related activities, with special emphasis on refrigerated container transport; ferries and ports with special emphasis on high speed car and passenger transport; and property development primarily in the U.K. He pointed out that the staff is highly experienced in all these businesses and the company already has good market shares, limited competition and the ability to fund meaningful growth.

NEW YORK (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - County NatWest today announced it has more than doubled its research, sales and trading capabilities in the United States with the addition of some 60 equities staff to its New York office. It is also represented in other U.S. cities.

In London, County NatWest has added a further 24 staff to its existing U.S. desk. The 30-strong team will sell and distribute U.S. research to major U.K. institutions and will be supported by a European network of sales and distribution staff in various locations in due course.

Commenting on the expansion, Tim Ferguson, chief executive of County NatWest's worldwide equity securities operation, said: "The establishment of a credible and profitable securities business in the U.S. confirms our commitment to the international equities market. This additional capability, together with our plans to develop a full sales and distribution matrix across Europe, will enable us to supply quality research to our worldwide customers in their domestic markets."

Among those who have joined County Natwest Securities in New York are Arthur S. Kirsch as president and chief executive and John Kellenyi as director of research. Jim Furlong will be responsible for the London-based U.S. desk covering the United Kingdom and Europe. All were formerly employed in Drexel Burnham Lambert's successful equities operations.

"One of the keys to our success is reaching critical mass," said Kirsch. "I think institutions are quickly going to recognize the value-added, bottom-line focus of our U.S. research product."

LAS VEGAS (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - Circus Circus Enterprises Inc. (NYSE: CIR) today announced its results for the fourth quarter and fiscal year ended Jan. 31, 1990.

For the fourth quarter, Circus reported earnings per share of $.43 compared with $.37 in last year's same quarter. Net income was $12,373,000 compared with $11,570,000, while revenues were $118,548,000 against $115,685,000. Average shares outstanding were 28.6 million versus 31.1 million, reflecting the company's continuing policy of share repurchase.

The largest part of the company's growth in operating income in the quarter derived from its two Laughlin properties, which offset a mild decline in operating results in Las Vegas. Walk-in traffic at Circus Circus-Las Vegas was somewhat below normal levels, as a large new competitor in Las Vegas attracted an initial rush of visitors. At Circus Circus-Reno, meanwhile, operating results in the quarter were moderately above those of a year ago.

During the quarter the company also recognized a writeoff of approximately $1.4 million, related to the demolition of certain rooms and a restaurant at the Edgewater Hotel and Casino, as part of an expansion project involving a 988-room tower.

For the full year, Circus reported earnings per share of $2.60 compared with $2.29 on the same operating basis as last year -- an increase of 14 percent. In last year's first quarter, the company recorded a one-time benefit to earnings of approximately $9.2 million, or $.29 per share, related to the reduction of its deferred tax liability, which brought earnings per share to $2.58 for the full year. Net income for fiscal 1990 was $75,604,000 compared with $72,479,000 in fiscal 1989, before last year's one-time benefit. Revenues were $522,376,000 against $511,960,000. Average shares outstanding were 28.9 million versus 31.7 million.

Circus operates six properties in Nevada: the Circus Circus casino-hotels in Las Vegas and Reno; the Colorado Belle and the Edgewater Hotel and Casino in Laughlin; and Slots-A-Fun Casino and Silver City in Las Vegas. The company's seventh property, Excalibur, a 4,032-room resort based on a medieval castle theme, is now under construction in Las Vegas and scheduled to open in late June.

TWINSBURG, OH (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - Anac Holding Corporation, parent of Revco D.S., Inc., today reported that for the third quarter of its 1990 fiscal year, sales were $713.2 million, a 7.3 percent increase over the previous year's third quarter sales of $664.6 million, despite 16 fewer stores than at the close of the same quarter last year and despite the divestiture of Revco's Insta-Care Pharmacy Services subsidiary. For the first nine months of the fiscal year, sales were $1.93 billion, a 6.1 percent increase over the previous year's sales of $1.82 billion for the same period.

Net loss for the quarter was $192.6 million, which includes a one- time non-cash charge to pre-tax earnings of $233 million ($185.2 million after-tax) to accrue for costs associated with Revco's previously announced divestiture program (A). Net loss for the third quarter last year was $6.0 million.

Excluding the effect of the provision for store divestitures, operating profit before depreciation and amortization improved 5.4 percent to $26.2 million for the quarter, compared to $24.8 million last year. Operating profit before depreciation and amortization increased 45.4 percent to $56.1 million for the first nine months of the fiscal year, compared to $38.6 million last year.

Gregory K. Raven, executive vice president and chief financial officer, said, "Looking beyond the one-time charge recorded for our divestiture program, Revco's operating results continue to show evidence of our turnaround. Each quarter of this fiscal year has shown sales and operating profit steadily improving. Comparable store sales have increased nearly 10 percent for the nine-month period over last year."

Boake A. Sells, chairman and chief executive officer, added, "It is rewarding to see how the tremendous efforts of our people are paying off in Revco's improved performance. Our prescription volume, average transaction per customer and average sales per store are all up. We had an excellent Christmas selling season. Clearly, customers are telling us they like our service, our products, and our stores."

Sells also added that the company continues to work with its creditors toward a consensual plan of reorganization.

Privately held Revco, based in Twinsburg, Ohio, has annual sales in excess of $2.7 billion and fills more than 66 million prescriptions yearly.

OAK BROOK, IL (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - Spiegel, Inc. (NASDAQ-NMS: SPGLA), the nation's largest direct marketer, today announced that its board of directors has declared a regular quarterly dividend of 7 cents per share and a special dividend of 10 cents per share on the company's common stock. This regular quarterly dividend reflects an increase from previous quarter's dividends, which were 5 cents per share. The dividends are payable on April 3, 1990 to stockholders of record on March 27, 1990.

In announcing the dividends, Spiegel Vice Chairman, President and Chief Executive Officer John J. Shea said: "Spiegel had another outstanding year in 1989 with sales and earnings achieving record highs. And, while the special dividend shares the year's success with stockholders, it should not be assumed that this represents a change in Spiegel's current dividend policy, which states the company's intention to pay regular quarterly dividends."

Spiegel, Inc., is the nation's largest catalog direct marketer and a leading specialty retailer. The company markets wearing apparel, household furnishings and other merchandise through semi-annual and specialty catalogs distributed to more than 30 million U.S. households. Wholly owned specialty retail subsidiaries of Spiegel include Eddie Bauer, Inc., and Honeybee, Inc. SYOSSET, NY (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - Viatech, Inc. (AMEX: VTK) Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Donald J. Bainton today announced the results for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989.

Revenues for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989, were $119,807,000 compared with $80,748,000 for the year ended Dec. 31, 1988, an increase of 48 percent. For the year ended Dec. 31, 1989, the company reported income before extraordinary items of $1,545,000 or $1.22 per share, an increase of 31 percent over income before extraordinary items of $1,178,000 or $.96 per share, reported for 1988. Net income for 1989 was $1,672,000 or $1.32 per share (which includes an extraordinary gain of $.10) compared with net income of $1,705,000 or $1.39 per share, (which includes an extraordinary gain of $.43) for the year ended Dec. 31, 1988.

Bainton stated, "This is a historic year for Viatech. We have achieved several significant milestones which include the growth of Viatech's sales to over $100 million, the acquisition of Ferembal, the second largest producer of food cans in France, and record sales of packaging machines by Dixie Union, our West German packaging subsidiary.

"In 1990, we believe that Viatech will again achieve record sales as we take advantage of the synergies that exist among our subsidiaries, and continue to aggressively pursue acquisitions of profitable companies which will further diversify and strengthen our international packaging business."

Bainton continued, "In addition, we strengthened our balance sheet through our private placement with an investment banking firm in London of 460,000 shares of common stock for a gross selling price, including commission and underwriting expenses, of $7.59 million. This placement has allowed reduction of long term debt incurred with regard to the equity investment in Ferembal and has provided a cash position to finance internal growth and for potential acquisitions."

Viatech, Inc., and its subsidiaries provide engineering services principally in the fields of mapping and survey, transportation, structures, site and landscape development, recreation and environmental studies, and mechanical and electrical engineering. The company also manufactures cans, film and equipment for the packaging industry, and prints and laminates packaging for the food and snack food industries.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - V. Orville Wright is retiring from the Office of Chief Executive of the MCI Communications Corporation

(NASDAQ-NMS: MCIC), the company said today. He will continue as vice chairman and a member of the MCI board of directors and will serve as a consultant to the corporation.

William G. McGowan will resume sole responsibilities as chairman and chief executive officer. Wright, who first retired from active service with MCI in 1985, was named acting CEO in 1987 when he returned to active service following a heart attack to McGowan. He later was named to the Office of the Chief Executive.

Wright first joined MCI in 1975 as president and chief operating officer. When he retired from those positions in 1985, Bert C. Roberts Jr., MCI's present president and chief operating officer, succeeded him.

Prior to his MCI service, Wright had participated in the development of a number of major diversified high-technology companies including IBM, Xerox Corporation and the RCA Computer Systems Development Division.

During Wright's service with MCI, the company grew to become the country's second largest long distance firm with 1989 annual revenues of $6.47 billion, serving its customers with a variety of worldwide long distance telephone, data and messaging services.

MIAMI (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - General Development Corporation (NYSE: GDV) announced today that it had entered into a plea agreement with the United States Attorney for the Southern District of Florida to plead guilty to one count of having conspired through certain of its officers to violate the Federal mail fraud statute.

General Development agreed to pay a fine not to exceed $500,000 and agreed in principle to enter into a civil consent decree establishing a restitution fund for the benefit of eligible homebuyers who purchased homes from the company during the period Jan. 1, 1983 to Dec. 31, 1989.

Under the terms of the settlement, GDC will made substantial contributions to the monthly mortgage payments of those customers determined by a special master to be eligible because the amount paid for the house exceeded the appraised market value of the property.

The company's payments under the restitution program are subject to a maximum of $2,500,000 per year for the five years 1990 to 1995. The company's total payments over the 25 year life of the program will depend on the number of claimants and total approximately $80 to $100 million.

The company's obligation will be secured by a collateral fund of $12.5 million during the first five years, subject to the approval of the company's commercial lenders.

This consent decree has been substantially negotiated and will be filed shortly.

In a related development, David F. Brown, the former chairman of General Development, and Robert F. Ehrling, the former president, have been indicted on a single count of violation of the Federal conspiracy statute.

Charles J. Simons, chairman, president and chief executive officer of the Miami-based community developer said, "I am gratified that General Development has been able to put this episode in its history behind it.

"This company will be run in full compliance with all laws and regulations and with the highest standards of business ethics. We have resolved a critical situation. It is clear that our house prices had gotten out of line with our competition and that some of our customers were disadvantaged.

KALAMAZOO, MI (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - Manatron, Inc. (NASDAQ: MANA) today announced strong gains in revenue and net income for the third quarter ended Jan. 31, 1990.

Revenues in the quarter rose 28 percent to $2,393,308 from $1,868,272. Operating income was $78,376 vs. a loss of $22,156, an improvement of $100,000.

Net income was $76,316, or 4 cents a share, up from $8,066, or nil cents a share. There were approximately 2.1 million weighted average shares outstanding in all reporting periods.

For the nine months, revenues rose 14 percent to $6,529,237 from $5,740,555. Operating income was $67,020, more than six times the comparable period's $10,061. Net income was $150,465, or 7 cents a share, up from $62,594, or 3 cents a share.

"This is our seventh consecutive profitable quarter, and the results begin to show Manatron's potential," said Allen F. Peat, chairman and president. "Revenue boosts came from all segments of our business, with the biggest gain coming from computer hardware and software. This is according to our plans, although computer supply items, and service revenues were also up.

"Our customer base has expanded, at least partly from our recent acquisitions. We have also been able to pass along an across-the-board price increase," Peat said.

"Profitability has been bolstered by keeping our costs at or below the revenue increase, although we are making sure that the organization is positioned to support the growth we expect," according to Peat. "We have recently started working with a marketing firm that has expertise in our area and believe that will ultimately have a strong impact on our business.

"We are highly encouraged by the company's progress in moving to an open system, multi-platform capability for our clients. This means our high-margin specialty software will fit with virtually any hardware configuration which might already be installed in a local government office -- from BTOS to UNIX to PC. We are estimating the whole process could take as long as 18 months, but the financial rewards from these efforts should come in along the way," he said.

"Our balance sheet is excellent, with about $4 million in working capital and book value of $2.57, for example. Cash per share is $.91," he ended.

Manatron designs, markets, installs and maintains advanced computer- based turnkey data processing systems for local governments, using its own specialized proprietary software and hardware from leading manufacturers.

ATLANTA (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - The Home Depot (NSYE: HD), the Atlanta-based home center retailer, today announced that it plans to open at least three stores in eastern New England in 1991 and four or five more during 1992.

Within five years, the company intends to be operating a total of 20 to 22 stores in the region.

The stores will each generally feature at least 100,000 square feet of inside selling area as well as approximately 20,000 square feet for an outdoor lawn and garden center.

During the first quarter of 1991, The Home Depot plans to open stores in Seekonk, Mass., and Warwick, R.I. A store in the Attleboro, Mass., area is slated to open during the third quarter of 1991. In 1992, the company intends to open stores in Danvers, Mass.; Nashua, N.H.; Salem, N.H.; and Manchester, N.H.

"We opened a real estate office in Burlington, Mass., a year ago to facilitate the acquisition of suitable store sites. We can now announce firm plans for eastern New England," said John Roberts, Home Depot's real estate manager for New England.

"We are making a very strong commitment to this market," said Home Depot Chairman and CEO Bernard Marcus. "With its dense concentration of population and aging housing stock, eastern New England presents one of the most promising markets for our company anywhere in the United States. In every part of the country that we have entered, we have revolutionized the regional home center industry. We feel strongly that New Englanders will love our stores and the way we do business."

The company's expansion into eastern New England is part of its general move into the northeastern United States which began in January 1989 when it opened a store in East Hanover, N.J. Since then Home Depot has opened a total of six stores in New Jersey, Connecticut and New York and has announced that it expects to be operating as many as 75 stores in the northeastern United States within five years.

"The Home Depot's extraordinary success has been due to the fact that we bring an entirely new dimension to the do-it-yourself home improvement industry," said Arthur Blank, Home Depot president and chief operating officer. "Our basic merchandising concept combines our giant warehouse stores which offer tremendous product assortment at guaranteed low prices -- with excellent customer service. This has allowed us to grow every market we have entered. Time and again, we have created new, dedicated do-it-yourselfers from people who previously never considered doing their own home improvement projects.

"We take the time to explain to customers how to use the tools and materials we sell, so that even a novice can complete a project successfully and then move on to larger and more-ambitious projects. We bring a level of customer service to this industry which nobody else seems able to approach."

The Home Depot currently operates 119 stores in 12 states. Its warehouse-style stores range in size from 67,000 to 140,000 square feet with an additional 15,000 to 20,000 square feet for outside lawn and garden centers. A typical store boasts an assortment of 30,000 different building materials and home improvement and lawn and garden products. The company can also special order thousands of additional non-stock products.

MARKHAM, ONTARIO (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - Magna International Inc. (TSE: MG.A MG.B; NASDAQ: MAGAF) today announced results for the second quarter of fiscal 1990. Sales declined by 6 percent to $431.6 million compared to the first quarter and the company incurred a pretax operating loss of $35 million for the second quarter compared to a pretax operating loss of $16 million for the first quarter.

The decline in sales and the increased operating loss is largely the result of lower production volumes caused by an overall slowdown in the automotive industry. The net loss for the second quarter is $186.6 million which includes both a provision for write-down of assets of $153.0 million and gains of $11.7 million on the issue of shares by one of the company's subsidiaries and $8.6 million on the disposal of real estate.

Over-expansion combined with a slowdown of the North American automobile market and the rise of interest rates has created a cash squeeze on Magna. The operating loss for the quarter and the provision for write-down of assets have resulted in the company being offside on certain of its financial tests under its lending agreements.

The company is arranging a standstill agreement with its lenders to enable it to prepare a debt restructuring and reduction plan which will include asset sales and divestiture of various interests in operating units. An executive committee of the board of directors, comprised of three independent members of the board, has been appointed and will oversee the preparation and implementation of the restructuring plan.

Magna is recognized by its customers as an outstanding quality automobile components supplier. Magna's OEM customers are cooperating in the company's steps to meet the immediate difficulties. Negotiations are under way to obtain like support from major suppliers.

In conjunction with its program to restructure and reorganize its operations, the company has taken action to eliminate losses in problem plants. These actions include divesting of certain of the operations and in other cases the company is negotiating pricing relief from customers. The problem plants are currently losing in total approximately $60 to $70 million per year from operations. These actions will therefore result in the elimination of substantial operating losses and will also eliminate substantial ongoing cash requirements to fund such operations.

As a result of the actions with respect to losing operations, the company has made a provision of $153.0 million to write down the related assets to net realizable value.

SEOUL, KOREA (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - Korea Telecommunications Authority (KTA) and AT&T (NYSE: T) today announced plans to convert Korea's existing analog international communications network with the United States into a digital network. Rhee Hae-Wood, president of KTA, and Randy Tobias, vice chairman of AT&T, joined together in announcing plans to establish Korea's digitized international communications networks.

Rhee said, "The establishment of Korea's digitized international communications networks, using state-of-the-art digital technology, will enable Korea to receive high quality and cost effective communications services."

Tobias said, "AT&T is proud to be a partner with Korea's aggressive communications policy to modernize the international network between the two countries. This digitization will enable Korea to receive various value-added services such as high-speed, high-resolution Group IV facsimile, video conferencing, computer-aided design and manufacturing, graphics and high-speed data transfer."

KTA has been preparing for the digitization of its international communications network since 1988. This year, it helped install the Hong Kong-Japan-Korea (H-J-K) undersea fiber optic cable. The cable will tie Korea into the Pacific Link fiber optic cable, which connects Japan with the United States. There are 27 owners of the H-J-K cable, including AT&T, KTA and Kokusai Denshin Denwa of Japan. Completion is scheduled for May.

In addition, KTA is working with AT&T to convert its existing analog satellite communications network to a digital network. When completed, the new digital satellite communications network, along with the H-J-K undersea fiber-optic cable, will enhance Korea's communications services.

NORTHLAKE, IL (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - Sun Chemical Corporation's General Printing Ink division (GPI) yesterday increased prices 8 percent to 9 percent for the web offset heatset and publication gravure inks it manufactures and sells, it was announced today. This is the first general price increase for these products in two years, and it reflects the ongoing impact of higher costs for raw materials, labor and environmental compliance on the part of Sun Chemical and its suppliers.

"For the past two years, we have cushioned our customers against the impact of our cost increases through advance formulating and manufacturing techniques, and by use of alternative materials wherever possible," said Massie E. Odiotti, Sun Chemical senior vice president.

"But we have reached the point where the additional costs must be passed on," Odiotti stated. "Therefore, in order to continue to supply our customers with the high-quality products and high level of service they have come to expect from Sun Chemical, we find it necessary to take this price increase action now."

CLEVELAND (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - A new corporate advertising campaign designed to strengthen awareness and identity of Nestle in the United States was announced today by James M. Biggar, CEO of Nestle Enterprises, Inc.

"Nestle is the largest food company in the world," said Biggar, "but in the United States, we are not as well known -- whether for our outstanding products and services or for our work in our communities. We want Nestle to become known for the things it does so well."

The campaign focuses on Nestle's 11 U.S. operating companies stressing the "little things" behind the company's drive for quality.

Nestle companies in the U.S. include Nestle Foods Corporation, Stouffer Foods Corporation, Stouffer Hotel Company, Stouffer Restaurants Company, Wine World Inc., FreshNes Foods Corporation, Hills Brothers Coffee Inc., The L.J. Minor Corporation, and Sunmark Inc., as well as Carnation Company and Alcon Laboratories Inc. Combined sales of these companies is approximately $8 billion annually.

The campaign, created by Wyse Advertising, Cleveland, will be launched on March 26 with four-color spreads in Time, Fortune, and Money magazines, as well as USA Today. Readership for the ads is estimated to be in excess of 60 million.

The campaign will feature examples of specific performance by Nestle companies and Nestle products. These "little things" form the key message of the campaign and demonstrate Nestle's commitment to quality by focusing upon all-important small details.

Biggar said the company had several objectives for the campaign. "We want people to recognize the fact that we're working for the consumer--providing the best possible value--and developing what the consumer wants today and will want in the future."

"We also want to be known and respected as a capable and responsible developer and marketer of high quality products. Our products are brought to the consumer from a family of 45,000 employees who are dedicated to making the little differences which separate us from our competitors. This sort of performance is unequaled in our industry and is based upon a Nestle tradition of mutual earned respect and trust," Biggar said.

"All of the Nestle companies are innovators, both in service and technology," Biggar said, "and our scientific capability and commitment to good health through sound nutrition is unmatched by our competition."

WILKESBORO, NC (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - This Sunday, Holly Farms Chicken will break what is thought to be the first-ever promotion utilizing a 1-800 telephone number to offer free supermarket food coupons on primetime television.

The TV ad campaign comes as a surprise ten-day boost to an ongoing point-of-sale price promotion for Holly Farms Roasted Chicken. The ads will air March 18-25 in support of a March 8-May 5 in-store promotion in New York and Baltimore/Washington, both highly competitive markets for branded fully-roasted chicken.

The price promotion and ad campaign are designed to win increased consumer trial and grocery meat case space for Holly Farms' vacuum- packed Roasted Chicken.

"We're turning on the klieg lights to gain consumer trial in these markets " said John W. Bartelme, vice president of marketing at Wilkesboro-based Holly Farms Fresh Retail Division of Tyson Foods, Inc. "We know that people like our roasted chicken, once they've tried it. Our latest research in the Northeast showed that, among people who'd tried Holly Farms Roasted Chicken, an astonishing 80 percent had already been back and bought more." A & G Research of New York conducted the November 1989 study to which he referred.

"Our goal is to create some real excitement among both the supermarket trade and consumers," said Fred Moore, account supervisor at Long, Haymes & Carr of Winston-Salem, Holly Farms' ad agency, which developed the promotion. "The entire program is designed to create immediate, strong awareness leading to additional consumer trial."

The in-store promotion features a two-month special price offering of Holly Farms roasted half chickens for $1.99, down from roughly $2.69. More than 500,000 packages will include a $1-off "bounce-back" coupon for the next roasted chicken purchase.

Extending from March 8 through May 5, the in-store promotion features heavy point-of-sale support, including special packaging and signage, and newspaper ads.

HOUSTON (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - Plains Resources (AMEX: PLX) today reported 1989 net income of $456,000 on total revenue of $19.9 million vs. a 1988 loss of $1.2 million on total revenue of $15.3 million. Cash flow from operations for 1989 was $6.4 million, up 33 percent from the $4.8 million reported a year ago.

Plains said that the company's net income of $456,000 translated to a loss per primary share of $.06 due to the inclusion in the primary per-share calculation of accumulated but undeclared 1989 dividends on the company's $1.3 cumulative convertible preferred stock. Since these accumulated dividends were largely eliminated as a result of the company's successful tender for the preferred stock in September of last year, they are, to the extent eliminated, excluding from the calculation of fully diluted earnings per share. As a result, on a fully diluted basis the company reported earning per share of $.07.

Plains also reported a stronger balance sheet at year-end 1989, reducing long-term debt by more than 27 percent from $39.7 million to $28.8 million retiring about 91 percent of its outstanding preferred stock and adding more than $10 million to common equity.

BEVERLY HILLS, CA (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - Qintex Entertainment Inc. (QEI) (NASDAQ: QNTQE) today reported revenue of $8,168,000 and a net loss of ($3,845,000), or ($0.18) per share, for the second quarter of fiscal year 1990, ended Jan. 31, 1990. For the comparable year-ago quarter, the company reported revenue of $32,514,000 and net income of $1,770,000, or $.08 per share, including a tax credit of $688,000, or $.03 per share.

For the six months ended Jan. 31, 1990, QEI had revenue of $14,497,000 and a net loss of ($9,834,000), or ($0.46) per share. The company reported revenue of $59,424,000 and net income of $3,436,000, or $.16 per share, including a tax credit of $1,336,000 or $.06 per share, for the comparable year-ago period.

Qintex stated that the decrease in second-quarter and six-month revenue from the comparable year-ago periods was due to a reduction in programming available for distribution. Delivery to CBS of "The Incident," a movie-of-the-week starring Walter Matthau, made a large contribution to the company's revenue for the quarter. The widely-acclaimed two-hour movie dominated television ratings during its March 4 airing, achieving a 33 percent share.

Sales of "RollerGames" in first-run syndication and international marketing of Qintex programming were additional major factors in the company's second-quarter revenue.

As reported on Oct. 19, 1989, QEI has filed for protection under Chapter 11 of the Federal Bankruptcy Code. Although Qintex generated positive cash flow during the second quarter, a number of non-cash items resulted in a loss for the period, including an increase in the provision for doubtful accounts, accrued amortization of deferred compensation, and other non-cash items.

Regarding current production operations, Qintex noted that "White Gold," a television movie produced for TNT, is in post-production. In addition, QEI has entered into an agreement with the producers of "RollerGames" and LBS Communications, whereby LBS will assume responsibility for domestic syndication of a reformatted version of the one-hour sports and variety series.

Future projects in advanced stages of development at Qintex include two movies-of-the-week, a half-hour situation comedy, and ongoing television programming based on existing Qintex productions.

QEI further noted that more than 30 potential acquirors or investors have expressed interest in the company through its investment banker, Donaldson Lufkin & Jenrette. These entities are currently in various stages of "due diligence" analysis.

ANN ARBOR, MI (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - Today, Comshare (NASDAQ: CSRE), the major provider of decision support and executive information systems, announced its acquisition of Orion Systems. Comshare paid an undisclosed amount of cash for the assets of the Waterbury, Conn., firm.

Orion Systems is the developer of Pyramid 2000, a financial consolidation and reporting software application that operates on a personal computer or a local area network (LAN). The product can perform large, multidivisional and multinational consolidations that can be easily managed by the corporate and divisional controllers' staffs.

Comshare has broadened Pyramid's functionality and is marketing the product worldwide under the trade name Commander FDC (Financial Data Consolidation). Commander FDC integrates Pyramid with Comshare's System W decision support and Commander executive information software (EIS), providing more comprehensive features for users in finance/accounting departments. In addition to financial reporting, the integrated product supports planning and analysis staffs who require financial modeling capabilities. It also provides easy EIS access to key financial information for executives through colorful graphic screens and menus that can be operated with a touch screen or a mouse.

Comshare President Richard L. Crandall said: "Comshare already is a major vendor in the financial reporting market with our host-based System W decision support software. In calendar year 1989, approximately half, or $15 million, of our System W revenue was associated with financial consolidation applications. The acquisition of Orion Systems lets us enter the $25 million PC segment of the market which is estimated to be growing at an annual rate of 50 percent. Our customers can now select software solutions for the PC, LAN, host, or any combination of these platforms, for their consolidation and reporting needs."

"Commander FDC gives Comshare a significant edge in the PC-based financial reporting market by offering a wider range of application power than any other vendor," said Ted Dacko, former president of Orion Systems, and now director of Financial Reporting Systems at Comshare. "Commander FDC is the only product that provides capabilities for statutory and management reporting, budgeting, financial modeling and analysis, and executive access to reports. Unlike spreadsheets and general purpose software, Commander FDC is designed to handle intercompany eliminations, journal entry adjustments, foreign currency translations, and other accounting procedures that make consolidation accounting so complex."

Orion Systems Chairman and Chief Technologist Tom Ryan brought the Pyramid 2000 product to the commercial market in the second quarter of 1989. Ryan founded Orion Systems in 1984 to develop customized PC consolidation accounting systems for Fortune 500 companies. Ryan, appointed the director of Commander FDC development at Comshare, said, "Pyramid has a client base at companies such as Union Carbide, Reader's Digest, and Dover Corporation because its rich accounting functionality, PC/LAN support, and relational database architecture make it a cost- effective solution for financial reporting. The product satisfies both the needs of financial users for precise accounting functions, ease of use, and audit trails and the needs of the MIS department for security, backup, networks and standardization."

The cost of a Commander FDC solution varies with the number of PCs involved in the application, beginning at $50,000 and averaging $95,000. Commander FDC, available for immediate shipping, is being marketed through Comshare's direct sales force.

Comshare, a $88 million international company headquartered in Ann Arbor, is publicly traded. As a full-service vendor with 920 employees, Comshare provides software, implementation services, training and customer support. Comshare has sales offices in 30 major cities in North America and Europe. Founded in 1966, it has grown to be the leading supplier of financial reporting, decision support and executive information systems, as quantified in recent surveys by International Data Corporation and the Gartner Group.

PHILADELPHIA (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - PHLCorp, Inc. (NYSE: PHX), today announced its operating results for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989. Income from continuing operations for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989, was $26,282,000 ($1.94 per common share) compared with $25,928,000 ($1.92 per common share) for the year ended Dec. 31, 1988.

Income from discontinued operations was $880,000 ($.06 per common share) for the year ended Dec. 31, 1988. Discontinued operations reflect the results of the company's life insurance operations which were sold in 1988.

Net income was $26,282,000 ($1.94 per common share) for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989, and $26,808,000 ($1.98 per common share) for the year ended Dec. 31, 1988.

During 1989, several of the largest customers (including the largest) of the trading stamp subsidiary discontinued the distribution of trading stamps. Sales to these customers in 1989 were approximately 35 percent of the subsidiary's total sales. The subsidiary has restructured its operations and implemented cost savings programs that are designed to reduce, but not eliminate, the reduction in profits expected to result from the withdrawal of these customers. The cost of such restructuring (approximately $5,400,000) was included in 1989 results of operations.

Through its operating subsidiaries, PHLCorp is engaged primarily in the trading stamps, motivation services, and property and casualty insurance businesses.

DOMINGUEZ, CA (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - Pic 'N' Save Corp. (NASDAQ: PICN) reported today that its net earnings for the fourth quarter ended Dec. 31, 1989, were $14,526,000, or $.41 per share, compared to net earnings of $23,792,000, or $.65 per share, in the fourth quarter of 1988. For the entire 1989 year, net earnings were $30,876,000, or $.87 per share, compared to $46,915,000, or $1.24 per share, in the prior year.

Sales during the fourth quarter of 1989 were $177,695,000, a 10.4 percent increase over sales of $160,967,000 in the prior year. Sales for the entire 1989 year were $475,210,000, an increase of 18.3 percent over sales of $401,705,000 in the prior year. During the fourth quarter, sales in comparable stores were less than the prior year by 5.3 percent, but they were higher for the entire year by .6 percent.

During the 1989 year, Pic 'N' Save Corp. opened 35 new stores and closed three, bringing the total number of stores in operation to 190 by the end of the year.

"Soft sales in the fourth quarter, lower gross profit rate, and higher interest expense had a significant impact on fourth quarter and total 1989 earnings," said Lewis B. Merrifield III, president and chief executive officer. "Our gross profit rate was lower in 1989 as a result of the inclusion of more edibles and other lower gross profit, high-turnover, consumable merchandise; higher seasonal markdowns associated with lower than planned sales in a highly competitive retail environment; increased transportation expenses associated with our broader market coverage; the inclusion of the lower margin Job Lot Pushcart stores for the full year; and an increase in inventory shrinkage. Interest expense was up because of our stock repurchase program in 1988, increased capital expenditures related to growth of stores and distribution centers, and higher inventory required for new store openings.

"We are very disappointed with our operating performance in 1989, particularly in our older, California markets. However, we continue to believe that our expansion program remains the right course for Pic 'N' Save's long-term success."

Merrifield further stated that the company's inventory levels at the end of the year were lower on a per store basis than the prior year and in excellent condition. The company is now taking advantage of new opportunities to pursue inventory purchases during a favorable closeout buying environment.

Pic 'N' Save Corp. operates a chain of 190 retail stores in the Western and Southern United States and the New York Metropolitan Area. These stores specialize in new, closeout, variety general merchandise which is sold at substantial reductions from original retail prices.

GREENVILLE, SC (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - The National Broadcasting Company will sell a majority ownership in WKYC-TV, its Cleveland, Ohio television station, to Multimedia, Inc. (NASDAQ-NMS: MMEDC), the two companies announced today.

Under the terms of a letter of intent signed by the two companies, Multimedia will acquire a majority share of WKYC, and will assume responsibility for all aspects of the station's management and operation. NBC will retain a minority interest in the station and will relinquish all control over the station's administration and day-to-day activities. The purchase price for NBC's interest in the station was not disclosed. The proposed sale is subject to the completion of a definitive agreement between the two companies, approval of their Boards of Directors and approval by the FCC.

NBC President and Chief Executive Officer Robert C. Wright said, "We are very pleased to enter into this agreement with Multimedia. When Multimedia approached us with this proposal, we recognized it as a terrific opportunity to expand our relationship with an accomplished group of broadcasters who believe in this business as much as we do. We've come to know and appreciate them through their three NBC affiliates, each of which is a market leader.

Al Jerome, President, NBC Television Stations, in Cleveland at the time of the announcement, said "We have a lot of respect for our friends at Multimedia. They're seasoned station managers with a reputation for leadership and innovation, who will know how to build on the successes and accomplishments of WKYC Vice President and General Manager John Llewellyn and his talented team."

Bartlett also said that the Company had not acquired any major properties since Multimedia's recapitalization in October of 1985 and had, in fact, divested itself of several properties in newspapers, radio and television.

Multimedia views this proposed association with NBC as an opportunity to reinvest the monies received from the sale of these former properties and to capitalize on a unique media opportunity.

WKYC-TV went on the air on October 31st, 1948. Its service area covers 17 counties in northeastern Ohio, and includes Cleveland, America's 11th-ranked ADI television market according to Arbitron.

Multimedia, Inc., is a media communications company which publishes 14 daily and 50 non-daily newspapers; owns and operates 4 television stations -- WLWT in Cincinnati, WBIR in Knoxville and KSDK in St. Louis, all NBC affiliates and WMAZ in Macon, Georgia, affiliated with CBS; 7 radio stations; 100 cable television franchises in four states; and produces and syndicates quality television programming including "Donahue" and "Sally Jessy Raphael."

NBC, a wholly-owned operating subsidiary of General Electric (NYSE: GE), owns and operates television stations in New York, Los Angeles, Chicago, Washington, D.C., Miami, and Denver. NBC's owned stations and its 209 affiliated television stations reach virtually all American TV households and deliver over 5,000 hours of entertainment, news, and sports programming each year.

HOUSTON (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - DI Industries, Inc. (the "company") (AMEX: DRL) announced today the sale of 7,300,000 shares of its common stock through an underwritten public offering. Of the shares being sold, the company is selling 7,100,000 shares and a selling shareholder is selling 200,000 shares. The offering price is $2.125 per share.

The net proceeds to the company from the sale of the shares are expected to be approximately $13,650,000, assuming no exercise of a 15 percent over-allotment option granted to the underwriters of the offering. The net proceeds will be added to working capital to be used for general corporate purposes, expected to include unstacking and refurbishing inactive rigs, possible future acquisitions and, to a lesser extent, expenditures for retirement of a portion of long-term debt and the purchase of an equipment yard.

DI Industries, Inc., headquartered in Houston, provides contract drilling and well workover services to firms in the oil and gas industry. The company also engages in commercial drilling activities and in oil and gas exploration, development and production.

The manager for the offering is Oppenheimer & Co., Inc. NEW YORK (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - The Chariot Group, Inc. (AMEX: CGR) today announced 1989 operating results with a distinct profit improvement from continuing operations.

Income from continuing operations in 1989 was $1,440,000, or 57 cents per share as compared with a loss of $(316,000), or $(.13) per share in the prior year.

During the fourth quarter of 1989, the company announced the closing of its Republic Metal precision fabrication business because of continuing losses, erosion of its geographic customer base and large potential environmental expenditures. For 1989, the company reported a loss from discontinued operations pertaining to Republic of $(1,682,000), or $(.67) per share as compared with a 1988 profit from discontinued operations of $7,129,000, or $2.96 per share which included a gain on the 1988 sales of a plastic container manufacturer.

Chariot attributed its improvement in results from continuing operations from a solid sales and profit performance from its aluminum window and door business and the equity income from Chariot's 20 percent stock holdings in Synalloy Corporation (AMEX: SYO), a stainless steel tube and specialty chemical operation.

The Chariot Group, Inc., with headquarters in New York City, produces high quality aluminum windows and doors and has manufacturing facilities in Tennessee and Florida.

NORCROSS, GA (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - Colorocs Corp. (NASDAQ: CLRX) today announced that Colorocs and HCS are continuing to explore the possibility of Colorocs redeeming all of the Colorocs stock now held by HCS, and in return transferring to HCS all of the Savin Corp. Series C preferred stock held by Colorocs.

A redemption of that stock would reduce outstanding Colorocs common stock and common stock equivalents by approximately 30 percent. In view of their discussions, Colorocs and HCS Technology N.V. have amended their 1989 agreement under which HCS has an option to purchase these Savin shares. The amendment extends the term of certain provisions of that option agreement, and is similar to an earlier amendment signed in January. As amended, Colorocs can trigger an exercise of the option on or after March 31, 1990; HCS can sell its Colorocs stock before then without Colorocs' approval; HCS can exercise the option on Feb. 28, 1991, if Colorcos does not trigger an exercise before then. Other provisions of the agreement were similarly extended, relating to restrictions on Colorocs' ability to issue stock and sell the Savin stock, and on HCS' ability to acquire more Colorocs stock. If Colorocs and HCS agreed on a redemption transaction, it would take the place of the 1989 option agreement.

Colorocs Corp. was formed in 1982 to develop and distribute full color copiers and printers.

JENKINTOWN, PA (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - Pitcairn Financial Management Group announced today that it has signed an agreement in principle with Jonathan Butcher, Thomas H. Darlington and Richard D. Miles, general partners of The Trustees' Private Bank, to acquire the bank.

A Pennsylvania-chartered banking partnership, the bank has assets of approximately $50 million, and currently serves the banking needs of affluent individuals in the Philadelphia area. The acquisition does not include the bank's wholly owned subsidiary, The Pennsylvania Trust Company.

Hans Ziegler, president of Pitcairn Financial Management Group, announced that Robert M. Campbell will be appointed president and chief operating officer of the bank, upon consummation of the agreement. Campbell joined The Trustees' Private Bank in 1987, and previously held a senior credit position at Fidelity Bank, in Philadelphia.

Ziegler commented, "Our experience suggests that wealthy individuals and families in this country aren't entirely satisfied with the quality of services or the attention they receive from their banking institutions. We plan to change that." He notes that the acquisition of The Trustees' Private Bank will round out the total financial services concept that Pitcairn Financial Management Group has offered to the Pitcairn family and other affluent clients.

Pitcairn Financial Management Group, based in Jenkintown, Pa., is an asset management and financial services organization which, until recently, served as the family office of the Pitcairn family. The family's origin goes back to John Pitcairn, a founder of PPG Industries. In 1989 the organization, with assets of approximately $1.3 billion, began to provide its services to other affluent individuals and families.

The acquisition is subject to regulatory approval from the Pennsylvania Department of Banking, the Federal Reserve Bank and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. It is estimated that the acquisition will be consummated within 90 days.

STERLING HEIGHTS, MI (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - General Dynamics Land Systems Division has received a $12 million contract from the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency (DARPA) and the Department of Energy to demonstrate a system capable of improving the survivability of compact vehicles.

The two-phase, 30-month contract will include a number of live-fire tests using a broad spectrum of real threats to test the survivability system. Vehicle ballistic hulls and fully operational vehicles will be used. In some tests, the vehicle will be moving at high speeds.

Land Systems will use innovative technology to meet the requirements of this DARPA-Army-Marine Corps armor/anti-armor initiative, which could substantially reduce vehicle weight.

Land Systems' concept is based on a patented grated to John Wohler, vehicle survivability project manager, and on an electronic processor developed by Greg Dorr, vetronics, both of whom are Land Systems employees. Wohler credited the contract award to strong management support, "but primarily to the dedicated effort and technical excellence of the development and proposal team."

Under development since 1984, the vehicle survivability system demonstrated its capability in a competitive during the summer of 1988. Effectiveness demonstrations will begin in June 1991 and last through May 1992. Development work will be performed in the division's headquarters facilities in Sterling Heights.

HOUSTON (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - CECOS International, Inc., the hazardous waste treatment and disposal subsidiary of Browning-Ferris Industries, Inc. (NYSE: BFI), has been notified that the New York State Department of Environmental Conservation (DEC) has denied the state permits and siting certificate necessary to construct a new hazardous waste cell at CECOS's landfill facility in Niagara Falls, N.Y.

The company said it was disappointing because it is a reversal of a decision by an administrative law judge after a hearing on the permit application. The law judge recommended that CECOS be issued the necessary permits and siting certificate.

CECOS is exploring various options for this facility, including asking the DEC to reconsider its orders of denial and seeking judicial review of the denial orders. The company at present operates a solid waste landfill and a hazardous wastewater treatment plant at the facility. These permits to operate are not affected by the denials.

The DEC also announced that CECOS has been ordered to pay a $350,000 penalty for environmental permit and regulatory violations. The penalty is a separate issue from the DEC decision on the facility's permits. CECOS had earlier signed a consent order and is proceeding with the remedial steps required in conjunction with the penalty.

Browning-Ferris Industries, Inc. is one of the largest publicly held companies engaged primarily in providing waste services. Subsidiaries and affiliates collect, transport, treat and dispose of commercial, residential and municipal solid waste and industrial hazardous wastes.

BFI subsidiaries are also involved in recycling, resource recovery facilities, medical waste services, portable restroom services, municipal and commercial sweeping operations and asbestos abatement.

GLENVIEW, IL (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - Based on extensive reviews to date by its staff and outside auditors, Zenith Electronics Corp. (NYSE: ZE) concluded today that Groupe Bull owes an additional $49.5 million for Zenith's computer products business.

Zenith sold its computer products business to Groupe Bull on Dec. 28, 1989 and received a closing-date payment of $496.4 million in cash. As provided for in the purchase agreement, an adjustment to the closing-date payment is to be made, including interest from the closing date, based on application of the contract terms to valuations of the net assets sold.

The final sale price for the computer products business is in dispute. As previously disclosed, Groupe Bull claims that the post- closing adjustment should result in a payment by Zenith to Bull of approximately $49 million.

In the event that Zenith and Groupe Bull are unable to reach agreement regarding the sale price in the next 30 days, the matter will be referred to an arbitrating accounting firm. Zenith is unable at this time to predict the ultimate outcome of the dispute and has made appropriate provisions in its 1989 financial statements to reflect the uncertainty inherent in the resolution of any such dispute.

For 1989, discontinued operations (the computer products business sold to Groupe Bull) had an estimated net loss of $51.4 million, or $1.92 per share. Included in this figure are estimated computer operating losses of $70.4 million and the estimated gain on the sale of $19 million, net of costs and expenses.

INDIANAPOLIS, (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - Quad Pharmaceuticals, Inc., a majority-owned subsidiary of Par Pharmaceutical, Inc. (NYSE: PRX), announced today that internal reviews and external audits, as well as discussions with the Food and Drug Administration (FDA), have raised serious questions as to whether Quad made manufacturing changes in certain products subject to approved Abbreviated New Drug Applications (ANDAs) without adhering to FDA regulatory requirements for implementing such changes.

Quad has authorized an independent investigation to determine the scope of this situation and the company's obligations relative to any product that might have been subject to changes made without proper regulatory approval or notification. The investigation is being conducted under the supervision of an independent consulting firm specializing in regulatory matters relating to the pharmaceutical industry.

Until further information can be ascertained as to the extent of any irregularities that might exist, Quad announced that it has stopped distribution of 27 of its products. The company added that it cannot state with any certainty whether other approved products may also have been subject to changes made without proper regulatory approval or notification. However, the company stressed that there is no evidence to indicate, nor has FDA suggested, that any of its products are not safe and effective.

While Quad management said it believes that distributed products conformed to the release specifications in their approved ANDAs, the company anticipates having to take additional action, including recalls, to assure the public that only properly approved products are shipped in commerce.

Kenneth I. Sawyer, Par president, commenting on Quad's action, stated, "The independent investigation, acting with Quad's cooperation, will be conducted as thoroughly and rapidly as reasonably possible. The objectives of the investigation include an examination of any shortcomings or deficiencies that may exist between Quad's products and their approved ANDAs, and in procedures, policies or any other cause that contributed to those deficiencies. At the conclusion of this inquiry, the company will take whatever actions that are necessary to address and remedy the situation and ensure the integrity of Quad or its products."

Sawyer also stated that any action taken by Quad, whose products are primarily injectable products sold under the Quad label, would not affect Par's product line, which consists of oral solid, oral liquid and topical products. Sawyer also stated, however, that this situation would have a material adverse impact on Par's consolidated financial position and results of operations, but that it is too early to be able to quantify such impact.

ZURICH (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - Swissair announced yesterday a profit of SFr. 94.7 million for the 1989 fiscal year, compared with SFr. 76.1 million in 1988. In addition, the board of directors voted on March 14 to recommend a dividend of SFr. 40 (1988: SFr. 38) per share and SFr. 8 (1988: SFr. 7.60) per "Genussschein" (dividend right certificate), to the general assembly of shareholders on April 26, 1990. The board will also propose an increase in the company's share capital.

Overall revenues of SFr. 4,837 million and overall expenditure of SFr. 4,374 million (1988: SFr. 4,284 million and 3,866 million, respectively) both showed 13 percent increases on the year. Gross profit thus amounted to SFr. 463 million (1988: SFr. 418 million) for the year.

Following ordinary depreciation of SFr. 323 million (1988: SFr. 302 million), the encouraging result also allowed supplementary depreciation of SFr. 45 million (1988: SFr. 40 million) to be made. Remaining net profit permits the dividend to be raised from SFr. 38 to SFr. 40 per share and from SFr. 7.60 to SFr. 8 per "Genussschein."

Capital Increase - Looking to financing future investment, the board of directors will propose a two-step capital increase to the general assembly of shareholders on April 26. At the same time, the board will recommend the adoption of registered shares with deferred issue of the physical security, to facilitate administrative procedures.

The initial capital increase -- excluding subscription rights -- will, if accepted, entail the issue of 180,000 new bearer shares and 700,000 new "Genussscheine." This will enable Swissair's partners, SAS and Singapore Airlines, to acquire equity holdings in the company, if interested. The second increase will allow existing shareholders to subscribe to a one-for-20 rights issue. Existing holders of "Genussscheine" will also be able to acquire new bearer shares, on a one-for-100 basis.

New Aircraft Order - In the interest of securing the company's long- term market position in a liberalized Europe, the board has also approved the acquisition of two additional Fokker 100 aircraft, to enter service in 1993-94 and two additional MD-81s, to maintain fleet flexibility.

In 1989, Swissair concluded landmark cooperation agreements with Delta Air Lines, SAS and Singapore Airlines. Now the Swiss airline company's aim is to gradually implement these accords and take optimum advantage of the synergic potential they contain, for the benefit of partners and customers alike.

LUND, SWEDEN, (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - Gambro AB (NASDAQ: GAMBY) and COBE Laboratories, Inc. (NASDAQ: COBE), jointly announced today that they have executed a definitive merger agreement pursuant to which all holders of COBE common stock will receive $37.00 in cash per share and COBE will become a subsidiary of Gambro. Gambro will commence a tender offer within five business days. The aggregate purchase price for the shares will be approximately $253 million.

The boards of directors of both COBE and Gambro have unanimously approved the transaction. COBE's board recommends that all shareholders accept the offer. The offer is conditioned by certain governmental approvals.

Robert Collins, president of COBE, said, "I am very positive about our agreement to combine with Gambro. Gambro's global sales and marketing organization will assist COBE in expanding the marketing of its dialysis and other medical equipment products in countries outside the United States."

COBE, which had $237.9 million in sales and $9.8 million in net income in 1989, is headquartered in Lakewood, Colo., and designs, manufactures and markets equipment and disposables for cardiovascular surgery, blood salvage, critical care monitoring, apheresis, blood banks and dialysis. COBE's products include perfusion management systems, oxygenators, dialysis equipment and disposable tubing sets, blood component separators and blood cell washing equipment. They are sold in the United States and abroad, including Canada, Europe, Australia, the Far East and the Middle East. COBE has manufacturing facilities in Colorado, Mexico, West Germany Great Britain and Italy and has 2,200 employees throughout the world.

Gambro AB, based in Lund, Sweden, is controlled by Investment Cardo AB, which in turn is 47 percent owned by AB Volvo. Gambro had US$482.6 million (SEK 3,103 million) of sales and US$30.9 million (SEK 198.7 million) in net income in 1989. Gambro is one of Europe's leading manufacturers and marketers of medical equipment and related products in the dialysis field.

Berthold Lindqvist, president of Gambro, stated that, "The combination of COBE and Gambro creates tremendous opportunities for growth. The acquisition of COBE will enable Gambro to diversify into the cardiovascular and blood components technology areas."

He added that, "Following the acquisition of COBE, Gambro will consist of four product lines: renal care, intensive care and anesthesia, cardiovascular and blood component technology. The acquisition will also add critical mass and provide an opportunity to strengthen Gambro's business in the United States, which has incurred significant losses during the past several years. We see this acquisition as a strong strategic affiliation between COBE and Gambro."

Prudential-Bache Capital Funding is dealer manager for the offer and D. F. King & Co., Inc., is the information agent.

NEW YORK (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - Leucadia National Corporation (NYSE: LUK) today announced its operating results for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989.

Net income was $64,311,000, or $4.81 per common share ($4.72 on a fully diluted basis), for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989, compared with $21,333,000, or $1.62 per common share ($1.58 on a fully diluted basis), for the year ended Dec. 31, 1988, after giving effect to a charge of $2.4

million reflecting the cumulative effect (through Dec. 31, 1987) of a change in accounting for income taxes resulting from the adoption of Statement of Financial Accounting Standards No. 96.

Income from continuing operations before the cumulative effect (through Dec. 31, 1987) of a change in accounting for income taxes for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989, was $22,723,000, or $1.70 per common share ($1.68 on a fully diluted basis), compared to $18,017,000, or $1.37 per common share ($1.36 on a fully diluted basis), for the year ended Dec. 31, 1988.

Income from discontinued operations was $41,588,000, or $3.11 per common share ($3.04 on a fully diluted basis), for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989, compared with $5,716,000, or $.43 per common share ($.39 on a fully diluted basis), for the year ended Dec. 31, 1988.

Discontinued operations reflect the company's railcar leasing and management operations which were sold on Oct. 27, 1989, and the company's electronic visual communications subsidiary which was sold on Dec. 22, 1989. The net gain on these sales (approximately $37.1 million after income taxes including $7.5 million applied to reduce the excess of purchase price over net assets acquired) is reflected in 1989 results of operations.

Included in income from continuing operations before cumulative effect of a change in accounting for income taxes for the years ended Dec. 31, 1989 and 1988, were pre-tax net securities gains of $11,823,000 and $21,097,000 respectively.

In addition, 1989 results include gains of approximately $18.3 million on the sales of certain properties and units in a related condominium project developed by the company located in San Luis Obispo County, Calif., and, as a result of the loss of certain significant trading stamps customers, a provision for restructuring the trading stamp subsidiary's operations of approximately $5.4 million.

CLEVELAND (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - BP Chemicals today announced that it will close its Commercial Composites plant in Hartford City, Ind., effective May 15.

The closure will eliminate 142 jobs. Appropriate severance terms will be offered to the affected employees.

The plant produces sheet molding compound components for General Motors, including the Cadillac, Buick, Oldsmobile, Chevrolet, and Pontiac groups. The components include rear-end panels, spoilers, and decorative trim parts.

"These are very fine employees," said John Donnelly, Sr., general manager, Commercial Composites. "And, the need to inform them of the decision to close the facility is most regrettable. The decline of the current automotive markets and the lack of growth projected for products out of this facility necessitated the decision."

Commercial Composites Hartford City plant is located in Blackford County, approximately 40 miles south of Ft. Wayne.

ST. LOUIS (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - The May Department Stores Company (NYSE: MA) today announced that its board of directors has increased the company's common stock dividend to $1.58 per share from the current annual rate of $1.42. The new dividend rate, the company's 16th increase in the past 15 years, will be effective with the June 15, 1990, dividend payment and will be paid as 39-1/2 cents per quarter.

In addition, May announced that it is anticipated that Venture, its discount division, will pay an annual dividend at the equivalent rate of approximately 6 cents per May share, following its planned spin-off later this year, pending certain events. Together, the dividends represent annual dividend payments to May shareowners of $1.64 per common share, a 15.5 percent increase over the current $1.42.

May Chairman and Chief Executive Officer David C. Farrell said, "The dividend increase reflects May's continued strong performance in 1989, with earnings per share from continuing operations on a fully diluted basis increasing 20 percent to $3.64 from $3.04. This was our 15th consecutive year of record sales and earnings, and over the past three years we have achieved a compound growth rate for earnings per share of 20 percent."

NEW YORK (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - From Cape Canaveral, Aviation Week & Space Technology's Southeast U.S. editor Edward H. Kolcum reported that prospects are remote that the Intelsat 6 communications satellite, now in unusable low earth orbit, will ever be put to commercial use.

The effect of this week's failure on the commercial Titan program is still being assessed, but Martin Marietta, the rocket's manufacturer, has been able to sell only four commercial Titan launches. The company was banking on a success this week to exploit its reliability rate after the previous failure of competitor Ariane 4.

Intelsat is examining a number of recovery options, Kolcum reported, but recovery by the space shuttle is unlikely because the wayward satellite is not equipped with grappling fixtures and could not be readily captured by the shuttle's remote manipulating arm. Nor is the shuttle equipped with a special cradle in the cargo hold to which the satellite would have to be secured for reentry and landing. Furthermore, the shuttle payload manifest has no payload opportunities until July 1993, unless a mission is bumped.

Aviation Week & Space Technology, published weekly by McGraw-Hill, is the leading journal for the worldwide aviation, aerospace and defense industries. The magazine's March 19 issue also spotlights this key development:

-- Navy Wants Better Than 1-for-1 Aircraft Replacement: The Navy plans to seek more than a one-for-one replacement of A-6 medium attack aircraft with A-12 advanced tactical aircraft, Aviation Week's senior military editor John Morrocco reported from Washington. He quoted Vice Admiral Richard M. Dunleavy, assistant chief of naval operations for air warfare, as saying that additional A-12s will be needed to meet shortfalls in the service's requirement for medium attack aircraft. A-12 procurement plans are being assessed as part of a carrier air warfare study, which is intended to match the Navy's requirement and acquisition plans. Dunleavy cited the A-12 as naval aviation's top priority.

Also featured in the current issue of Aviation Week & Space Technology is an extensive special report: the magazine's 57th annual aerospace industry

ATLANTA (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - Contel Corporation (NYSE: CTC) today announced that J. Michael Kelly, controller for the company's Federal Systems Sector, has been named corporate controller, replacing Jerry W. Braxton, who last month was named vice president and treasurer. Both appointments are effective April 1.

Kelly will report to Executive Vice President and Chief Financial Officer

Malcolm Holmes. As Contel's principal accounting officer, he will be responsible for the systems of internal control, accounting policies, internal and external reporting of Contel's financial results and condition, and overall tax administration.

Kelly, 33, joined Contel in 1987 as controller of the Applied Systems Division of Contel Federal Systems. In 1988, he was named to his current position. Prior to joining Contel, Kelly was vice president - controller for the government contracts group of Planning Research Corporation, a technology-based professional services firm formerly traded on the New York and Pacific Stock Exchanges. During his six-year tenure there, he held positions of increasing responsibility and scope in auditing and accounting. From 1978 until 1981, he served as a senior accountant for the CPA firm of Fried, Klausner and Georgeson.

Kelly received a bachelor's degree in business administration from Gettysburg College in 1978, and completed studies in accounting at the University of Maryland in 1981. He is a certified public accountant in Maryland.

TORONTO, ONTARIO (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - Arc International Corporation (AMEX: ATV) today announced consolidated operating results for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989. All amounts are expressed in U.S. dollars. Sales increased sharply to about $88.1 million, compared to $19.5 million reported for the eight months ended Dec. 31, 1988. The sales increase results mainly from the December 1988 acquisition of Canrad Inc.

A net loss of approximately $6.3 million, or $.96 per share, was reported, following a restructuring charge of approximately $4.9 million, or $.75 per share. The restructuring charge relates primarily to U.S. activities, and includes a loss provision of approximately $2.5 million relating to the recent disposal of a microwave component manufacturing business in Binghamton, N.Y.

Commenting on the results, Arnold S. Tenney, president and chief executive officer, said: "The 1989 results are disappointing but we believe that the restructuring measures are appropriate and will result in improved results for 1990 and future periods. Our Canadian cable division enjoyed another record year both in sales and operating income. With the exception of the business conducted at the Binghamton subsidiary, all of the other businesses produced both operating income and positive cash flow. We continue to enjoy a strong working capital position of approximately $16.8 million. It should also be noted that operating cash flow (net loss plus the non-cash charges of the restructuring charge, depreciation and amortization) amounted to approximately $280,000, or $.04 per share, after incurring more than $4 million of interest expense."

NEW YORK (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - Jayark Corporation (NASDAQ: JAYA) today announced that net sales for the nine months ended Jan. 31. 1990 rose 33.5 percent to $18,811,000 from $14,090,000 for the comparable period a year ago. Net income was $736,532, or 13 cents per share, a 21.1 percent increase over the $608,305, or 11 cents per share, recorded for the first nine months of the prior year.

to $8,024,000 from $4,458,000 for the comparable period a year ago. Net income declined to $42,790, or $0.01 per share, from $78,444, or $0.02 per share, reported for the third quarter a year ago.

Commenting on the results, David L. Koffman, president, stated: "Our overall operating performance during the first nine months of the fiscal year has been greatly enhanced by the acquisition of substantially all the assets of Rosalco, Inc., an importer of occasional furniture, brass beds and other related furniture, forming our new furniture and bedding division. The company's increased profitability over the first nine months of the fiscal year can be directly attributed to the continued expansion of our customer base at both our audio visual and printing and graphics divisions, as well as our ability to exercise greater control over our operating expenses."

"Jayark did witness a decline in earnings during the latest quarter that was directly attributable to the historical seasonal slowdown of the occasional furniture industry in the month following the Christmas holiday. If the results of the furniture and bedding division were excluded, the other operations of the company would have shown an approximate $115,000 increase in net income and thereby would have exhibited a continuation of the strong positive trend established in the first half of fiscal 1990," continued Koffman.

"As we go forward, the company's outlook continues to be bright with contributions anticipated from both its existing operations as well as from the recent acquisition. By broadening Jayark's operating base, the company has the added potential of growth over the remainder of this fiscal year and beyond," he concluded.

Jayark Corporation is engaged in the businesses of distributing and renting audio visual equipment and of printing promotional advertising for supermarkets and other retail stores.

HERSHEY, PA (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - The increased cost of complying with state and federal water quality regulations was cited today by the Pennsylvania-American Water Co. as the major factor contributing to its request to increase water service rates.

Pennsylvania-American today filed a request with the Public Utility Commission (PUC) to increase rates for the 1.5 million people it serves in 28 counties throughout the state. The rate increase request, if approved, would increase the water bill of the average residential customer by about 11 cents a day, and the company's annual revenues by $21.1 million.

"Providing high quality water service continues to be Pennsylvania-American's top priority, but to meet this objective the company requires an appropriate rate adjustment," Gerald C. Smith, president, said. "The water utility industry faces major construction expenditures and increased operating costs to comply with various state and federal regulations regarding water quality and the disposal of residual waste created by the treatment process.

"During 1989 Pennsylvania-American invested $10.8 million in new construction projects that will benefit our customers statewide. Before the end of this year, we will complete an additional $48.3 million in construction. These projects combined with continued increases in daily operating costs, such as chemicals and power which alone make up 10 percent of the average customer's bill, are some of the reasons for requesting increased revenues," Smith said.

New water utility regulations that will become effective in 1990 include mandatory state filtration (July), 38 new drinking water standards (June), and an additional 25 standards scheduled to be proposed before the end of the year. Also expected to be enacted are more stringent standards for lead and copper (November 1990).

In 1991 new standards are expected to be set for radiological contaminents including radon in public water supplies. These standards will require the construction and operation of sophisticated facilities of many groundwater supplies. Additional standards for a number of disinfection byproducts are also expected to be issued in September 1991.

New regulations being proposed in the area of waste disposal require the company to upgrade, construct and operate new waste treatment facilities.

The company will spend the remainder of the year proving the need for its requested rate increase to the Public Utility Commission.

LOS ANGELES (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - Santa Fe Pacific Pipeline Partners L.P. (NYSE: SFL) announced today that it has completed the purchase of Shell Oil Company's refined products terminal at Tucson, Ariz. The terminal consists of 191,000 barrels of product storage and truck loading facilities located adjacent to the Partnership's existing Tucson Terminal.

John P. DesBarres, president and chief executive officer of Santa Fe Pacific Pipelines Inc., the general partner, said that this facility can be integrated efficiently with the partnership's existing terminal which will enhance service levels. Although the purchase price was not disclosed, DesBarres noted that funding for the purchase was internally generated.

A similar terminal facility in Phoenix was purchased from Shell last year.
DesBarres said that both acquisitions are viewed as strategic opportunities to increase terminaling market share in Arizona, which will provide an attractive return to unitholders and better position the partnership for future growth.

Santa Fe Pacific Pipeline Partners is the largest independent refined petroleum products pipeline in the western United States. It serves six western states with approximately 3,300 miles of common carrier pipeline and 15 truck loading terminals.

BALTIMORE (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - Baltimore Gas and Electric Co. (NYSE: BGE) reported common stock earnings of $36,244,000 for the two months ended Feb. 28, 1990, equivalent to $.45 per common share.

This compares with earnings of $43,484,000, equivalent to $.55 per share, for the two months ended Feb. 28, 1989. For the 12 months ended Feb. 28, 1990, earnings on common stock were $236,670,000, equivalent to $2.95 per share. This compares with $259,940,000, or $3.28 per share, for the 12 months ended Feb. 28, 1989.

Earnings per share for the company's utility business and for its diversified business activities were as follows:

Periods ended	Two months		12 months
Feb. 28	1990	1989	1990	1989
Utility operations	$.46	$.52	$2.74	$3.05
Diversified activities	(.01)	.03	.21	.23
Total	.45	.55	2.95	3.28

The decreases in utility earnings for both periods are attributable to the effects of higher operations and maintenance expenses and increased financing costs. Utility earnings for the 12 months ended Feb. 28, 1990, also reflect a lower rate of electric sales growth.

Kilowatt-hour sales of electricity for the two months ended Feb. 28, 1990, increased 6.6 percent from the comparable period last year. Sales to commercial and industrial customers increased 5.7 percent reflecting continued strength of the local economy. Sales to residential customers increased 7.8 percent primarily due to continued customer growth and usage.

The total volume of gas sold during the current two-month period was essentially unchanged from the same period last year.

Earnings from diversified business activities primarily represent the results of operations of Constellation Holdings, Inc. and its subsidiaries. The decreases in Constellation's earnings for both periods are attributable to the timing of income recognition on various energy projects and sales of certain financial investments and real estate.

CORAL GABLES, FL (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - Avatar Holdings Inc. (NASDAQ: AVTR), as previously announced, adopted the installment method of profit recognition for homesite sales effective Jan. 1, 1989. This modification in accounting for Avatar's homesite sales does not alter the way Avatar conducts its business operations nor does it impact Avatar's liquidity, although it has resulted in a reduction of reported gross revenues from real estate operations. Net income for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989 amounted to $572,000 ($.08 per share) on gross revenues of $194,222,000, of which $42,029,000 was deferred for recognition in future periods. Had Avatar remained on the full accrual method of profit recognition during 1989, its pre-tax income would have been $20,401,000.

Operations for the year ended Dec. 31, 1988, which were reported under the accrual method of profit recognition and not directly comparable to 1989, resulted in pre-tax income of $19,702,000 and net income of $11,868,000 or $1.43 per share on revenues of $153,927,000.

ZEELAND, MI (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - Tropical woods that cannot be obtained from sustained-yield forest sources are being eliminated from the standard products of Herman Miller, Inc. (NASDAQ: MLHR), the Fortune 500 office furniture manufacturer.

"We share the growing worldwide concern about the tropical rain forests," said Richard H. Ruch, chief executive officer. "Rain forests are a critical resource to people around the world, benefiting us ecologically and providing valuable raw materials and by-products to many industries. The rain forests will survive only if we add value to them by encouraging their productive use rather than their destruction."

One of the most visible results of Herman Miller's policy will be with the Eames(R) lounge chair, a product made with rosewood obtained from South American sources. Designed by Charles and Ray Eames and manufactured by Herman Miller since its introduction in the 1950s, the Eames lounge chair will be offered only in alternative veneers when the company's existing supply of rosewood is depleted. Rosewood could return to the product line if a sustained-yield source is found that meets the quality standards of the Eames lounge chair.

In establishing its new policy, Herman Miller has been working with Friends of the Earth, a respected environmental group based in London, England, and the International Hardwood Products Association, which has been studying the rain forest problem from an environmental, economic and political perspective. Both organizations have been involved with the International Timber Trade Organization (ITTO), a multi-government agency established in 1985. ITTO is currently establishing guidelines for sustained-yield forest management that will be used throughout the world.

Specialists in Herman Miller's Design and Development group have been working since early 1989 to identify the forest sources of woods used by Herman Miller and its subsidiaries. In addition to documenting forest management practices, they have been identifying alternative woods and finishes to offer in place of woods obtainable only from unsustained forests.

Helikon Furniture Company, a Herman Miller subsidiary based in Taftville, Conn., is also in the process of eliminating tropical woods from unsustained sources from its standard product lines. Highly regarded for its expertise working with exotic woods, Helikon is documenting the sources of all of its woods and has ceased development of woods for new products that cannot be obtained from sustained sources. Work is under way to add alternative veneers to the Helikon product line that can replace veneers not available from sustained forest sources.

"Herman Miller has always been an environmentally conscious company, which has been demonstrated through appropriate land use at manufacturing sites, in meeting or exceeding EPA standards in manufacturing processes, in waste management, and in recycling efforts," Ruch said. "This corporate decision does not make new policy, but instead extends our environmental consciousness to the protection of rain forests."

Environmental groups, industry experts, international trade organizations, and officials of some rain forest countries are urging policies that will add economic value to the rain forest, such as reforestation and sustained forest management, he said.

Herman Miller is working with trade publications and concerned organizations to communicate its policy to interior design and architectural firms, the furniture industry, and to members of Congress who will be shaping legislation that regulates imported timber.

"Our efforts show that the furniture industry can work hand in hand with environmental groups, government officials, and the rain forest nations to put in place the mechanisms to increase the value of the tropical rain forests. The destruction has been caused by those who stood to gain from the elimination, rather than preservation, of the rain forests. We believe our influence and the influence of those who are working with us will create policies throughout the world that are for the benefit of both the environment and mankind," Ruch said.

Herman Miller, Inc. is an international firm engaged primarily in the manufacture and sale of furniture systems, products, and related services principally for offices and, to a lesser extent, for health- care facilities and other uses. The company is based in Zeeland.

NEW YORK (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - Bristol-Myers Squibb Company (NYSE: BMY) today announced a second major victory in its fight to prevent several generic drug companies from continuing to import and sell products that infringe Bristol-Myers Squibb's patent for crystalline cefadroxil monohydrate (Duricef/R/).

On March 15, the International Trade Commission (ITC) unanimously concluded that Bristol-Myers Squibb's patent on crystalline cefadroxil monohydrate is valid and granted the company's request for permanent relief. The ITC issued an exclusion order and cease and desist orders which, following a period of Presidential review, will prohibit Biocraft Laboratories, Inc., Kalipharma, Inc. and Purepac Pharmaceutical Company from selling infringing cefadroxil products which have been imported into the United States, and which will bar importation into the United States of infringing cefadroxil products of Gema, S.A., Istituto Biochimico Italiano (IBI) and Institut Biochemique, S.A. (IBSA).

Bristol-Myers Squibb is gratified by this final ruling, which concluded a full year of ITC hearings and a thorough review of data in the cefadroxil case. Furthermore, the ITC's decision is consistent with a Dec. 8, 1989 ruling by the United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit.

Bristol-Myers Squibb is confident the ITC's action will be upheld in the event of an appeal. The company is continuing to pursue aggressively its claims for full injunctive relief and damages against the manufacturers, importers and distributors of infringing cefadroxil.

WHITE PLAINS, NY (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - The United Kingdom Cable Authority today awarded NYNEX Corporation (NYSE: NYN) and Cross Country Cable of New Jersey the cable television franchise for the London borough of Bromley. Located in southeast London, Bromley contains 115,000 households.

The cable franchise award marks NYNEX's entry into the UK cable market. Gregory McLean, director - United Kingdom CATV, said the franchise opens new business opportunities for NYNEX. "NYNEX now has the chance to couple its telecommunications strengths with the cable system design and building expertise of Cross Country Cable," McLean said. "Together we will provide quality cable, data services and eventually voice services to customers in Bromley."

NYNEX Corporation, based in New York, is the fourth largest telecommunications company in the United States ranking in sales. The company provides information products and systems to a diverse base of customers from offices in 13 countries and across the United States. Through New England Telephone and New York Telephone, NYNEX delivers quality telecommunications services to the Northeastern United States.

Cross Country Cable, located in Warren, N.J., is a privately held company that has designed and installed cable television systems in the United States and Puerto Rico. In a separate decision by the Cable Authority, Cross Country Cable was recently awarded the Brighton, England cable television franchise.

NYNEX and Cross Country Cable are also applicants for the cable franchise in Bournemouth, a borough on the southern coast of England. A decision from the Cable Authority is expected in April.

MILFORD, MA (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - Home National Corporation (NASDAQ: HNCP) announced today that its final results for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989 indicate a loss of $26.6 million, or $4.18 per share.

This compares to net income of $4.1 million, or 62 cents per share, for the year ended Dec. 31, 1988.

On Feb. 7, 1990 the company reported an estimated year end loss for 1989 of $20.4 million. The revised loss figures released today are primarily the result of additional write-offs of nonperforming loans.

Included in the results for 1989 is a provision for loan losses of $38.2 million. This compares to the 1988 provision for losses of $7.1 million. For the year, $28.0 million in nonperforming loans were charged-off as compared to $2.7 million during 1988.

At Dec. 31, 1989 the company's reserve for loan losses totaled $22.1 million, or 6.18 percent of total loans, up from $11.9 million, or 3.1 percent of total loans, as of year end 1988. Nonperforming loans amounted to $69.3 million, or 19.4 percent total loans of $357.2 million, as of Dec. 31, 1989. Based upon these results, the company's shareholders' equity was reduced to $5.5 million, or 86 cents per share, at Dec. 31, 1989. This compares to $33.6 million, or $5.12 per share at year end 1988.

The revised figures released today bring the company's primary capital ratio to 5.4 percent at year end 1989. This is below the minimum primary capital ratio required by regulatory authorities. The company has been advised that its auditors Shatswell, MacLeod & Company will include in their report on the company's 1989 financial statements the qualification that there is substantial doubt about the company's ability to continue as a going concern.

The company noted its positive liquidity position, with little or no change in local deposit levels. Bank officials stressed that funds on deposit are fully insured to the extent provided under FDIC regulations.

As has been previously reported, the company along with its financial advisor. Lyons, Zomback & Ostrowski, Inc., is actively addressing the need to raise additional capital and to bring its capital ratio into regulatory compliance.

In addition to seeking external capital, an internal cost containment program, which includes staff reductions and the consolidation and streamlining of retail bank functions, has been implemented. Steps are being taken to reduce the overall size of the bank's balance sheet primarily through a reduction of out-of-area time deposits.

Commenting on the year-end results, President and Chief Executive Officer Brian A. Elsden stated, "We are actively focusing our efforts on reducing non-interest expenses and have made significant improvements in this area." He went on to say that the bank and its advisors are currently addressing the bank's capital needs and he is hopeful that the bank will augment its capital this year.

MINNEAPOLIS (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - Norwest Corp. (NYSE: NOB) and Wyoming National Bancorporation (NASDAQ: WYNB) said today they have signed a letter of intent which could lead to the acquisition of Wyoming National Bancorporation by Norwest.

Terms of the letter of intent provide for the purchase of all of Wyoming National Bancorporation's common stock outstanding at the time of acquisition for a cash price of $20 per share or a total purchase price of approximately $43 million.

Norwest has the right to examine the records and properties of Wyoming National Bancorporation before determining whether to proceed with the transaction. This decision will be made no later than April 6, 1990. Completion of the acquisition also requires a mutually acceptable definitive agreement, and approval by Wyoming National shareholders and various regulatory agencies.

Wyoming National Bancorporation, based in Casper, has assets of $450 million, owns six banks throughout Wyoming and has 8.3 percent of the total deposits in the state. Its banks operated under the Norwest name through a franchise agreement from 1985 through 1988.

"Wyoming National's locations are an excellent fit for Norwest because they are similar to the markets in Montana and South Dakota where Norwest has done business for more than 60 years," said Kenneth R. Murray, Norwest's executive vice president for national community banking. "In addition, we expect the acquisition will have a positive effect on earnings per share for Norwest stockholders in the first year."

Norwest Corp. is a $24.3 million diversified financial services organization which provides banking, banking-related and specialized financial services through more than 1,160 offices in 47 states and internationally.

SAN FRANCISCO (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - Pacific Bell announced last Friday a joint-marketing agreement with Centrex Equipment Associates, a division of Introlink Communication Systems, that will allow business customers to order a full line of telecommunications equipment along with network services with one call to Pacific Bell.

"This agreement resulted from a single, overriding objective -- to make ordering telecommunications services easier for our business customers by allowing them to arrange for all of their needs with one call," said Bob Lee, Pacific Bell's executive vice president for marketing. "This agreement with Centrex Equipment Associates evolved from Pacific Bell's goal to be second to none when it comes to customer service and quality products."

Under the four-year agreement, Pacific Bell will be offering a complete line of voice and data communications equipment, including phone sets, key telephone systems, paging equipment and modems, with its CENTREX and Commstar II business communications systems. Pacific Bell also will be customers' single point of contact for coordination of installation and maintenance.

The program will begin implementation in May in Sacramento. By year's end it will have been expanded to also include Los Angeles, Orange County, the San Francisco Bay Area, San Diego, Fresno and Bakersfield.

"Our selection of Centrex Equipment Associates followed a rigorous evaluation of dozens of equipment suppliers and their products," said Marty Kaplan, Pacific Bell's executive vice president for customer services. "Quite simply, Centrex Equipment Associates is unsurpassed in the quality of its products and services. As a result, customers can be confident that they're purchasing the highest quality equipment and that the performance of their entire telecommunications system will meet their expectations."

"We are very pleased to have been selected to be Pacific Bell's associate in this program," said Keith Askew, president and chief operating officer of Introlink Communication Systems. "Providing a single point contact for all customers' communications needs is a crucial aspect of customer satisfaction. We believe this will be come increasingly important as the diversity and complexity of telecommunications services continues to expand. Customers will require someone who can put it all together for them."

Kaplan said that the joint-marketing arrangement will be particularly beneficial to small- and medium-sized businesses.

"These companies often don't have someone with the expertise to sort through the myriad of telecommunications hardware to determine which will provide optimal service with CENTREX or Commstar II," he said. "Once they've selected equipment, there's the installation and maintenance to be coordinated among different providers of network services and hardware. Now, we'll handle all of that."

Pacific Bell CENTREX is a private business telecommunications system that operates from a Pacific Bell central switching office, rather than from privately owned switching equipment at a customer's premises. Commstar II is a similar system, offering a wide variety of call-handling features, for businesses with two to 30 lines.

Pacific Bell is a subsidiary of Pacific Telesis Group, a diversified telecommunications corporation based in San Francisco. Introlink Communications Systems is a telecommunications equipment company headquartered in Sacramento.

NEW YORK (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - William F. Reilly, president of Macmillan, Inc., a unit of Maxwell Communication Corporation plc, announced today that he has resigned to actively manage K-III Holdings, L.P.

K-III Holdings is a company established in February 1989 by Reilly and other former Macmillan executives, including Charles G. McCurdy and Beverly C. Chell, in partnership with Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co. Reilly is president and CEO of K-III Holdings, L.P.

"I fully understand Bill's desire to be an entrepreneur," said Robert Maxwell, chairman and chief executive officer of Maxwell Communications,m "but we're sorry to see him go. Under his stewardship, sales and earnings increased substantially, and he worked closely with our other managers to develop important operating synergies."

"It's difficult to leave an organization at which you've spent ten productive years," Reilly said. "But I leave a strong team in place at what is one of the best -- and most profitable -- publishing houses in the U.S." He added, "Bob Maxcwell is a dynamic and creative business leader whose plans know no national border. Macmillan can rightly serve as the centerpiece of his U.S. operations."

Charles McCurdy, executive vice president of K-III and former chief financial officer of Macmillan, said that the company intends to expand aggressively, both through internal growth of its current companies and by acquisitions.

"We're hoping to build a large, diversified company without resorting to the over-leveraged financing that has been the downfall of many companies in recent years," McCurdy added. "We are targeting a variety of opportunities in publishing, information and related businesses. Frankly, the environment for strategic acquisitions right now is very positive."

K-III Holdings, which is based in New York, has revenues of more than $200 million. Its operating companies are Macmillan Book Clubs, which operates book clubs, continuity, and related direct mail services; Intertec

Publishing Corporation, which publishes trade magazines in broadcasting, telecommunications, engineering, horticulture and farming, as well as technical books, and K-III Press, Inc. (formerly Thomson Transport Press), which provides information products for the ocean shipping, trucking and rail transportation industries.

JACKSONVILLE, FL (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - Because of growing concern about a softening economy, Barnett Banks, Inc. (NYSE: BBI) announced today it will restore the company's loan loss reserve ratio to its historic range.

The company also will take several other steps to reemphasize its commitment to enhanced credit quality.

The reserve will be increased by $60 million to more than $310 million, creating a ratio of 1.35 percent.

This improves on the historic level of 1.30 percent prior to the 1986 acquisition of $3 billion of thrift assets. These had only nominal reserves, because of a heavy concentration of residential mortgages, and resulted in Barnett's ratio declining to 1.06 percent.

Barnett has been rebuilding this key ratio, but the current level of 1.12 percent has not been improving rapidly enough to reflect the present environment, said Charles E. Rice, chairman and chief executive officer.

The expected impact on first-quarter results of this and other special measures will be earnings in a range of $15 million ($.24 per share) to $18 million ($.29 per share), compared to $62 million ($1.00 per share) in the first quarter of 1989.

Despite opportunities such as bond profits, Barnett management does not plan to recognize significant onetime income items to offset this temporary decline in earnings. "Most opportunities for such temporary gains involve mortgaging our future or diminishing future financial flexibility," said Rice.

Barnett's plans for the rest of the year, as adjusted by actions announced today, call for substantially lower provisions for commercial and commercial real estate losses as well as somewhat lower margins as a result of increased levels of non-performing loans.

Today's announcement follows a rigorous examination of commercial real estate loans by the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency (OCC) followed by the company's internal review. All significant commercial real estate loans in the company's four largest national banks were reviewed by the OCC or Barnett's credit review personnel. Loans in these banks represent more than half the company's loans in this category.

The reviews stringently applied credity quality standards, resulting in the reclassification of certain loans, some to non-performing status. The valuation of all significant parcels of other real estate owned (foreclosed property) was also reviewed.

The following actions will be implemented by March 31 and reflected in the company's first-quarter results:

1) Recognition of commercial real estate charge-offs of approximately $18 million, for which $15 million in reserves had previously been allocated for these specific credits, resulting in a net pre-tax loss of $3 million. Total first-quarter charge-offs in all loan categories will approximate $45 million, or .80 percent of loans, compared to $35 million, or .64 percent, for the fourth quarter of 1989. These charge-off ratios still fall significantly below industry averages.

2) The expensing of a special provision for loan losses of approximately $60 million above charge-offs to increase reserves using the current methodology. These additions to the reserve reflect adoption of new, more conservative allocations based on loan classifications applied throughout Barnett's entire loan portfolio.

3) Placing an additional $80 million in loans on non-performing status, increasing total non-performing loans at the end of the first quarter to approximately $310 million. Other real estate owned will approximate $145 million for a total of $455 million in non-performing assets, or approximately 1.90 percent of loans and other real estate owned, compared to 1.44 percent at year-end. The new level of the loan loss reserve, at more than $310 million, will cover 100 percent of total non-performing loans.

Barnett's non-performing assets ratio continues to be substantially better than industry averages.

Rice noted that throughout its 113-year history, Barnett has made similar decisions to adjust to changing economic conditions. "These actions impact short-term performance, but fundamentally position us for consistent future results," he said.

In all of 1989, Barnett earned $256.7 million ($4.07 per share), up 13 percent from 1988. So far in 1990, the company's fundamental performance has shown substantial strength, reflected in continued strong earning asset growth, an improved net interest margin, good control of salary and other non-interest expenses, and solid non-interest income growth.

"Although building additional reserve levels creates a temporary earnings decline, it is prudent to take this conservative approach in light of current concern about real estate markets," said Rice. Nevertheless, he noted, Barnett's markets, particularly Florida, continue to grow substantially faster than the nation, fueled primarily by strong population immigration, averaging 350,000 annually for the past 10 years and projected to continue at a similar pace.

"With this population and employment growth as a fundamental driver -- and the overall strength we see in Florida -- we will continue meeting the credit needs of our customers, including the prudent funding of real estate development," Rice said.

More than 50 percent of Barnett's real estate loans are for single-family residences, which have the lowest loss experience of any loan type, less than .03 percent over the last five years. Total reserves cover approximately 1.85 percent of loans other than single-family real estate loans and 3.00 percent of commercial and commercial real estate loans.

Barnett is a $29-billion asset, two-state banking organization, with projected equity capital of $1.6 billion, loss reserves of $310 million and total primary capital of $2.3 billion. It is the leading bank in Florida and the eighth-largest in Georgia. The company's stock (BBI) is listed on the New York Stock Exchange.

IRVINE, CA (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - Fidelity National Financial, Inc. (AMEX: FNF), a leading title insurance underwriter, announced today that it has commenced its previously announced cash "Dutch Auction" self-tender offer for 250,000 shares of the company's common stock (approximately 7.5 percent of the shares currently outstanding).

Under the tender offer, Fidelity invites its shareholders to tender shares at prices not greater than $10 nor less than $9 per share, specified by the tendering shareholders.

Based upon the number of shares tendered and the prices specified by the tendering shareholders, Fidelity will determine the single per share price that will allow Fidelity to buy 250,000 shares, or such lesser number as are properly tendered.

Subject to possible proration, all of the shares that are properly tendered at prices at or below that purchase price, and not withdrawn, will be purchased at the purchase price, net to the selling shareholder in cash. All other shares tendered and not purchased will be returned to the shareholder.

The tender offer, proration period and withdrawal rights will expire at 8 p.m. Eastern Time on the 30th business day after commencement of the offer (anticipated to be April 26, 1990), unless the offer is extended by Fidelity.

Fidelity National said that neither it nor its board of directors makes any recommendation to any shareholder as to whether to tender or refrain from tendering shares. Fidelity has been advised that its directors and executive officers may tender up to 47,000 shares pursuant to the offer.

Georgeson & Company Inc. will serve as information agent to the offer (with the telephone number 800-223-2064), and the depositary will be Continental Stock Transfer and Trust Company.

At the time they approved the tender offer, the board of directors of the company authorized entry by the company into a definitive stock purchase agreement with its Chairman and President, William P. Foley, II.

Pursuant to this agreement, the company will purchase 100,000 shares of its stock from Foley (approximately 8 percent of Foley's beneficial holdings) at the conclusion of the tender offer, subject only to possible proration. The purchase price for these shares will be the purchase price set by the company for purchases pursuant to the tender offer.

DENVER (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - Public Service Co. of Colorado (NYSE: PSR) Friday filed a request with the Colorado Public Utilities Commission to continue lower electric rates for all of its customers.

A 4.29 percent reduction in electric rates expires March 31. Public Service has asked the PUC to immediately authorize a 2.81 percent reduction, effective April 1, for the balance of the year.

At the same time, Public Service said that later this year it will make an application for an all inclusive rate case hearing before the PUC. James H. Ranniger, vice president, Regulation and Distribution Operations, said that it has been over six years since PSCo's last rate filing, and the company needs to revisit with the PUC all of the issues involved in how electricity and natural gas are priced for customers. "Our rate case filing later this year will not necessarily mean that energy rates will increase," Ranniger said.

Public Service has lowered electric rates a total of about $68 million during the past two years. "This has occurred," said Ranniger, "despite seven years of accumulated inflation. Improved management, increased employee productivity and demand side management programs previously put in place, have contributed to these lower rates," he said.

PSCo initially reached an agreement in February 1988 with the staff of the PUC and the Office of Consumer Counsel (OCC) allowing the sharing of benefits resulting from PSCo's earnings above the earnings level granted in the 1983 rate filing. "With the impending expiration of this agreement " Ranniger said, "we have decided to file for a continuing rate decrease to become effective April 1 so our customers can continue to have one of the lowest electric rates in the nation."

Public Service is making the rate reduction filing even though it has no legal obligation to do so, and has further pledged that it will make a filing early in 1991 to make customer refunds if company earnings are greater than presently authorized levels, even with the decreased rates.

BALTIMORE (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - The Baltimore area Jiffy Lube Cooperative today announced that none of its more than 300 employees will be cut as a result of the recently announced move of Jiffy Lube International headquarters to Houston.

Jiffy Lube International, which was recently purchased by Pennzoil, has announced it is cutting 60 local employees and moving to Pennzoil's corporate home, Houston.

According to Pete Blauvelt, president of the Baltimore Jiffy Lube Co-op, local service operations will not be affected by the headquarters move. "We've got 32 successful service centers in central Maryland," said Blauvelt. "Each of those stores employs approximately 10 people, including service and management personnel. Each store is individually owned and operated by local business people. Jiffy Lube started in Baltimore. Today, some of the most successful Jiffy Lubes are in the Baltimore area.

GLENVIEW, IL (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - Kraft General Foods (KGF) announced today that it has decided to change the name of Sealtest Free nonfat ice cream to Sealtest Free nonfat frozen dessert.

This decision should allow KGF to market Sealtest Free without delay in key states where inconsistent rulings on the product's name would have slowed distribution. The decision is consistent with the view of the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) that frozen dessert is a more appropriate description of the product under existing standards.

KGF is already marketing Sealtest Free as a "nonfat frozen dessert" in several states, including New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Ohio.

The Sealtest Free product, which contains less than a half gram of fatp?er serving, will continue to be available in more than 25 Eastern states. The product was introduced in October 1989 and has achieved strong consumer and trade acceptance.

Commenting on the change in name, Thomas Herskovits, president of Kraft General Foods Frozen Products, said, "We have an excellent product and our first priority is to market it to as many consumers as we can, as quickly as we can. The name 'nonfat frozen dessert' will help us do that. We will continue to work with the ice cream industry and regulators to modernize existing identity standards, and we are confident that these efforts will ultimately succeed."

The International Ice Cream Association and several states have proposed identity standards that would allow use of the name "nonfat ice cream."

RALEIGH, NC (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - Acton Corporation (AMEX: ATN) today announced that operations for the year ended December 31, 1989 resulted in a net income of $18,526,471 or $6.42 per share as compared to a net loss of $693,812 or $1.08 per share for the year ended December 31, 1988.

The Company's financial condition was strengthened in 1989 as total assets increased $21,508,934 to $273,947,051; total liabilities increased $9,822,037 resulting in an increase in net assets of $11,686,895. Stockholders' equity totalled $73,988,952 at December 31, 1989 compared to $62,302,057 at December 31, 1988.

The 1989 earnings include $11,252,223 of income realized in connection with the sale of the Company's shares of Land of Lincoln Savings and Loan resulting from the acquisition of Land of Lincoln by Household International and includes approximately $11,910,000 of gain from the sale of the Company's cable television system located in Beaufort County, South Carolina.

Operations for the quarter ended December 31, 1989 resulted in a loss of approximately $4,109,265 or $1.73 per share compared to a loss of approximately $804,000 or $0.48 per share in 1988. The fourth quarter 1989 loss was primarily due to a decline in the value of certain securities in the Company's investment portfolio.

Acton Corporation is primarily engaged in specialized automobile insurance underwriting, real estate development and the operation of a cable television system.

CINCINNATI, (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - Jacor Communications, Inc. (NASDAQ: JCOR), Cincinnati, announced this afternoon the resignation of Frank E. Wood as president and chief operating officer. The announcement was made by Frank E. Wood and Terry S. Jacobs, Jacor's chairman and chief executive officer. Wood became president of Jacor in 1986 when he sold WEBN, Cincinnati, to Jacor.

"It has been a great experience to have helped Jacor become one of the major players in the radio industry," said Wood. "I leave Jacor in the control of a very talented managerial group. They will take Jacor up to the next plateau."

Wood said that he planned to start a new private company involved in radio station ownership and consulting. "Corporate life has been rewarding, but I look forward to more entrepreneurial challenges. And I plan to take some time off when my wife has a baby."

Terry S. Jacobs stated, "We respect Frank's wishes to spend more time with his young family and create his own privately owned broadcasting entity which will not compete with Jacor radio properties."

Jacobs continued, "I will assume the title and some of the responsibilities of president; the balance of duties will be divided up with the creation of an 'Office of the chief operating officer.' That office will be directed by Robert L. Lawrence and Randy Michaels, both executive vice presidents. In addition, R. Christopher Weber has been appointed to the new position of senior vice president and chief financial officer. Our operating group is one of the best in the industry."

Jacor Communications, Inc., headquartered in Cincinnati, Ohio, currently owns 13 radio stations, a cable television system, the Georgia Network, Eastman Radio, Inc. and Critical Mass Media, Inc. The company's stations are located in Atlanta, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Denver, Jacksonville, Knoxville, Nashville and Tampa.

ATLANTA, (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - Landmark American Corp. announced today that its board of directors has authorized the filing within the coming week of Form 15 with the Securities and Exchange Commission for the purpose of becoming a private company.

W. Harrison Merrill, chief executive officer of Landmark, said "We are able to become a private company because there are less than 300 shareholders of record. Due to the company's current financial condition the board believes that it is in the best interest of the company to take this course of action because it will relieve the fiscal pressure of the filing requirement imposed on a public company."

Landmark is an Austell, Ga.,-based real estate development company which has specialized in the past in development and rehabilitation of historic properties. On Jan. 30, Landmark filed a petition with the United States Bankruptcy Court under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code. Landmark will become private effective immediately upon filing with the SEC, and thereafter will not be required to file periodic and other reports with the SEC.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - Ian Bisco, vice president of Cosworth Engineering Inc., announced today that the company intended to make a limited number of multibutterfly plenum assemblies available for its DFS users starting with the Detroit Grand Prix on June 17, 1990.

The system was tested successfully at the open CART test at Laguna Seca earlier this month with Dick Simon Racing and Bayside Racing.

Scott Brayton, driving the Simon Amway Lola 90 with a Cosworth development engine fitted with this plenum assembly, posted fastest times on all three days.

According to Scott and Domonic Dobson (Bayside), the new setup gives more low down power and a much greater control of the power range, which is so important on a road course.

Cosworth has also made some more internal changes to its DFS engine with increases in horsepower throughout the range. Unfortunately this will only be available to the designated factory teams until fully developed.

SAN ANTONIO (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - San Antonio based Adtec Inc., manufacturer of prison hardware, has completed the transaction reported earlier this week with Jack Hunter Investments, Inc. -- a San Antonio-based venture capital company.

As a result, operating capital necessary for the growth and development of the company is in place.

According to president and chief executive officer, Samuel C. Youngblood, "This transaction is a necessary step which has carefully positioned the company to capitalize on a dynamically growing industry. The combination of Adtec's existing product line and this injection of capital provides the formula for realizing the promising potential of our industry in the 1990's."

Youngblood went on to say, "Adtec always has and will continue to focus on meeting our customers' needs."

Jack Hunter, new board chairman, whose venture capital company is providing both debt and equity in this transaction, says, "We serve an exciting, growing market. Our product line is outstanding. We have the right management team. These capabilities, supported by the new capital structure, will make the 1990's Adtec's decade for growth."

LOS ANGELES (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - The Van Nuys, Calif., laboratory of SmithKline Beecham Clinical Laboratories has received certification to provide testing services for companies required by the federal government to have drug testing programs.

The laboratory in northwest Los Angeles received written notice March 15 of the certification by the National Institute on Drug Abuse (NIDA), which is the federal licensing agency for the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services. Certification is required for laboratories performing substance of abuse testing for the federal government, certain firms with federal contracts and companies regulated by the U.S. Department of Transportation.

"The private sector has accepted NIDA certification as the gold standard when it comes to drug testing," said Michael McNulty, SmithKline Beecham Clinical Laboratories vice president of corporate testing programs. "Passing NIDA's rigorous requirements means we now have a federally certified laboratory in the West to more efficiently serve our local clients."

Four other SmithKline Beecham laboratories were certified last year by the federal government. Including those laboratories in Atlanta, Chicago, Dallas and Philadelphia, SmithKline Beecham has more NIDA- certified facilities than any other company in the clinical laboratory industry.

SmithKline Beecham Clinical Laboratories is upgrading part of its existing facility for a new 7,000-square-foot testing area, scheduled for completion in early summer. The new testing area will have a capacity of nearly 3,000 specimens per day.

"Substance of abuse testing offers the most significant growth of any segment within our industry," McNulty said. "With Van Nuys' contribution, we believe we are poised to earn a substantial share of the nation's drug testing market," McNulty said. That market has been estimated at $500 million annually, he added.

NIDA sets stringent requirements for laboratory security, positive specimen identification and employee confidentiality. As an example, NIDA requires chain of custody procedures to ensure the identity of the specimen is maintained throughout the testing process. NIDA also sends random test samples through the laboratories and makes unannounced on-site inspections to ensure quality control.

SmithKline Beecham Clinical Laboratories, the nation's largest laboratory network, has 26 facilities throughout the United States and in Canada. The company serves industrial companies, hospitals, physicians and other laboratories.

NEW YORK (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - HRE Properties (NYSE: HRE) said today that its first-quarter results were hurt by the high costs of defending against the Kimco group's attempt to take control of the trust.

Net income in the first quarter was $194,000, or 3 cents per share, compared to $1.36 million, or 23 cents per share, in the fiscal 1989 first quarter. Funds from operations were $1.4 million in the 1990 first quarter, down from $2.4 million in the same period in the prior fiscal year.

According to the company, results in the 1990 first quarter include unusual charges totalling $915,000 principally from costs associated with the Kimco matter.

Commenting on the results, Charles J. Urstadt, chairman of HRE, stated, "The Kimco-Orentreich group's actions over the past year, culminating in HRE's redemption of half of their shares caused us to spend substantive amounts of time and trust money in response to the Kimco matter. We hope these costs are now behind us, and our full energies can be devoted to pursuing our strategy which focuses on increasing rental income, further reducing the geographic diversity of our portfolio and finding additional ways to contain costs."

Urstadt also noted that cash flow from the trust's operating properties, the core of HRE's business, was $2.4 million. This figure was up slightly from the 1989 quarter even though HRE has one less property this year.

"The quarter's earnings reflect more depreciation as a result of significant capital expenditures incurred last year, and lower interest income. Overall occupancy levels remained high at 93 percent, unchanged this quarter. He concluded, "It is critical that HRE be favorably positioned for recovery in the nation's real estate markets, and we are on our way to that goal."

BIRMINGHAM, AL (MARCH 16) PR NEWSWIRE - Federal Judge Sam Pointer issued a decision today ordering USX (NYSE: X) to live up to its advance notice obigations under the contracting out clause in the 1987 labor agreement with the United Steelworkers of America (USW), the union said today.

This marks the first time in the long relationship between USX and the union that either party has obtained a court order of this kind, the union said.

After a string of arbitration victories on the notice issue that were won by E.B. Rich, the USW sub-district director in Fairfield, Ala., the USX

Board of Arbitration handed down an award in February of 1989 directing the Fairfield Works' management to comply with the contract's notice requirements in the future. When USX failed to do so, the USW went to court to enforce the board's award.

In granting the union's request, Pointer found that: "Arbitrator Dybeck did not order USX to try to comply with Section 2-C. Arbitrator Dybeck ordered USX to comply 100 percent of the time."

Carl B. Frankel, associate general counsel for the USW in Pittsburgh, said "This is a crucial decision. Advance notice is the key to enforcement of the new contracting out restrictions and Judge Pointer's order puts some teeth into that requirement. From now on, Fairfield Works management face contempt of court charges if it steps over the line the judge has drawn. What's more, the decision sends a message to other plants where USX is not fully living up to its contractual commitments.

"The credit belongs to our leaders in Fairfield," Frankel concluded. "That includes the local union leaders who initiated the complaints; E.B. Rich, who won one arbitration case after another; and Thermon Phillips, director for USW District 36 in Birmingham, who pressed for court action when USX lagged in compliance."

A union spokesman said credit also goes to the union's Birmingham law firm Cooper, Mitch, Crawford, Kuykendall & Whatley, which argued the case before Pointer.

TEGUCIGALPA, HONDURAS (MARCH 16) UPI - The National Congress approved a motion Thursday calling for the United States to pay $9 million dollars to cover damage caused by U.S.-funded Nicaraguan rebels in Honduras.

The resolution also called on the government of President Rafael Leonardo Callejas to speed up the demobilization of the Contra rebels, some 10,000 to 12,000 of whom are camped inside Honduras 90 miles east of the capital.

''The Contras caused enormous economic damage to Honduras, like the depredation of forests, annihilation and damage to coffee plantations and physical damage to the border population,'' said Deputy Nicolas Cruz Torres, a member of the ruling National Party.

The Congress will call on the Foreign Ministry to demand $9 million from the United States, which financed the nine-year Contra war against Nicaragua's leftist government.

The Contras, who are included in a general amnesty passed into law Saturday by the Sandinista-dominated Nicaraguan legislature, have agreed to demobilize after Nicaraguan President-elect Violeta Chamorro takes power April 25.

Chamorro defeated President Daniel Ortega with 55 percent of the vote in Feb. 25 elections.

The Bush administration is currently seeking $32 million for transportation, agricultural supplies, food, and other basics to help the Contra rebels and their estimated 45,000 dependents to return to Nicaragua.

On Wednesday, Callejas called on the Contras to lay down their weapons and go back to Nicaragua.

''To the irregular forces of the Nicaraguan counterrevolution (Contras), I want to convey a clear message: the war in Central America is over,'' Callejas said.

Honduras, the poorest country in Central America, is suffering from severe economic problems with 60 percent of rural families earning less than $250 a year.

Honduras became increasingly disillusioned by the Contras when the government received less aid than it expected from the United States in return for its friendly relations.

In the past eight years, the United States has provided Honduras with about $200 million a year in military and economic aid, although it has been mostly military.

MEXICO CITY (MARCH 16) UPI - Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney arrived in Mexico Thursday to begin two days of talks with President Carlos Salinas de Gortari and Mexican businessmen aimed at boosting trade between the two nations.

Mulroney, accompanied by his wife Mila and Minister of International Commerce John Crosbie, was greeted at Mexico City's Benito Juarez International Airport by Mexican Foreign Minister Fernando Solana.

''I think that the president (Salinas) is leading Mexico into a very exciting new era of economic growth and prosperity. President Salinas has acquired a very (good) reputation around the world in a very short period of time,'' Mulroney told reporters.

''I hope the relationship between Mexico and Canada becomes the model for the rest of Latin America and Canada,'' he said.

Canadian Ambassador to Mexico David Winfield said Mulroney would sign 10 bilateral agreements with Salinas on increased trade, tourism, environmental improvements and the war on drugs.

''Canadian commercial relations with the U.S. and Mexico are more important than with any other country,'' Winfield said.

But he ruled out at this point an extension of the 1989 Canada-U.S. free trade agreement to include Mexico.

Graham Weaver, commercial counselor for the Canadian Embassy, said preliminary figures indicate two-way trade between Mexico and Canada rose 25 percent in 1989 over the previous year to $1.84 billion. Canadian exports to Mexico were worth $480 million for the year, leaving Mexico with a positive trade balance of $880 million.

''Mexico has a great advantage in the Canadian market,'' Winfield said.

He said the majority of Mexican exports to Canada consist of manufactured goods and agricultural products.

In the early 1980s, Mexican exports were dominated by petroleum products. In 1989, these products made up less than 5 percent of total exports. Trade between the two countries is expected to reach $4.2 billion by the year 2000.

Canadian companies are studying increased investment in agriculture, telecommunications, transportation and tourism in Mexico, in line with priorities set under Salinas' plan for development.

Foreign investment in Mexico is increasing following the restructuring of some $48 billion of Mexico's $96 billion foreign debt. Canadian banks participated in the debt restructuring under the Brady Plan, designed by U.S. Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady.

Mulroney was to meet for talks with Salinas Friday afternoon, ending with the signing of the bilateral agreements, and on Saturday with a group of Mexican businessmen.

JUNEAU, AK (MARCH 16) UPI - The skipper of an ice-bound fishing boat and chief engineer were plucked from the icy waters off St. Paul Island in the Bering Sea by helicopter Thursday, while four other crewmembers were lifted from the stranded vessel, the U.S. Coast Guard said.

Four of the crewmen were rescued from the Alaskan Monarch by a Coast Guard helicopter, then the skipper and chief engineer were washed overboard when ice pushed the 96-foot crabbing vessel onto rocks, Coast Guard spokesman Ed Moreth said.

The skipper, Morris Hanson, 60, of Seattle, and the chief engineer were immediately lifted from the icy water by the same helicopter, Moreth said.

The five crewmen were identified as Chuck West, 34, of Tok, Alaska; Steven Bell, 30, also of Tok; Rick Shepard, 24, of Anchorage; Thu Hoang Bui, 23, of San Jose, Calif., and Emmit Edwards, 36, of Missoula, Mont.

The boat had been trapped in heavy ice since Wednesday, Coast Guard officials said.

Moreth says Hanson and the engineer were treated at a clinic on the island for hypothermia, but the others required no medical attention.

''We haven't determined yet which of the five crewmen was the chief engineer,'' Moreth said.

PRAGUE, CZECHOSLOVAKIA (MARCH 16) UPI - West German President Richard von Weizsacker asked Czechoslovaks to forgive the Nazi takeover of their country 51 years ago and said a united Germany would make no claim on its neighbors' borders.

The playwright-president of the newly democratic East European nation, Vaclav Havel, blamed Adolf Hitler - ''a lunatic in jackboots'' - and not Germans, for the bloodless conquest of Czechoslovakia.

''We have to understand we were not violated by the German people but by a concrete person,'' he said Thursday.

Weizsacker arrived at Prague Castle escorted from the airport by the country's newly formed motorcycle police astride their new West German-made BMW machines. He was greeted by a full honor guard, resplendent in new uniforms of blue tunics and gray trousers.

Several hundred people gathered inside the castle walls for a glimpse of the two presidents.

Weizsacker asked the Czechoslovak people to forgive the Nazi takeover of their country, rejecting the concept that the German people should be collectively guilty for the Nazi past.

''We ask your pardon for this memory and we need your forgiveness,'' Weizsacker told a packed audience in the 15th-century hall, once the scene of knightly tournaments. ''Guilt, like innocence, is never a collective affair, but a personal one. Together, we bear the responsibility for what we will do in the present with our past heritage.

''Everyone in our country understands the profound symbolism of this step we take together toward peace,'' Weizsacker said. ''Fifty-one years ago, the German people marched militarily into your country. A profound injustice was brought to your country and to your peoples by the Germans.''

Havel, addressing the same audience, said Germans should apply their traditional ''love of order'' to unification.

''It is up to the Germans whether their unification process becomes a welcome motor for European unification or if it will become the brake of it,'' Havel said.

Weizsacker spoke generally of the ticklish border issue, saying, ''We respect the borders without any reservations and we have no geographical demands against any of our neighbors.''

Havel warned that a united Germany must assure Europe it will be spared German ultra-nationalism and remain within its border.

''The Germans have a great historical opportunity,'' the Czechoslovak president said. ''They should free the Europeans from fear when they claim the final validity of all existing borders, including those with Poland, or if they stop those who still today flirt with Nazi ideology.

''Then they can do much to ensure that Europe will not fear them and won't prevent their rapid unification,'' Havel said.

By the time Hitler arrived in Prague in 1939, he had annexed the Sudetenland, the German-speaking region of western Czechoslovakia that now borders both Germanys. Hitler annexed the area under the pretext of preserving the interests of the German minority there.

In Berlin the next day, he proclaimed the protectorate of Bohemia and Moravia and established the puppet state of Slovakia, dismembering the country he once characterized as ''conceived as a lie and conducted as a swindle for 20 years.''

The lack of any resistance by the Czechoslovaks or their nominal allies, the French and the British, is generally credited with opening the way for the start of World War II.

''What happened on March 15th (1939) was the decisive step which led to the Second World War,'' Weizsacker said of the split-up of Czechoslovakia.

ninth such incident since Greyhound employees went on strike March 2nd.

The trial of Joseph Hazelwood came to a close Thursday afternoon in Anchorage, Alaska. The seven-week trial ended without Hazelwood ever taking the stand in his own defense. Hazelwood could be sentenced to slightly more than seven years in jail and fined 61-thousand dollars if convicted for his part in the worst oil spill in U-S history.

WESTWOOD, NJ (MARCH 16) UPI - Harold Medina, a federal judge for more than 30 years who achieved fame in the trial of 11 communist leaders in the 1940s, has died, a nursing home spokeswoman said Friday. He was 102.

Medina died Wednesday at Pascack Valley Hospital in Westwood where he had been taken from the nearby Valley Nursing Home, a spokeswoman for the home said Friday. The judge had lived for many years in Westhampton, N.Y., and Manhattan.

At his death, Medina was the oldest federal judge and the oldest alumnus of Princeton University, The New York Times reported. He retired from the bench in 1980.

Born in Brooklyn in 1888, Medina was graduated Phi Beta Kappa from Princeton in 1909, and completed Columbia Law School three years later. At the age of 59, Medina quit his private practice and accepted a federal judgeship in the Southern District of New York.

Two years later, he presided over a nine-month, highly charged trial that would make him famous. The defendants were 11 communist leaders charged under the so-called Smith Act with conspiracy to teach and advocate the overthrow of the government by force. The conviction and sentences for contempt of court for the five defense lawyers were upheld by the Supreme Court in 1951.

That same year, Medina succeeded Learned Hand on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit. There, his work covered topics including investment banking, income tax regulations, admiralty, patent, criminal law, arbitration and legal procedure.

''Learned Hand was a great mentor for me,'' Medina once told an interviewer. ''He sat on the court until the day he died. He was in his 90th year. I love the work, and as long as I'm able to do it, I'm going to keep it up.''

Medina retired in 1980.

He is survived by his two sons, Harold, of Delray Beach, Fla., and Standish, of Morristown, N.J., six grandchildren and 10 great-grandchildren.

A funeral service was to be held at 4 p.m. Sunday at St. Mark's Episcopal Church in Westhampton Beach. Burial will be private.

(MARCH 16) UPI - American hostage Terry Anderson will mark his fifth anniversary in captivity Friday. Recent statements from his captors, the Islamic Jihad , indicate Anderson may have to endure even more time under guard. Anderson, a journalist, has been held hostage longer than any Westerner in Lebanon. He was abducted during a time when pro-Iranian terrorists were especially active- bombing Western targets and hijacking planes.

Israel's fragile coalition government collapsed Thursday following a vote of NO-confidence by the parliament. The move came after Prime Minister Shamir refused to yield on the Middle East peace proposal and accept a U-S plan. Advancement of the peace process is expected to figure prominently in the formation of a new coalition government.

World-wide pleas for clemency did NOT prevent the Iraqi government from executing a London-based journalist for espionage Thursday. The hanging of 31-year-old Farzad Bazoft- prompted Britain to recall its ambassador to Iraq in retaliation. Bazoft was accused of spying for Israel when he entered a military complex without authorization last September. The British consul general attended the execution and said the journalist repeatedly said he was just going after a ''scoop.''

(MARCH 16) UPI - A California firm that offers 96 party lines has filed suit against U-S Attorney General Thornburgh and the F-C-C. Arden Lee Incorporated charges a proposed law aimed at preventing minors from being exposed to so-called ''indecent'' telephone communication is unconstitutional. The suit also claims the law will severely restrict party lines by requiring customers to fill out written requests or ''pre-suscribe'' to use the lines.

A 10-week-old crime wave has turned Boston into one of the nation's most violent cities. Police arrested a second suspect Thursday in the slaying of a liquor store clerk who was shot for a jar of coins. The arrest came as state, local, and federal officials held a ''crime summit'' to map plans for dealing with the violence. A record 32 people have died violently in Boston since the beginning of the year.

A source close to Sotheby's auction house reports Vincent Van Gogh's ''Irises'' may find a new home at the J. Paul Getty Museum in Malibu, California- the world's richest museum. The famed painting is the world's most expensive artwork, purchased by Australian businessman Alain Bond in 1987 for a record amount of nearly 54-Million dollars. Bond is reported to be in financial trouble and cannot pay off the loan he borrowed from Sotheby's to purchase the painting.

At least one Detroit Piston says he preferred chasing the Los Angeles Lakers for the best record in the NBA.

''To be honest, I liked it better when we were putting the pressure on them,'' Detroit forward James Edwards said after Detroit secured the top record with a 110-98 triumph Thursday night over the San Antonio Spurs. ''Now we're the ones looking over our shoulder.''

Edwards scored six of his 20 points during a 25-2 second-half surge that carried the Pistons to their ninth straight victory. The triumph gave the defending NBA champions a 48-15 record, one game better than Los Angeles in the battle for homecourt in the playoffs.

Los Angeles suffered its second straight road loss Thursday night, a 112-96 drubbing by the Cleveland Cavaliers.

Edwards also guarded Spurs' rookie center David Robinson, who came in to the game averaging 29.4 points in his last seven outings. Robinson managed only 16 points Thursday, and was scoreless in the third period, when the Pistons took charge of the game.

''I just kinda held my ground and he got a little frustrated,'' Edwards said. ''He'll bounce back. You can't play a great game every time out.''

Edwards said he used a few tricks of the trade to slow down Robinson.

''I tried to bump him out of his spot and keep my elbow in his chest,'' said Edwards, who is in his 13th NBA season. ''If you can keep him out of his favorite spot, he might try to force up a few shots.''

Spurs Coach Larry Brown didn't seem concerned over Robinson's performance.

''Some games he's been frustrated but he always fights his way back,'' Brown said. ''He's a rookie. You guys see highlights all the time, but he's just a rookie. He usually has someone to pick him up, but no one could do it tonight.''

Pistons Coach Chuck Daly said Edwards' offense contributed to Robinson's off night.

''Jimmy is a great offensive player,'' Daly said. ''He ran the pick and roll very well and that helped take some of (Robinson's) energy away.''

Detroit, which has won 22 of its last 23 games, extended its home winning streak to 12 games. The defeat ended San Antonio's three-game winning streak.

Joe Dumars led Detroit with 21 points, while Isiah Thomas finished with 16 and dished out 18 assists.

Terry Cummings paced the Spurs with 25 points and Rod Strickland had 21.

The Pistons' defense held San Antonio scoreless for 6:26 at the end of the third quarter and beginning of the fourth.

At Richfield, Ohio, Mark Price scored 24 points and Craig Ehlo added 23 to lead Cleveland. The Cavaliers won their third straight game and defeated the Lakers for the first time since Dec. 5, 1987. Los Angeles, which has lost two straight for just the third time this year, was led by A.C. Green's 20 points and 18 from James Worthy.

-- AROUND THE NBA --

Elsewhere, Minnesota beat New York 102-82, Milwaukee edged Washington 96-91, Houston overpowered Sacramento 92-86, Utah ran over Seattle 117-95 and Portland stopped Golden State 128-121.

TIMBERWOLVES 102, KNICKS 82

At Minneapolis, Tony Campbell scored 27 points and Pooh Richardson had 20 points and 11 assists for Minnesota. The loss means the Atlantic Division-leading Knicks have been beaten by all four expansion teams this year. The Timberwolves have defeated all six Atlantic Division teams.

BUCKS 96, BULLETS 91

At Milwaukee, Alvin Robertson sank two free throws with 7 seconds left and Brad Lohaus and Jay Humphries scored 17 points apiece to lift Milwaukee. The Bucks, playing without two starters and their leading scorer, outscored Washington 23-8 in the final 5:23. Jeff Malone scored 26 points for Washington and Mark Alarie added 19.

ROCKETS 92, KINGS 86

At Sacramento, Calif., Akeem Olajuwon scored eight of his 17 points in the fourth quarter and added 22 rebounds and eight blocked shots to boost Houston to the comeback victory. The game was marred by a fourth-quarter fight and two ejections. Danny Ainge led the Kings with a game-high 32 points.

JAZZ 117, SUPERSONICS 95

At Salt Lake City, Karl Malone scored 38 points and pulled down 16 rebounds to help Utah. The SuperSonics, led by Olden Polynice's 18, never got closer than eight points in the second half.

BLAZERS 128, WARRIORS 121

At Oakland, Calif., Terry Porter scored 11 fourth-quarter points and Kevin Duckworth added 10 to secure the win for Portland, which equalled its longest winning streak of the season with its seventh straight victory and fifth in a row on the road. The Warriors were led by Chris Mullin's 26 points and Mitch Richmond's 24.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 16) UPI - The State Department says the Soviet Union's refusal to allow X-ray inspections of missile canisters is a violation of the Intermediate Nuclear Forces Treaty, the first superpower pact to call for destruction of nuclear weapons.

The State Department called the alleged treaty breach ''a very serious matter,'' and Secretary of State James Baker sent a letter of protest to Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze.

At issue, according to the State Department, is the refusal of Soviet authorities at a missile factory in Votkinsk to allow American inspectors stationed at the factory gate to use an industrial X-ray machine to inspect missile canisters leaving the plant.

The X-rays would be one way to verify that the Soviets are meeting provisions of the 1987 nuclear weapons agreement. The inspectors also have the right to weigh the missile vehicles and to open up to eight missile canisters each year in spot checks.

Soviet inspectors at a U.S. plant in Utah have similar rights but the Soviets have chosen not to use X-rays.

The INF treaty eliminates 867 U.S. and 1,752 Soviet ground-launched missiles with ranges of 300 miles to 3,400 miles - less than 5 percent of the atomic arsenals held by the superpowers.

The treaty also allows the United States and the Soviet Union to inspect each other's missile factories.

''The INF treaty gives us the right to use non-damaging imaging equipment to X-ray missile canisters of a certain size which leave the Soviet missile facility at Votkinsk,'' said State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler.

The Soviets claim the equipment installed by U.S. inspectors exceeds limits contained in a 1989 memorandum of understanding. Moscow claims examination would reveal details about the SS-25 missile, a strategic weapon not covered by the INF treaty.

But another weapon, the SS-20 missile, is made at the same plant, and is covered under the treaty. The SS-25 is roughly the same size as the SS-20 and the Soviets are using identical canisters to ship both.

The State Department said several missle canisters were shipped from the factory unchecked by American inspectors.

''The United States regards any question of compliance with the INF treaty as a very serious matter,'' Tutwiler said.

''We have raised this issue at high levels in both Moscow and Washington, including a communication from Secretary Baker to Foreign Minister Shevardnadze, and are continuing to press the Soviets to solve this problem by allowing us to use the system.''

Tutwiler said Baker and Shevardnadze agreed the issue should be settled quickly. Technical teams from the United States and the Soviet Union have been sent to the factory to work out a solution.

(MARCH 16) UPI - The Ball State Cardinals gave David Letterman fodder for his monologue.

Ball State, the alma mater of the Late Night host, pulled an NCAA upset for the second straight season, knocking off former Top 20 team Oregon State 54-53 Thursday in the first round of the West Regional.

Paris McCurdy's short jumper and free throw with no time left lifted Ball State, which last year topped a tournament-seasoned Pittsburgh team. It was the Beavers' sixth consecutive first-round tournament loss.

In the other afternoon game, the Cardinals' Everick Sullivan scored 18 points and Louisville used a 26-2 run at the end of the first half to whip Idaho 78-59. It was the Cardinals' 10th consecutive opening-round victory. Louisville meets Ball State in Saturday's second round.

Louisville, 27-7, improved its NCAA record to 38-22, but the two-time national champions have sustained only six of those losses since 1979. Idaho is 1-4 in four tournament appearances.

In the other West games at Salt Lake City, top-seeded Nevada-Las Vegas defeated Arkansas-Little Rock 102-72, and Ohio Stated edged Providence 84-83 in overtime. Ohio State will face UNLV on Saturday.

Oregon State had gone in front 53-51 with four seconds remaining on Teo Alibegovic's layup. Ball State inbounded the ball the length of the floor, but the Beavers knocked it away from scoring-leader Chandler Thompson and out of bounds with two seconds remaining.

McCurdy took the inbounds pass at the left corner of the backboard and was fouled by OSU's Karl Anderson as the ball bounced twice on the rim and fell in at the buzzer, tying the score. The senior forward then hit the winning free throw for the Cardinals, 25-6. Oregon State closed the season 22-7.

UNLV's Stacey Augmon led the Runnin' Rebels, 30-5, with 16 points. David Butler added 14 points for UNLV's balanced offense, All-America forward Larry Johnson and James Jones 13 each. Johnson led all rebounders with 12 for the Rebels (30-5).

James Scott led Little Rock, 20-10, with 23 points and Derrick Owens added 17 and Rod Wade 14.

In the final game, Alex Davis hit a three-point basket with three seconds left to force overtime and Jim Jackson sank the game-winning free throws with 4 seconds left in the extra period for Ohio State, 17-12. Davis, Ohio State's No. 3 guard, led all scorers with 24 points and Jackson scored six of his 15 in the overtime.

Carlton Screen led the Friars, 17-12, with 20 points, while Eric Murdock added 17.

EAST REGIONAL
At Hartford, Conn.

Clemson 49, Brigham Young 47

Kirkland Howling hit a 3-pointer with 30 seconds remaining to lead the fifth-seeded Tigers, who survived the upset bid of 12th seed Brigham Young. Clemson, 25-8, were paced by center Elden Campbell's 15 points.

Andy Toolson scored 15 for the Cougars.

La Salle 79, So. Mississippi 63

Lionel Simmons scored 32 points and grabbed 16 rebounds, leading fourth-seeded La Salle over the 13th-seeded Golden Eagles. Doug Overton scored 16 points to lead the Explorers, who have the best record in the tournament at 30-1. Clarence Weatherspoon scored 16 for Southern Mississippi.

Connecticut 76, Boston Univ. 52

Freshman Nadav Henefeld scored 13 of his 19 points during Connecticut's 21-1 second-half surge as the nation's third-ranked team turned Boston University's upset bid into a rout.

California 65, Indiana 63

Keith Smith hit two free throws with 3.8 seconds remaining to make California's first NCAA appearance in 30 years a triumph. Indiana's last chance ended when Gary Graham's heave from half-court bounced off the shot clock above the backboard as the buzzer sounded.

SOUTHEAST REGIONAL

Cal-Santa Barbara 70, Houston 66

Eric McArthur scored 20 points and stole a pass with 10 seconds left, helping the Gauchos advance to the second round. McArthur scored on a rebound, added a free throw and knocked away a pass all within the final minute to preserve the victory. Carl Herrera scored 19 points to lead the Cougars.

Michigan State 75, Murray State 71 (OT)

Steve Smith scored 6 of his 22 points in overtime and top seed Michigan State survived a career-high 37 points from Popeye Jones to sneak past Murray State. Jones, who took 36 shots, missed his last with 26 seconds left, and Michigan State put away the victory on Dwayne Stephens' dunk with 13 seconds to go.

Louisiana State 70, Villanova 63

Stanley Roberts scored 10 second-half points, and Louisiana State took advantage of Villanova's 30 percent shooting to oust the Wildcats. Chris Jackson and Maurice Williamson each had 16 points to lead LSU, 23-8.

Georgia Tech 99, East Tennessee St. 83

Dennis Scott scored 36 points and Georgia Tech hit 16 of its first 19 shots en route to the victory. The Yellow Jackets, 25-6, built a 39-17 lead with their quick start, outscoring the Buccaneers 20-6 over a 7:20 stretch.

MIDWEST REGIONAL
At Austin, Texas

Oklahoma 77 Towson State 68

Two three-point shots by backup guard Terry Evans down the stretch rescued No. 1 Sooners from a potentially humiliating upset. Oklahoma, winners of eight in a row, were 27-point favorites. Towson State guard Kurk Lee scored 30 points to lead all scorers.

North Carolina 83, S.W. Missouri St. 70

Scott Williams and Kenny Harris fueled a second-half North Carolina streak to allow the Tar Heels to post the 1,478th victory in the history of North Carolina basketball, tying Kentucky for the most wins by any school.

Arkansas 68, Princeton 64

Arlyn Bowers made two free throws with 13 seconds remaining, allowing the Razorbacks to hold off Princeton. The Tigers, who nearly upset Georgetown in the first round last year, frustrated Arkansas with their deliberate approach and their often smothering defense.

Dayton 88, Illinois 86

Wes Coffee and Anthony Corbitt combined for three free throws in the last 23 seconds and 27 points by Negele Knight brought the Flyers the upset victory. Illinois became the second fifth-seeded team to fall on the tournament's opening day, joining Oregon State as the highest seeds to make an early exit.

In Friday's play at Atlanta in the East Regional, it's Duke vs. Richmond; St. John's vs. Temple; UCLA vs. Alabama-Birmingham; and Kansas vs. Robert Morris.

In the Midwest Regional at Indianapolis, it's Georgetown vs. Texas Southern; Xavier vs. Kansas State; Georgia vs. Texas; and Purdue vs. Northeast Louisiana.

At Richmond, Va. in the Southeast Regional, it's Missouri vs. Northern Iowa; Minnesota vs. Texas-El Paso; Syracuse vs. Coppin State; and Virginia vs. Notre Dame.

At Long Beach, Calif., in the West Regional, it's Arizona vs. South Florida; Alabama vs. Colorado State; Michigan vs. Illinois State; and New Mexico State vs. Loyola Marymount.

(MARCH 16) UPI - The Philadelphia Flyers started a final assault for a Patrick Division playoff spot with a come-from-behind 5-4 victory Thursday night over the New York Islanders.

''This is a great condfidence builder,'' said Philadelphia's Gord Murphy. ''When there was five minutes left in the third period and we were losing, the feeling on the bench was still pretty good because we were outplaying them. We need one good run in the final 10 games to make the playoffs. I think seven victories would do it.''

The last-place Flyers are still two points behind the fifth-place Islanders and four points below fourth-place Washington in the battle for the division's final playoff slot.

Philadelphia won Thursday when Ilkka Sinisalo scored on a power play with 21 seconds left in the game.

With defenseman Joe Reekie off for holding at 18:39, the Philadelphia power play capitalized. Murray Craven passed to Tim Kerr, who bounced the puck across the goal crease to Sinisalo, who batted it out of the air over New York goalkeeper Glenn Healy's shoulder.

The victory broke a four-game Philadelphia losing streak. The loss extended the Islanders' winless streak to 14 games (0-11-3).

''They outshot us by a big margin,'' said Islanders' Pat LaFontaine. ''None of our near miss losses make us feel good, but we have to try and turn it around for the good of the team. We're still in the playoff fight and we play the Rangers, Penguins and Capitals next.''

Philadelphia's Keith Acton scored his ninth goal of the season with 6:38 left to tie the score 4-4. Acton punched a second rebound past Healy. Kerr who had four assists, and Pelle Eklund took the first two shots on the play.

The Flyers led 3-2 after two periods. Eklund's goal at 3:18, his 20th, gave Philadelphia a 3-1 advantage and Murphy scored a minute later. Allen Kerr scored for the Islanders at 9:28, assisted by Randy Wood and Ken Baumgartner to reduce the deficit to 3-2.

Randy Wood tied the score 3-3 at 5:35 of the third period when he broke behind the Philadelphia defense and beat Flyers goaltender Ken Wregget.

Brent Sutter put New York ahead 4-3 at 12:42 with a 40-footer from just outside the faceoff circle. LaFontaine and Wood assisted. Wood had a goal and two assists in the game.

Ken Linseman opened the scoring for Philadelphia at 4:44 of the first. He slid a backhand rebound past Healy. New York tied the score at 1:01 of the second period when Hubie McDonough connected on an eight-foot wrist shot.

-- AROUND THE NHL --

In other games, Pittsburgh pounded Detroit 6-1, Boston and Winnipeg ended tied 3-3, Chicago defeated Quebec 6-3, Vancouver clipped St. Louis 6-5, and Calgary edged New Jersey 5-4.

PENGUINS 6, RED WINGS 1

At Pittsburgh, Mark Recchi and Phil Bourque each scored two goals to help the Penguins snap a four-game losing streak. The victory moved the Penguins into sole possession of third place in the Patrick Division, two points ahead of the idle Washington Capitals. Detroit failed to break out of a fourth-place tie with the Minnesota North Stars in the Norris.

JETS 3, BRUINS 3, TIE

At Boston, Craig Janney's second goal of the game and 21st of the season lifted Boston into the tie and moved the first-place Bruins seven points ahead of idle Buffalo in the Adams Division. The Jets managed only one shot on goal during the overtime period, while Bruins got off just two.

BLACK HAWKS 6, NORDIQUES 3

At Quebec, Steve Larmer scored one goal and added two assists to lead Chicago. Marc Fortier scored Quebec's first goal at 12:59 of the second when his shot from the boards deflected off a Chicago defenseman's stick and got by goalie Jacques Cloutier.

CANUCKS 6, BLUES 5

At St. Louis, Jyrki Lumme scored at 2:19 of overtime, rallying the Canucks who scored three unanswered goals. Lumme took a cross-ice pass at the St. Louis blue line from Steve Bozek, got behind the Blues defense and beat rookie goaltender Curtis Joseph with a backhander from the slot.

FLAMES 5, DEVILS 4

At Calgary, Alberta, Joe Nieuwendyk scored his 40th goal of the season and Gary Suter assisted on four goals to lift Calgary. The Flames, unbeaten in seven games, moved five points ahead of Edmonton in the battle for first place in the Smythe Division. New Jersey, which had a five-game winning streak snapped, saw its second-place margin in the Patrick Division shrink to one point over Pittsburgh.

ALGIERS, Algeria (MARCH 16) UPI - Libyan leader Col. Moammar Gadhafi pledged to retaliate if his government determines West German intelligence services were behind a fire that seriously damaged a factory the United States suspects of making chemical weapons.

In Bonn, a West German Foreign Ministry spokesman said Thursday any allegations his country was involved in the fire were ''totally unfounded.''

Gadhafi said his government was investigating the fire Wednesday at the facility at Rabta, about 40 miles south of the Libyan capital of Tripoli, and threatened to expel West German citizens.

''If the inquiries under way prove that the West German intelligence services are implicated in whatever act in the Libyan interior, the West German economic presence will be eliminated from Libya,'' Gadhafi said in a statement on Tripoli Radio. ''That state which is involved in espionage and sabotage in the interests of imperialism and Zionism will lose out.''

Gadhafi's remarks evidently were prompted by a recent West German statement that Libya had produced 30 tons of mustard gas in a test run at the plant.

The mercurial Libyan leader said Libya would not conceal the making of ''weapons of destruction,'' but he said Libya would need another 20 years to make a chemical bomb on its own.

''I challenge any company or state to come to Libya to build a chemical factory,'' Gadhafi said. ''Then I would personally sign the contract without hesitation, and I would pay a thousand million.

''Our stand toward the Bonn government and its intelligence service depends on the investigations that have started now,'' Gadhafi said.

''Whatever the case we distinguish between the German government and its hireling intelligence service,'' Gadhafi said. Tripoli-based diplomats say East German advisers have long been prominent in the Libyan secret services.

In Rome, the Italian news agency ANSA said Italian intelligence services were first to report the fire to the United States and other allied governments, using contacts in Tunisia and other unspecified countries.

A caller claiming to speak for the ''National Wing of the Libyan Army,'' a previously unknown group, telephoned the offices of West German television in Cairo and claimed responsibility for starting the fire.

The caller said the organization opposes Gadhafi and said the fire was started ''after we made sure the plant was producing poison gas.''

The caller also added, ''We hold (the) West German government responsible for building the plant.''

Arab diplomatic sources in Algiers told United Press International the fire was set by a commando team that traveled to Libya from neighboring Tunisia. The saboteurs were disguised as tourists, the sources said.

The Arab sources said they considered the raiders most likely belonged to a Libyan opposition organization.

The Libyan news agency JANA, in a statement in Algiers, earlier had accused the United States and Israel of setting the fire. Washington and Israeli officials denied involvement.

''Most of the factory has been destroyed,'' the Libyan agency said.

Some 2,000 Libyan demonstrators gathered outside the West German Embassy in Tripoli Thursday to protest the incident. The factory was built with the assistance of West German companies.

JANA said ''a large angry crowd marched on the embassy carrying banners that said 'Germans out,' 'Leave our homes you spies and liars,' 'You were the first to leak rumors,' and 'We do not have to deal with spies and agents.' Gadhafi frequently stage-manages demonstrations in Tripoli.

A West German Embassy spokesman in Bonn said that the Libyan Foreign Ministry summoned West German Ambassador Juergen Hellner but he was unable to leave the mission because of the angry demonstrators.

West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl telephoned President Bush early Thursday, but White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said he did not know if the Libyan plant was discussed.

U.S. intelligence sources this month claimed the plant had resumed production of deadly chemical weapons such as mustard gas and nerve agents. Gadhafi's government says the factory only makes medicines.

Fitzwater denied ''any (U.S.) involvement of any kind'' in the fire. He said U.S. officials understood the building was still standing but the plant was likely inoperable.

''The damage is extensive and we assume it's not functioning,'' he told reporters at the White House.

This month, Fitzwater called on the international community to make ''vigorous efforts to stop the operation'' of the plant, which he called ''dangerous and becoming more so.''

In Paris, the Israeli Ambassador to France, Ovadia Sofer, told French television the Jewish state ''did not set fire to that factory.''

Libya formally denied Tuesday at the 40-nation disarmament conference that it was making chemical weapons and said renewed U.S charges against the Rabta factory ''implied a clear threat to use force against Libya.''

In February 1989, West Germany acknowledged that German companies were suspected of being involved with the Rabta plant.

MOSCOW (MARCH 16) UPI - Newly empowered Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev defended his struggling reform drive, but acknowledged ''perestroika'' must be pursued with ''more dynamism.''

Gorbachev, who ran unopposed in the secret balloting late Wednesday at the Congress of People's Deputies, emerged from the election with a comfortable margin of victory Thursday, but hardly an overwhelming mandate.

''I understand how dramatic the situation is, how complicated and unusual the problems are, and how emotionally charged society is, but I do not see any grounds for panic, let alone replacing perestroika with another policy '' Gorbachev said in his acceptance speech.

''It is obvious, however, that perestroika should be radicalized,'' he said. ''And I shall use my presidential powers above all toward this end.''

But Gorbachev, who reaffirmed his allegiance to communism, later told reporters not to expect any immediate, dramatic moves.

''The point is not to surprise the world with new initiatives, but to carry out what we have already been doing with more dynamism,'' he said. ''I possess one (main) trait: I remain who I am, and that is the person I will be.''

President Bush sent Gorbachev a message of congratulations from Washington and French President Francois Mitterrand and West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl also sent their regards to the Soviet leader.

Gorbachev at his news conference hinted that his June summit with Bush could produce an even larger agreement than the pact the two presidents expect to sign reducing strategic nuclear arms.

Gorbachev's victory was sealed Wednesday when his supporters in the Congress narrowly defeated a bid to force him to stand for direct national elections, approving a measure that sets the first such presidential polls for 1995.

Gorbachev took office four days after a new nationalist-dominated Parliament in Lithuania declared the republic independent. He also faces secessionist sentiment elsewhere in the Baltic region, and other parts of the vast country have been torn by ethnic clashes and anti-communist insurrections.

After Gorbachev's swearing in, the Congress of People's Deputies passed a resolution declaring Lithuania's independence declaration Sunday ''null and void'' and saying ''the sovereignty of the Soviet Union and its constitution continue to extend to the territory of Lithuania as a constituent socialist republic.''

Gorbachev told reporters, however, that Moscow will hold a ''respectful dialogue with the peoples living in Lithuania'' and said its status could ultimately be decided by a republic-wide referendum.

After the voting results were announced and he took the oath of office, Gorbachev said ''genuine people power'' spurred by his democratization drive is transforming the country in the face of grave difficulties.

''I am aware that I am accepting my duties at a difficult time for the nation,'' Gorbachev said. ''I agreed to run for president because I am convinced of the future of our fatherland and because perestroika has become the meaning of my entire life.''

Gorbachev assumed power in March 1985 as general secretary of the Soviet Communist Party and became chairman of the Supreme Soviet, or Parliament, last May. He retained his party rank but gave up the Parliament leadership post and his spot as a deputy with his election to the new presidency.

Before ending its four-day session, the Congress chose Politburo member Anatoli Lukyanov to replace Gorbachev as Supreme Soviet chairman in a post Tass said would be similar to that of Parliament speaker in the West.

Gorbachev, saying he is ''in debt to the press'' because he has rarely met with reporters, said he would adopt another Western practice and hold regular news conferences.

The new presidency, created at the extraordinary session of Congress convened Monday by Gorbachev, gives him the sweeping powers he said were necessary to save his ''perestroika'' reform program and consolidate the vast country.

His expanded authority is rooted in fundamental powers to be encoded in a new Soviet Constitution, including the rights to veto legislation, declare states of emergency or martial law anywhere in the country, and to appoint and fire the prime minister and other senior government officials.

Yegor Yakovlev, editor of the influential weekly Moscow News, told reporters that Gorbachev will now oversee a 100-day period of rapid change including the transfer of land to individual farmers under a new leasing law and the transfer of power to local governing powers after local elections across the country.

(MARCH 16) UPI - While balmy temperatures kept air conditioners humming through much of the eastern United States Friday, a howling blizzard reminded people in Minnesota and North Dakota that winter is far from over.

Low pressure in northern Minnesota produced snow and strong gusty winds across much of the northern Plains region Thursday, and the National Weather Service issued blizzard warnings for the two northern states.

Snowfall totals reached up to 9 inches at Detroit Lakes, Minn., and Fargo, N.D., the weather service said. Northwest winds blowing 25-40 mph created whiteout conditions, making travel nearly impossible in some areas.

Clouds and rainshowers covered the upper Midwest early Friday while welcome clear skies were reported in southern Illinois and Missouri after rains caused flooding and tornadoes earlier this week.

The weather service reported light rain in the Detroit area, where temperatures held in the upper 40s to mid-50s. In Wisconsin, skies were partly cloudy while temperatures ranged in the upper 30s and 40s. Chicago was cloudy with temperatures nearing 50.

Showers and thunderstorms moved through southern and east-central Louisiana early Friday, prompting the weather service to issue a flash flood watch for the area.

Scattered rain and snow continued throughout much of New Mexico Thursday, although little accumulation was recorded. With the exception of scattered light rain in the Panhandle, fair skies continued over Texas.

Thunderstorms moved across the South, prompting flash flood watches in Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia and Tennessee. Only Florida remained relatively clear of rain.

Temperatures were mild, ranging from 62 in Knoxville, Tenn., to 65 in Atlanta, 70 in Charleston, S.C., 71 in Jacksonville, Fla., and 74 in Miami.

Warm and humid weather continued in New England, as Boston and Worcester, Mass., both set high-temperature records on Thursday and were expected to do the same Friday.

Boston saw a record high of 71 Thursday under patchy clouds, breaking a 45-year-old mark, while Worcester topped out at 81, shattering the previous record by 11 degrees.

Fog and drizzle drifted into southern New England early Friday, although temperatures remained in the 50s. Some clearing was expected later in the day as temperatures climbed back into the 70s.

Clouds blanketed most of Pennsylvania early Friday, bringing light rain to some western areas. Temperature lows were in the 50s.

Rain was also reported overnight in portions of West Virginia, where lows were in the 60s. Maryland and southern New Jersey saw partly cloudy skies. Lows were in the 50s in New Jersey and in the 50s to lower 60s in Maryland.

In the West, a large mass of mid- and high-level clouds moved toward California from the southwest after originating in the subtropics between the Hawaiian Islands and Baja, Calif.

But mostly dry weather was expected from the air mass. A more serious possibility of rain was expected over the weekend as a high pressure ridge was giving way to an approaching Pacific storm system.

State water officials were studying whether California would avoid its fourth year of drought. In one of a string of moves in recent weeks, northern California rice farmers said Thursday they will switch part of their land to crops that take less water such as dry beans or safflower, industry spokesmen said.

BEIRUT, LEBANON (MARCH 16) UPI - American hostage Terry Anderson marked his fifth year in captivity Friday, and from statements made by his captors on the eve of the anniversary, it appears the journalist can expect more time under guard.

The Islamic Jihad, which abducted Anderson on March 16, 1985, threatened Thursday to execute three other American hostages, all college professors, unless the United States meets their unspecified demands. The pro-Iranian group also vowed to attack all airports and airlines involved in transporting Soviet Jews to Israel.

The statements appeared to dim recent reports and speculation that the Islamic Jihad was preparing to release some of the 18 Western hostages it holds.

Anderson, the longest held of the hostage kidnapped in Lebanon, was working for The Associated Press as chief Middle East correspondent when he was kidnapped, and friends and relatives wonder how he spends his time and how his captives keep the ex-Marine occupied.

Observers have speculated that the captors may be making available to him a radio, newspapers and other means to keep in touch with the world.

Anderson's wife, Madeline Anderson, said in a letter published Friday in the independent An-Nahar newspaper: ''I am always wondering if you have ever been able to read the letters sent to you ... or even if they were read to you to let you know how much we love you and how difficult life is without you.''

She added that a videotape of their 4-year-old daughter, Salome, would be shown on television in Lebanon Friday night.

''Will you be able to see it, to see her pretending she is talking to you?'' she wrote. Terry Anderson has never met his daughter.

In the videotape, made available by the AP in Beirut, Salome was shown ballet dancing and saying, ''I love you, Daddy. Come home, please come home.''

But how is the dynamic man, as his sister, Peggy Say, describes him, adapting to round-the-clock confinement? Allowing a captive to exercise in an open area may be the last thing the captors would consider, and Say has expressed worry over her brother because of his tendency to keep active.

Farouk Nassar, a veteran senior correspondent for the AP who now runs the news agency's office in Beirut, recalls: ''Terry was our chief. He was a dedicated and honest journalist.

"He never let anyone down, and he remained firm in the most difficult times," Nassar said. ''It never occurred to us that Terry would become a hostage victim.''

Anderson was abducted at a time when pro-Iranian terrorist acts were on the rise, bombing Western targets, dynamiting nightclubs and hijacking planes.

Anderson lost his freedom as part of the campaign against anything Western by clients of Iran, which fueled hatred of America into the hearts of Middle East Shiites.

Anderson, accompanied by a photographer, was intercepted by gunmen in a green Mercedes-Benz as he emerged from a tennis club. They bundled him into the trunk of the vehicle and sped off, later releasing the photographer.

''The gunmen mercilessly shoved him into the car. His eyeglasses fell as the vehicle sped off,'' Nassar said.

Say, who has launched a relentless worldwide campaign for the release of her brother and the other hostages, visited Syria in February and returned home with high spirits about the release of Anderson and 17 other captives.

At a stopover in London, Say said she believed the end of the hostages' plight was nearing. Syrian officials told her their hopes were high because of positive gestures from Iran that appeared aimed at improving relations with the West.

''Do not despair,'' Say told her brother in a statement published by An-Nahar in February, ''for some day - soon, please God - we will be reunited. Be strong and keep the faith, Terry.''

But the Jihad, in its statement Thursday, denounced recent reports of efforts behind the scenes to try to gain freedom for the hostages.

''We call on those who were concerned with the movements (of the hostages) to stop their interference in this issue because we are holding spies plotting against our people, and they will be executed if the American administration did not meet our demands,'' the group said.

Anderson, 42, is one of eight Americans and 10 other Western hostages believed held in Lebanon by pro-Iranian groups.

SEOUL, South Korea (MARCH 16) UPI - Prime Minister Kang Young-hoon and the 24 other Cabinet members resigned Friday to give President Roh Tae-woo a free hand to overhaul the administration, a government spokesman said.

The Cabinet ministers submitted written resignations to Roh following an informal meeting, the spokesman said, and a new Cabinet lineup was expected to be announced Saturday.

Roh, who began his five-year term two years ago, plans to replace about 15 of the ministers to freshen the image of his government, political sources said.

Kang is likely to be retained, but most members of the Cabinet's economic team led by Deputy Premier-Economic Planning Minister Cho Soon will be replaced in an effort to speed up economic growth, the sources said.

A Cabinet shuffle has been expected since the birth of a new ruling party in February through the merger of Roh's Democratic Justice Party and two opposition groups led by Kim Young-sam and Kim Jong-pil.

The new party controls 216 of the 299 parliamentary seats, giving it enough votes to push through any legislation it wishes.

Kim Dae Jung's opposition Party for Peace and Democracy follows with 70 seats. Independents fill 11 seats while two seats remain vacant.

(MARCH 16) UPI - The House investigates child labor law violations... preliminary talks in the Greyhound strike begin today... scientists try to save a stranded satellite... and the worst of the flu season may be over. Those stories and more, next from U-P-I.

The Labor Department faces criticism today as a House panel begins looking to violations of the nation's child labor laws.

California Democrat Tom Lantos says at a hearing of his panel this morning he will identify companies found to be breaking laws protecting children.

Lantos says the Labor Department did NOT go far enough in a three-day crackdown that UNcovered seven-thousand child labor law violations.

Lantos says violators of child labor laws should face heavier fines and be identified. He says adverse publicity would be a potent deterrent.

The lawmaker also says ''Operation Child Watch'' shows a need for the government to check on violations every day, rather than three days each year.

The Labor Department said yesterday it found seven-thousand children working illegally at 14-hundred of the 34-hundred businesses it examined nationwide.

Most of the violations found by the three-day sweep involved 14- and 15-year-olds working too many hours or too late at night.

Federal mediators plan to meet today with both sides of the bitter... and at times violent... Greyhound strike now into a third week.

The separate meetings with bus company officials and union representatives will come ahead of contract talks scheduled to begin tomorrow in Arizona.

The talks to end the walkout by nine-thousand Greyhound workers nationwide follow yet another sniper attack on a Greyhound bus.

Police say the ninth such incident of violence came yesterday outside Chattanooga, Tennessee... just six miles north of the scene of another shooting the day before. NO one was injured in the latest incident, but police in Chattanooga are now providing escorts to Greyhound buses in the area.

The strike began March 2nd after negotiations broke off on a new three-year contract. However, union officials say the walkout was called on grounds of unfair labor practices... NOT just economic issues.

(MARCH 16) UPI - Engineers at Cape Canaveral are hoping that a rocket firing last night will boost a wayward 150-Million-dollar Intelsat-6 communications satellite into a higher, safer orbit from which it might later be saved.

A spokesman for the 118-nation International Telecommunications Satellite Organization says that if all goes well, the satellite would be in a circular orbit 150 miles up by today, where it will remain safe for months. Without the maneuver, the errant satellite would fall back to Earth around March 25th.

Intelsat managers are debating a variety of options to salvage the international communications station... including the feasibility of a shuttle rescue mission. NASA issued a statement yesterday indicating that the agency would consider such a flight if the satellite is placed in a safe orbit.

The Intelsat-6 satellite was stranded in a useless, lopsided orbit shortly after launch Wednesday when it failed to separate properly from the second stage of its Titan6 was built to relay as many as 120-thousand telephone calls at once from a vantage point over the Atlantic Ocean.

The shuttle Discovery was rolled to the launch pad last night at Cape Canaveral, despite potential trouble with the ship's nose landing gear.

NASA engineers apparently decided they had NOthing to lose by going ahead with routine procedures in advance of the scheduled April 12th launch.

The six-hour trip to the launch pad began after a 12-hour delay caused by concern over a six-inch bolt in the shuttle's nose landing gear axle.

The space agency will quickly conduct an analysis of the problem that could delay launch for one week or more.

The goal of the flight is to launch the one-point-five-BILLION-dollar Hubble Space Telescope. The instrument is the most powerful telescope ever built to operate above Earth's hazy atmosphere.

(MARCH 16) UPI - Two witnesses testifying in John Poindexter's Iran-Contra trial said more than six-thousand messages between former President Reagan's ex-national security adviser and Oliver North were deleted from White House computer files.

Poindexter is accused of five felony counts of lying to Congress and obstructing its investigation of the scandal.

F-B-I agent Ellen Glasser was the first agent to interview Poindexter after the scandal erupted. She testified yesterday that she asked Poindexter if he knew about profits from U-S arms sales to Iran going to the Contras. Glasser said Poindexter told her that North was ''up to something.''

Glasser also asked Poindexter if others could have been assisting North... and she said he replied that North could pull off such an operation ''on his own.''

Glasser also testified that about six-thousand messages were deleted from Poindexter and North's computer files as the scandal erupted in November 1986.

Army staff sergeant Kelly Williams preceded Glasser to the witness stand. She was assigned to the White House Communications Agency from 1982 to 1989. Williams also said almost six-thousand computer messages disappeared from North's and Poindexter's computer files in late November 1986.

Glasser and Williams both said the deleted computer messages were re-created because the White House kept duplicates of information on computer discs.

Poindexter's messages to North are central to the case against Poindexter.

Testimony resumes this morning.

(MARCH 16) UPI - The federal Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta reports that influenza is NO longer at epidemic levels in the United States... and the worst of the flu season may be over if NO new strains appear,

The C-D-C says that as of March 1st, six-and-one-half percent of patients visiting doctors monitoring the illness reported symptoms of the flu. That's down from a season high of nearly nine percent reported December 30th.

This year's flu epidemic has been the worst since the winter of 1984thousand people died.

C-D-C influenza surveillance co-ordinator Susan Good says Iowa and New York are the only states still reporting widespread cases of the flu. She says Arkansas, Georgia, Pennsylvania, Montana and Utah report NO confirmed influenza cases. The official C-D-C-designated flu season ends April 30th.

But Dr. Walter Gunn, a C-D-C epidemiologist... warns that although the worst probably is over... the number of flu cases could increase again

Gunn said ''NO one can predict what's going to happen with the flu. It's still important for people to check with their doctors.''

WASHINGTON (MARCH 16) UPI - Prices stabilized at the producer level in February, due to declining energy costs, after climbing 1.8 percent in January, the Labor Department reported Friday.

The department's energy index dropped 5 percent in February after rising 14 percent the month before. Food prices continued to gain substantially, but not as much as in January, the department said.

Excluding the often volatile food and energy prices, producer prices moved up 0.4 percent during the month.

During the past 12 months, inflation at the producer level has risen 5.1 percent, with food prices gaining 6.1 percent and energy costs rising 11.7 percent, the department's Bureau of Labor Statistics said.

Prices for intermediate goods rose 1.4 percent from year-ago levels while crude material prices gained 5.6 percent.

During February, the costs for finished consumer goods declined 0.2 percent after rising 2.5 percent the month before.

With much of the nation enjoying unseasonably warm weather, home heating oil prices fell 30.2 percent, the lowest level since last August. Gasoline prices moved down 2.3 percent after rising 16.7 percent the month before. Natural gas costs posted a marginal gain after rising 3.2 percent in January.

Also in the energy sector, diesel fuel and kerosene prices dropped more than 25 percent during the month while liquified natural gas prices dropped about 15 percent after rising nearly 50 percent the month before.

Food costs at the producer level rose 0.9 percent in February after rising 2.1 percent the month before. Prices for eggs dropped 24 percent during the month, nearly offsetting advances over the past 6 months.

Producer prices for dairy products fell while fresh and dried vegetable prices rose a substantial 23.3 percent during the month.

Prices also rose for chicken, beef and veal.

Moving away from food, costs rose for men's and women's apparel and magazines, tobacco, alcoholic beverages, prescription drugs and textile home furnishings.

Prices slowed for children's clothing, newspapers and over-the-counter drugs.

The index for capital equipment gained 0.2 percent for the third consecutive month. The most significant increases were posted in civilian aircraft, ships, railroad equipment and tool and dies.

Prices for durable manufacturing materials dropped 0.5 percent in February the ninth decrease in the past 11 months. Lower prices were posted by aluminum, zinc, copper, cadmium and most many steel mill materials.

LOS ANGELES (MARCH 16) UPI - Fifty illegal aliens were detained at International Airport as they waited to board flights in the latest in a series of immigration sweeps, authorities said Friday.

Agents from the Immigration and Naturalization Service detained the illegal aliens late Thursday, said Ben Davidian, INS western regional commissioner.

Earlier Thursday, immigration agents in Atlanta detained 53 illegal immigrants aboard an Eastern Airlines flight. It was the second consecutive day aliens were captured while trying to make their way to New York from the West Coast.

Thursday night, agents swept through terminals at Los Angeles International Airport and rounded up 50 suspected illegal aliens by midnight, Davidian said.

Immigration authorities decided on the Los Angeles sweep after the arrests in Atlanta, where suspected illegal aliens were pulled from flights that had started in Los Angeles, Davidian said.

The commissioner said the sweeps, called Operation Red Eye Repeat, were part of a continuing operation in response to an increase in smuggling of illegal aliens. All major airports have been targeted, including Los Angeles, he said.

''Los Angeles is a real hub,'' Davidian said. ''This is the main area where undocumented aliens want to come because there is so much employment.''

The commissioner said the Los Angeles operation was a ''drop in the bucket'' compared to the 1,500 to 2,000 illegal workers that are picked up in San Diego area every day.

The 50 suspects detained Thursday night included people from Panama, Pakistan, India, Mexico and El Salvador.

The illegal aliens picked up in Atlanta were the cargo in a massive smuggling ring that has been under investigation since last year, the INS said. Most of the aliens were going to New York seeking employment, officials said.

ROME, NY (MARCH 16) UPI - An Air Force B-52 bomber made a safe emergency landing at Griffiss Air Force Base after one of its hydraulic systems malfunctioned, an Air Force official said Friday.

The bomber was on a routine training mission Thursday night from Kansas to Loring Air Force Base in Maine when it lost one of six on-board hydraulic systems, said Air Force Capt. Barney Welch of the 416th Bomardment Wing.

Welch said the crew decided to make an emergency landing at Griffiss about 30 miles east of Syracuse, N.Y., because of the hydraulic problem and inclement weather in Maine.

''This was a routine in-flight emergency with no danger posed to aircraft or crew at any time,'' Welch said of the 10:30 p.m. landing.

The plane carried a 500-pound concrete dummy bomb. Another dummy bomb was dropped during the training mission, Welch said.

PITTSBURGH (MARCH 16) UPI - Following a five-month contract dispute, negotiators for The Pittsburgh Press Co. and a Teamsters union local that represents truck drivers and circulation employees have reached an agreement, averting a possible strike.

The agreement reached Thursday called for The Press to withdraw unfair labor practice charges it had filed against Teamsters Local 211 on March 8 said National Labor Relations Board regional director Gerald Kobell.

The agreement headed off a possible strike that also would have affected the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette, which is printed and delivered by The Press under a joint operating agreement.

The agreement called for The Press to reduce the number of jobs by about 65 through attrition and retirement. The number of jobs is the same as it originally proposed in a tentative contract reached in October. The Press said about half of the positions already have been eliminated. The union managed to recoup co-pay prescription drug payments of its medical insurance benefits, which had been eliminated in the October agreement.

The Press and union had filed unfair labor practice charges against each other over the contract dispute. The union tentatively agreed to the pact in October but refused to sign it. The NLRB ruled in favor of the company's position against the union on the unfair labor practice charges.

The agreement was expected to be signed within a week, Kobell said. The realignment of shifts will be completed within five weeks, pending review by employees of new shifts and bidding procedures, Kobell said. Press spokesman Randall Notter and Teamsters' attorney Joseph Pass would not elaborate on the agreement.

The Teamsters represent 440 drivers and 240 circulation workers. It is one of ten unions that represent 1,400 employees at The Press. All of the other unions have signed contracts.

The Press, which is owned by Scripps Howard, publishes afternoons and Sundays. The Post-Gazette publishes Monday through Saturday mornings and maintains a separate editorial department.

DALLAS (MARCH 16) UPI - A man who shot and killed a killer in shopping mall parking lot says he is neither a hero nor a ''Deathwish'' vigilante.

Todd Broom, 25, a Xerox repairman, held a news conference Thursday to discuss the Monday shootings and why he came forward to admit to kiling Eddie Edwards. Police in the suburb of Irving, where the shootings occurred, said Broom's actions were not premeditated and released him Wednesday without charges or bail. The case will be investigated by the grand jury.

Broom told reporters he had pulled into a parking space at Irving Mall to buy a pair of work shoes when he saw Edwards chase his former girlfriend, Demetria Taylor, 28, through the parking lot and then shot her several times in the head with a .38-caliber revolver.

Then, in a quiet voice, Broom repeated what he had told Irving police when he surrendered Wednesday: that he tried to stop Edwards, firing one shot from his Ruger .44-caliber Magnum pistol into the man's car trunk, then a second into his driver's side door.

The second shot killed Edwards and, by Thursday morning, made Broom famous.

''I think the public will be sympathetic to Mr. Broom,'' said Frank Jackson, one of Broom's attorneys who set up the news conference. ''I think generally the Texas mentality is that you should come to aid of other people.''

So many people called Broom's parents, Larry and Jane Broom, with offers of support that they opened a defense fund at a bank to defray legal costs.

Sharon Edwards, the dead man's estranged wife, wondered why Irving police released Broom, leaving the responsibility for whether charges should be brought to a grand jury.

''This man should be in jail. He should not be running around shooting people. Eddie is not going on trial. Eddie's dead,'' she said in a telephone interview with the Dallas Times Herald from her home in Killeen.

''The point is you cannot let a person in America walk around and shoot anybody. That's my point, and that's all I have to say. Something has to be done, you can't just take the law into your own hands.''

Broom was tense and worried Thursday, and seemed on the verge of tears in talking about how his co-workers at the Xerox Corp. in Irving were rallying around him.

Broom said he was a little perplexed by all the attention he had been getting. He was just trying to help someone, being what he called ''a good Samaritan.''

''I don't consider myself any sort of vigilante,'' he said. ''I don't consider myself any sort of hero.''

''I'm not Charles Bronson,'' Broom said of the actor who played a criminal-killing citizen in the ''Deathwish'' movie series. ''I'm not going to save the world.

''I definitely feel bad for all the trouble I'm going to get into. I feel bad someone died. All I could see was this guy driving away and never being found. Never. That's what I saw. I saw the man getting away scot-free after he shot a woman.''

Jackson said his client will likely testify. Jackson said there is legal precedent that justifies a citizen using force to subdue someone who had committed a violent crime. The public, Jackson said, believes a person has a right ''to try to stop a person who has committed some brutal act in your presence.''

Irving police Capt. Travis Hall said some callers criticized the department for releasing Broom without charging him. ''And then a couple said we shouldn't have even referred it to the grand jury,'' Hall said.

TOKYO (MARCH 16) UPI - The average Japanese family had stashed away $86,250 in savings as of 1989, confirming Japan's place as one of the world's most frugal countries, the government announced Friday.

The average family added 15.3 percent to its already large nest egg in 1989, the highest growth rate since 1979, the Management and Coordination Agency reported.

The United States has complained in trade negotiations that Japan's high savings rate is a contributing factor to the massive U.S. trade deficit with Japan, which stood at $49 billion in 1989.

Japan's household savings rate, or the percentage of annual income an average family puts into savings, stood at 15.1 percent in 1989, one of the highest in the world.

By comparison, Americans saved on average only 6.3 percent of their income in 1989. The British saved 4.9 percent, and French and West Germans saved about 12 percent. The household savings rate does not include the value of the family home or other real estate.

The Americans argue the Japanese tendency to save a large portion of their income keeps their spending down. The result is they buy fewer goods, including imported goods from the United States.

The Japanese have turned the argument around, saying the United States could improve its economic situation if it saved more. They argue a high savings rate makes more money available for investments and drives interest rates lower.

Both countries have listed savings rates as a structural barrier to balanced trade in the ongoing trade negotiations dubbed the Structural Impediments Initiative.

President Bush pushed Prime Minister Kaifu at talks in Palm Springs, California, early this month to resolve the outstanding issues in the trade talks.

The report, based on a survey of 6,300 Japanese households, said the average family carries a debt of $24,600 with house mortgages and land loans accounting for the bulk of the debt.

Japanese families on average have savings worth more than twice their annual income, the reports said. Most of the savings was in time deposits, insurance or stocks, the report said.

TOKYO (MARCH 16) UPI - Japan's two largest automakers, Toyota Motor Corp. and Nissan Motors Co. Ltd, set new records in domestic sales in February while exports declined due mainly to expanding overseas production, the companies reported Friday.

Toyota, Japan's largest automaker, announced its domestic sales jumped 31.3 percent over a year ago to 210,476 units in February, marking the 11th consecutive monthly increase.

Reflecting brisk domestic sales, Toyota's vehicle production grew 9.4 percent to 346,775 units to post an all-time high for February, Toyota executives said.

Toyota's exports dropped 14.9 percent compared with a year ago to 132,192 units while its overseas production posted a substantial increase of 81.7 percent to 52,495 units, the executives said.

Nissan, Japan's second largest automaker, sold 125,204 vehicles in Japan in February, marking a 21.4 percent increase over a year ago and a record for domestic sales in February, Nissan said.

Its exports declined for the sixth consecutive month to 77,305 units, down 9.2 percent from February 1989. The decline reflects the increase in overseas production for sales abroad, Nissan executives said. Nissan's overseas production grew 7.3 percent to 54,576 units, posting the 14th consective monthly increase, the executives said.

(MARCH 16) UPI - Today is the fifth anniversary of the kidnapping of U-S hostage Terry Anderson in Lebanon. Anderson, a journalist working for The Associated Press... is the longest held of the hostages kidnapped in Lebanon. The Islamic Jihad, which abducted Anderson in 1985... has renewed threats to kill three other U-S hostages unless Washington meets their UNspecified demands.

A network news report says Iraq now has the ability to make medium-range ballistic missiles. The network says it obtained photographs and construction plans showing three sites for missile development, production and testing near Baghdad. The network also says missiles could be equipped with nuclear warheads or poison gas... and could hit targets in Iran or Israel.

The White House declined to condemn Iraq for its execution of an Iranian-born journalist working for a British newspaper. Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said cautiously... ''We don't have any independent conclusions about the case itself or the trial and so forth.'' Britain lashed out at Iraq for executing Farzad Bazoft yesterday, five days after his espionage conviction.

In Honduras, the National Congress approved a motion calling for the United States to pay nine-Million dollars to cover damage by U-S-backed Contra rebels. The resolution also called on the Honduran government to speed up the demobilization of the Contras. WASHINGTON (MARCH 16) UPI - A rebound in the production of motor vehicles and auto parts triggered a 0.6 percent increase in industrial production in February after a decline of one percent in January, the Federal Reserve said Friday. Manufacturing output increased by 0.7 percent.

Although the production of cars, vans and trucks led the advance, "the level of motor vehicle production in February was still more than five percent below its December level," the Fed said.

Auto assemblies leaped to an annual rate of 5.8 million in February compared to 4.1 million in January. But excluding motor vehicles, February industrial production remained at January's lackluster levels.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 16) UPI - The Federal Reserve said America's factories, mines and utilities were operating at 82.3 percent of capacity in February, an increase of 0.3 percent over January's 82 percent.

The increase in utilization also "resulted almost exclusively from an increase in the operating rate for auto and truck assembly facilities after most had been shut down for part of January," the Fed said.

"Utilization rates in most other industries, as well as in mining and utilities, declined in February," the Fed added. All the data was adjusted to reflect seasonal factors.

Taking a closer look at the production data for last month, consumer goods were up by 1.3 percent and durable goods - items made to last three or more years, such as cars - zoomed by 6.4 percent.

February production of non-durable consumer goods was off by 0.3 percent, as was production of construction supplies. Business equipment, however, scored a one percent advance and the production of defense and space equipment edged up by 0.1 percent. The nation's mines reported a production decline of 0.5 percent in February and the output of the nation's utilities fell by 0.8 percent.

"The drop in non-durables was widespread, with the most significant declines occurring in textiles and chemicals," the Fed said. "The decrease in energy materials mainly reflected the decline in coal mining."

(MARCH 16) UPI - Prices on the Tokyo Stock Exchange fell marginally Friday after a morning surge as investors took a wait-and-see attitude about the expected announcement of an increase in the discount rate.

The blue-chip Nikkei Stock Average of 225 selected issues, which rose 319.51 points Thursday, lost 55.20 points to close at 32,616.44. The broader-based Tokyo Stock Price Index of all major listed stocks, which was up 6.94 points Thursday, fell back 8.43 points to finish at 2,419.21.

Trading remained light, with an estimated 500 million shares changing hands, compared with 508.94 million shares Thursday. The Nikkei jumped up 250 points in the morning session but fell in the afternoon on index-linked selling by corporate investors. Dealers said the mood is still bearish with the weak yen, looming interest rate increases and high bond yields.

The U.S. dollar edged up against the Japanese yen to close 0.03 yen higher at 152.50 yen on the Tokyo Foreign Exchange market. Market players stayed on the sidelines, expecting an official interest hike by the Bank of Japan in the near future.

Declines outnumbered advances 554 to 389, with 198 issues unchanged. Constructions, electricals, pharmaceuticals and machineries were lower. Steels and petroleum issues were higher.

Among the most active stocks were Nippon Steel, Nippon Mining, Kobe Steel, Kawasaki Steel, and Sato Kogyo.

Elsewhere in Asia, prices closed slightly lower in dull trading on the Hong Kong Stock Exchange.

The key Hang Seng Index, which gained 11.58 points Thursday, eased 6.35 points to close at 2886.46. Turnover was moderate at 1.063 billion shares, down from Thursday's 1.257 billion.

"There was nothing exciting in this market today. The blue-chip companies hardly moved all day," said one broker. Dealers said the Hong Kong market lacked direction across the board due to sluggish economic growth and lack of corporate news.

Financials rose 1.83, utilities lost 39.32, industrials edged up 2.09 while properties closed 2.29 up.

Prices closed marginally higher in light trading on the Singapore Stock Exchange as bargain hunters continued to dominate the market.

The Straits Time Industrial Index, which rose 4.23 points Thursday, climbed a modest 1.79 points to close at 1570.99. The narrower All Singapore Index which rose 1.41 points Thursday, was up 1.43 points to close at 430.88. Turnover was 66 million shares, down from 76.7 million shares traded Thursday.

Analysts said investors were cautious and did not enter the market in full force due to concerns about currency and interest rates. Brokers said the Singapore market was cautiously monitoring the Tokyo Stock Exchange which remained volatile.

Gainers included Oriental Holding, Singapore Airlines (foreign), Wearne Brothers, Sim Lim Investment, United Overseas Bank, and Bolton Properties.

Losers were Uniphone, British American Life Insurance, Singapore Land Warrant, Prima Flour, and Sembawang Shipyard.

In Australia, stock prices closed higher in moderate trading on the Sydney Stock Exchange amid growing investor confidence that interest rates were at last heading lower.

The All Ordinaries index, which rose 14.2 points Thursday, rose 11.6 to close at 1584.3 points.

Turnover was 86.1 million shares, drastically down fom 168.1 million shares Thursday. Advances led declines 188 to 148, and 252 issues were unchanged.

Analysts said a fall in money market interest rates appeared to have lifted the gloom that shrouded the sharemarket for the first three days of this week. The blue chips again attracted most of the buying.

On the trading floor, the major base metal miners were gainers, with CRA up ten cents to $12.15, MIM up five cents to $2.29, North BH up three cents to $2.33, and WMC up 14 cents to $5.34. News Corp was again a major winner up 20 cents to $11.

LONDON (MARCH 16) UPI - Stock prices were mostly higher in moderate trading at midday Friday on the London International stock exchange.

The Financial Times 100-stock index, which added 9.0 points Thursday, was up 22 points at 2,256.9. The narrower top 30 industrial average was up 19.2 points to 1,784.9.

Volume amounted to 298.5 million shares, up sharply from the 193 million shares traded during the same period Thursday.

Analysts said the volume was strong compared with the previous days of trading this week.

Dealers said investors were active in view of the release of Britain's fiscal 1991 budget next wek.

On the corporate front, Glaxo Holdings, one of Britain's largest pharmaceuticals group, was up 40 cents to $13.17, reflecting the company's strong earnings report released Thursday.

United Biscuits was up seven cents to $7.17, RTZ up 22 cents to $9.43, and B.A.T. Industries soared 32 cents to $14, after reporting it will divest its toy, jewelry and electronics subsidiary as part of the company's plan to fight off a hostile takeover bid by Sir James Goldsmith.

LONDON (MARCH 16) UPI - Britain's ambassador to Iraq returned home Friday and the Iraqi government organized massive anti-British demonstrations in response to the diplomatic actions taken for Baghdad's execution of a London-based journalist.

Farzad Bazoft, 31, an Iranian-born reporter working in London for the Observer newspaper, was hanged Thursday in Baghdad after a military court accused him of spying for Israel.

Amid the diplomatic rift, British officials confirmed that Bazoft, described by his employer as a diligent reporter working on a scoop, had been imprisoned for a year for a 1981 robbery.

Bazoft was sentenced to death Saturday by a military court, which accused him of spying for Israel when he entered an off-limits military complex north of Baghdad last September to investigate reports of a massive explosion for the Observer newspaper.

A British nurse, Daphne Parish, 52, received a 15-year sentence for driving Bazoft to the restricted area. An embassy official who saw her in prison said she was in good health and had been released from solitary confinement to a cell with four other women.

The Foreign Office said Britain's ambassador to Iraq, Harold Walker, arrived in London early Friday after being recalled under a package of retaliatory measures announced by Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd.

The British Broadcasting Corp. quoted Walker as saying relations between the two countries had been dealt a ''terrible blow'' by the confrontation.

Hurd also suspended all planned ministerial visits to Iraq and expelled six Iraqis who were training with the British military.

He said London will press on with rallying support from the European Community and other allies to urge Iraq to release Parish and another British prisoner. No move was made to halt any of the $405 million in British trade credits to Baghdad.

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein had the power to grant mercy but confirmed the death sentence despite appeals from the European Community, the United Nations secretariat, human rights groups and Britain's allies in the Middle East.

Baghdad Radio said the government will organize huge anti-British demonstrations in the capital and all provinces of the nation on Saturday to show support for Saddam's firm stand against Britain.

The state-run station said the rallies were also to ''denounce the British government's pre-meditated anti-Iraq stand.''

Baghdad Radio also quoted Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz as saying ''Iraq will never succumb to any form of threats or blackmail, through political, media or other means.''

''Britain will bear full responsibility for the measures taken by the British authorities,'' Aziz said. ''Iraq will ignore such measures which are intended to exert pressure on it, and undermine its right to act in cases related to its national security.

''The British authorities through their attitude and action reaffirm that this country has not abandoned its archaic colonial mentality, and still believes that free nations of the world should obey its orders, thus recalling its black record of conspiracies and cynicism,'' Aziz was quoted as saying.

In Washington, a U.S. State Department spokeswoman said, ''We deplore Iraq's decision to ignore the many international appeals for clemency and the undue haste with which the sentence was carried out. Where human life is involved, there should always be time for additional consideration of such a sentence.''

At the White House, however, press secretary Marlin Fitzwater was cautious in reaction to the execution, saying the Bush administration did not have ''any independent conclusions about the case itself or the trial and so forth.''

Aziz reiterated that his country had exercised its natural right in sentencing to death a person ''who committed an act of espionage in the interests of a hostile party - Israeli intelligence.''

Iraqi media reports have said Bazoft was asked by a British Embassy staffer in Baghdad to carry out certain missions, including photographing Iraqi defenses and the site of the explosion - where a British newspaper said more than 700 people were killed while Iraqi officials said only 19 died.

Although Bazoft confessed on state-run Iraqi television that he spied for Israel, the accusation was vigorously denied by his newspaper, which said the confession was obtained under duress. British diplomats said Bazoft repudiated the confession during his trial and were skeptical of evidence against him.

British officials also confirmed reports that Bazoft was convicted in 1981 for stealing $800 from a savings-and-loan bank after threatening to detonate a bomb he said he had left outside. There was no bomb.

Bazoft served 12 months of an 18-month sentence that also considered three offenses involving bad checks. The judge had recommended deportation but was overturned on appeal when Bazoft said his life would be threatened if he returned to his home country Iran.

The government sources said his term had no bearing on the way his case had been handled by the Iraqis.

HARTFORD, CT (MARCH 16) UPI - A federal appeals court in New York has been asked to overturn the convictions of four defendants in the $7 million Wells Fargo robbery case.

Defense lawyers argued Thursday before a three-judge panel that their clients were unfairly convicted at their federal trial in Hartford for the Sept. 12, 1983, robbery of a Wells fargo depot in West Hartford.

The FBI has charged Puerto Rican nationalists plotted the robbery in order to finance violent activities. The FBI said former Wells Fargo guard Victor M. Gerena of Hartford carried out the robbery. He remains at large and only about $80,000 of the loot has been recovered.

Among those appealing their conviction last year is Juan Segarra Palmer, a Harvard-educated lawyer whom the FBI claimed mastermined the robbery. He is serving a 65-year sentence.

Defense attorney Leonard Weinglass told the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals that FBI tapes admitted as evidence in the trial by U.S. District Judge T. Emmet Clarie should not have been allowed because the government's delay in sealing the tapes violated federal security laws.

Clarie allowed admission of 50 reels of surveillance tapes and the U.S. Supreme Court is now considering an appeal by the prosecution that the tapes be permitted as evidence against nine other defendants awaiting trial in the robbery.

Segarra Palmer, 39, was sentenced to 65 years in prison and fined $500,000 after being convicted of robbery, transporting stolen money and conspiracy.

Antonio Camacho Negron, 40, was given 15 years and fined $250,000 for conspiracy and transporting stolen money to Mexico.

Roberto Maldonado Rivera, 40, a prominent civil rights attorney from Puerto Rico, and Norman Ramirez Talavera, 32, a graphic artist, each received five years and were fined $100,000. Both are free on bail pending a ruling on the appeal.

Another defendant, Carlos Ayez Suarez, was acquitted.

At the start of the trial in October 1988, two of the original seven defendants, Paul S. Weinberg of Boston and Luz Berrios Berrios, the wife of Segarra Palmer, pleaded guilty to lesser charges.

Weinberg was given a one-year sentence and Berrios received a five-year sentence.

GENEVA, SWITZERLAND (MARCH 16) UPI - Japanese import tariff reduction offers at the Uruguay Round trade liberalization talks Friday fell far short of a U.S. proposal to completely abolish duties on a wide range of products.

Japan said its tariff-cutting proposal covered some 6,800 mining and industrial products and "meets the objective of one-third reductions agreed as the target of the Uruguay Round." Japan did say, however, that the offer could be amended depending on how the talks proceed.

"The Japanese offer may be modified in the course of the negotiations, taking into account reciprocity it receives and other relevant factors," Japan's dedlegation said in a statement.

The European Community had previously made a tariff-cutting offer which involved 6,709 products but which also was based on the agreed overall 30 percent reduction target.

The United States proposal, presented Thursday, provided for reciprocal elimination of duties on many products ranging from paper and wood to steel and aluminum and certain electronic items and toys and dolls.

American negotiator Rufus Yerxa said Washington was also prepared to reduce duties by 50 percent on many other products as long as other countries did the same.

There was no change in the previous U.S. position on farm products, however, which called for duties to be abolished or cut to very low levels with the same applying to non-tariff barriers such as export subsidies and import quotas.

The European Community has rejected as unworkable such "tariffication" - the converting of non-tariff measures into regular import duties. Japan also said its tariff-cutting proposal only applied to mining and industrial products.

"In the view of Japan, tariffs of agricultural, forestry and fishery products should be negotiated in the Negotiating Group on Agriculture," the delegation statement said.

The Uruguay Round, held in the framework of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, began in 1986 and is scheduled to end in December this year. The talks were seen to be in serious trouble by many leading delegates among the 107 particpating nations because of U.S.-Japanese fighting over trade in general, the U.S. dispute with the European Community over agriculture, and Third World complaints about the advanced nations' indifference to their special needs.

But the top negotiators from the major players have ruled out a collapse of the negotiations because of political dangers as well looming trade protectionism.

Increasingly, however, there is talk about possible failure to meet the overall 30 percent liberalization target which could then result in a Uruguay Round II.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 16) UPI - On the eve of St. Patrick's Day, President Bush said Friday, ''There's no place for violence in creating a new future for Ireland.''

Bush made the remarks in the Rose Garden after accepting shamrocks in a crystal bowl from visiting Deputy Prime Minister Brian Lenihan of Ireland who said the shamrocks were ''a symbol of unity and the values we share with the American people.''

Bush wore a green tie and his wife Barbara wore a bright green dress in the tradition of the holiday.

''There is one thing all Aericans are united in and that is our desire for peace and tranquility in Northern Ireland,'' Bush said. ''We can't forget the suffering and the tragedy that plagues St. Patrick's island and there's no place for violence in creating a new future for Ireland.''

He said there are 43 million Americans of Irish descent ''and I suspect many more wish they were of Irish ancestry.''

JERUSALEM (MARCH 16) UPI - Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir faced mounting pressure to resign as head of the Likud Party Friday while rival Labor Party leader Shimon Peres voiced optimism about his chances of leading Israel's next government.

Political consultations with President Chaim Herzog involving which political party would attempt to form the new government were scheduled to begin Sunday.

But by Friday, Shamir and Peres had met with members of their parties and began contacts with other parties after Thursday's historic vote of no-confidence that brought down the Shamir government.

Editorials and cartoons in the Israeli press gave Peres a firm lead on Shamir as a result of the vote, with one analysis in the Ha'aretz newspaper noting that ''Labor will build on the ruins of the Likud.''

A cartoon showed a fit Peres racing ahead of a fallen, exhausted Shamir at the midway point of a marathon race to the president's house. Giving the ''thumbs down'' sign over Shamir was Rabbi Ovadia Yosef, spiritual leader of the ultra-Orthodox Shas Party, which tipped the no-confidence vote against the 74-year-old prime minister.

In a speech to Tel Aviv high school students, Peres said he believed he would be able to form a coalition excluding Likud with 70 seats in the 120-member Knesset, or Parliament, including his party's 39 seats. His coalition members are expected to come from the left-wing and religious parties.

Interior Minister Arie Der'i of the Shas Party cast off Israeli media characterizations of he and Yosef as heroes, but said he was ''more and more satisfied'' by Yosef's decision to tell the Shas delegation in Parliament to vote against Shamir and with Peres.

Yosef attempted a last-minute compromise Thursday to re-establish the Likud-Labor coalition, which collapsed Tuesday and triggered the no-confidence vote. His efforts failed, however, when Shamir remained firm against immediate acceptance of a U.S. proposal aimed at starting Israeli-Palestinian talks.

''What Shas did yesterday was open up the chance for Likud to return to a realistic situation,'' said Der'i, who despite his Cabinet post is not a member of Parliament. ''Next week, when the president invites the representatives of the party, if the Likud appears with a leader that can form a government, that is what interests us.''

Shas and the other religious parties - guided by spiritual leaders from whom they seek approval of political decisions - are key as to whether Likud or Labor will be able to form a narrow coalition without the involvement of its rival.

Negotiations with the religious parties also were primary during the last round of government negotiations after the 1988 elections when those parties made major gains.

Der'i said his Shas Party has a natural affinity for the Likud, but the internal fighting within Likud was hurting its chances for support. The bottom line for Shas is favoring a government characterized as strong, broad and one that ''will say yes to the peace process,'' Der'i said.

The so-called ''constraints camp'' within the Likud includes Ariel Sharon, David Levy and Yitzhak Moda'i, who failed to meet with Shamir during his discussions Friday with other Likud leaders.

Sharon, Levy and Foreign Minister Moshe Arens have been mentioned as possible replacements for Shamir at the Likud's helm in an effort to win the support of the ultra-Orthodox Agudat Israel Party, which opposes Shamir's leadership.

Agudat sided with Labor in the no-confidence vote.

President Herzog begins official consultations with Israel's political parties Sunday to determine which party has the best chance of forming the next government. His first consultations include meetings with Labor, Likud, Shas and the left-wing Citizens' Rights Movement.

Likud Knesset member Reuven Rivlin said he believed that before the party could attempt to form a government it must be united. ''I have no doubt that we must determine if the leader chosen by the Likud, Yitzhak Shamir, is able to form a government.''

Tzahi Hanegbi, another Likud Knesset member and former Shamir aide, said he believed Shamir would realize that ''he must pass his leadership to someone else that would be able to form a narrow government and keep the Likud in the premiership.''

Analysis By: Arnold Sawislak

WASHINGTON (MARCH 16) UPI - Current talk about a post-Cold War "peace dividend" recalls the verse, "Last night I saw upon the stair a little man who wasn't there. He wasn't there again today; Oh, how I wish he'd go away."

As of now, there isn't any peace dividend and in the best of all possible worlds there isn't likely to be substantial defense spending savings for several years. The simple reason for that is that cutting military spending is like stopping an ocean liner - it takes a long time after you decide to do it.

This makes folks who have big plans for spending the peace dividend unhappy, but even if the administration decided to send half the men and women in uniform back to civilian life this afternoon, the savings would be months, perhaps years, down the line.

The peace dividend, when it does arrive, also might turn out to be a lot smaller than expected by people who look at the $300 billion defense budget and think it ought to be possible to save a third or more of that total now that peace is breaking out all over.

But it doesn't do President Bush much good to explain all that. For purely political reasons, he has to have a plan for the peace dividend, no matter when it arrives and how big it is.

The president has had a huge political advantage ever since he declared, "Read my lips. No new taxes." His position left opponents to play the unenviable role of candidates who insist taxes have to be raised to finance important social programs. And, as the returns of the 1988 presidential election demonstrated, that argument was about as popular as cockroaches.

But that now the decline of Soviet influence has raised the possibility of cutting U.S. military spending, the Democrats have rushed to propose ways to use the savings on education, child care, environment and other domestic programs that were blocked by the conservative tide and the huge deficits of the 1980s, which continue into the 1990s.

This idea may have some appeal. A sizable portion of the public has told pollsters it believes domestic problems have been ignored by the government and the peace dividend seems to hold forth the prospect of trying to deal with some of those social ills without raising taxes.

That may be why Bush surprised most everyone in Washington by expressing interest in, rather than condemning, Democratic Rep. Dan Rostenkowski's recent deficit-cutting plan last week.

It is true that Rostenkowski, chairman of the powerful House Ways and Means Committee, wants to raise taxes on some higher income people and opposes Bush's capital gains tax cut, but he proposes no general tax increase or retreat from the tax structure adopted in 1986.

But perhaps most important, the Illinois Democrat proposes to spend the entire peace dividend to reduce the federal budget deficit. That probably sounds good to Bush, and he might even be willing to agree to some tax table adjustments in order to keep the money saved in defense cuts out of new federal social programs.

Rostenkowski stuck out his neck in making his proposal, although it probably does not endanger his political position at home. Getting an influential Democrat to offer controversial items such as a freeze on Social Security cost-of-living increases and a ban on new spending probably is the best opening offer Bush can expect, and he appears ready to seize it as a starting point for negotiations.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 16) UPI - Prices stabilized at the wholesale level in February, due to declining energy costs, after climbing 1.8 percent in January, the Labor Department reported Friday.

Unseasonably warm winter weather in much of the country helped push the often volatile energy prices down five percent, after a 13.6 percent gain the month before, while food prices rose at a slower rate, according to the department's Producer Price Index. Excluding food and energy prices, producer prices moved up 0.4 percent during the month.

Economists welcomed the report as an indication that the growth of inflation on the wholesale level has been tamed, at least temporarily. "The acceleration is curbed but infaltion itself is not," said Cynthia Latta, an economist at Data Resources Inc., in Lexington, Mass. "It clearly is not getting any worse, but the Fed hasn't made any headway either."

During the past 12 months, inflation at the wholesale level has risen 5.1 percent, with food prices gaining 6.1 percent and energy costs rising 11.7 percent, the department's Bureau of Labor Statistics said.

"We have a relatively low but still troublesome rate of inflation in the economy," agreed Dirk von Dongen, of the National Association of Wholesaler-Distributors. "After January's number this is welcome news." "It's not a courageous prediction to suggest we'll have a continuation of what we've seen for the balance of the year," von Dongen said.

During February, the costs for finished consumer goods declined 0.2 percent after rising 2.5 percent the month before. Prices for intermediate goods rose 1.4 percent from year-ago levels while crude material prices gained 5.6 percent.

With much of the nation enjoying unseasonably warm weather, home heating oil prices fell 30.2 percent, the lowest level since last August. Gasoline prices moved down 2.3 percent after rising 16.7 percent the month before. Natural gas costs posted a marginal gain after rising 3.2 percent in January.

Also in the energy sector, diesel fuel and kerosene prices dropped more than 25 percent during the month while liquefied natural gas prices dropped about 15 percent after rising nearly 50 percent the month before.

Food costs at the producer level rose 0.9 percent in February after rising 2.1 percent the month before. Prices for eggs dropped 24 percent during the month, nearly offsetting advances over the past 6 months.

Producer prices for dairy products fell while fresh and dried vegetable prices rose a substantial 23.3 percent during the month. Prices also rose for chicken, beef, and veal.

Moving away from food, wholesale prices rose for men's and women's apparel and magazines, tobacco, alcoholic beverages, prescription drugs and textile home furnishings. Prices slowed for children's clothing, newspapers and over-the-counter drugs.

The index for capital equipment gained 0.2 percent for the third consecutive month. The most significant increases were posted in civilian aircraft, ships, railroad equipment and tools and dies.

Prices for durable manufacturing materials dropped 0.5 percent in February the ninth decrease in the past 11 months. Lower prices were posted by aluminum, zinc, copper, cadmium, and most many steel mill materials.

Costs for construction materials gained a slight 0.1 percent in February after an 0.2 percent rise the month before. The index for crude materials inched up 0.4 percent after a 2.4 percent advance in January. Crude energy goods gained 0.1 percent last month after rising five percent the previous month. Crude petroleum prices increased 0.9 percent in February after gaining 7.7 percent in January.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 16) UPI - A decline in apartment construction caused housing starts to plunge by seven percent in February after a 24.7 percent leap during January's warm spell, the Commerce Department said Friday.

New housing permits in February were also down, falling by a record 25 percent to an annual rate of 1.3 million, compared to 1.7 million in January, and surpassing a 20-percent decline in January 1979.

Permits for new apartment buildings of five or more units also set a record, plunging by 59.8 percent in February to 262,000 versus January's 652,000 - the most severe drop since 46 percent in January 1975, the department said.

"This report has to be looked at in the context of what what happened in January," said Thomas Holloway, senior economist at the Mortgage Bankers Association of America.

In addition the very warm weather, a change in housing laws led to the increase in apartment building, Holloway said. There was also "a rise in interest rates, a very sharp rise from January to February, and that's going to discourage activity in the months ahead," he said.

David Seiders, chief economist for the National Association of Homebuilders, predicted new home construction "will fall off in March" and remain down for the remainder of 1990. Despite the year's strong start, "We are not viewing this as a sustainable resurgence in housing activity," Seiders said.

January's increase was revised down to 24.7 percent from 29.6 percent, making it the biggest monthly increase since July 1982, a Commerce Department spokesman said.

The annual rate of new housing construction in the United States stood at 1.5 million in February compared to 1.6 million in January, about the same as February 1989.

Construction of single family dwellings was up by 5.1 percent in February at an annual rate of 1.2 million, compared to 1.1 million in January, the department's Census Bureau said in its monthly report.

Despite that advance, William Kelleher, an analyst at the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, warned there is "homebuyer resistance to continuing high prices and high mortgage interest rates."

February construction of apartment buildings with five or more units fell by 37.1 percent to annual rate of 266,000 starts compared to 423,000 in January - the biggest increase since 38 percent in June 1982, the report said.

The rate of construction for smaller apartment buildings, of two to four units, also fell in February, plunging by 19.6 percent to an annual rate of 45,000 units versus 56,000 in January, the Commerce Department said.

All the figures are adjusted to account for seasonal factors, such as the weather and the change in the housing law. Here's a regional summary of total housing starts in February compared to the revised January totals:

Northeast - up by 24 percent to 219,000 from 176,000.
Midwest - down by 29 percent to 271,000 from 382,000.
South - up by 14.8 percent to 604,000 from 526,000.
West - down by 24 percent to 383,000 from 504,000.

COLUMBIA, SC (MARCH 16) UPI - Democrats who were targets of Lee Atwater's hardball politics may find it difficult to believe, but the Republican National Committee chairman says his recent look at his own mortality has made him a changed man.

Atwater is recognized, especially among Democrats, as being the master of negative, in-your-face campaigning, but the political operative plans to be kinder and gentler in the future, The State newspaper reported Friday.

''I can't imagine me getting back in a fighting mood. ... I don't see how I'm every going to be mean,'' Atwater said, reflecting on the recent diagnosis of his brain tumor, a small growth that turned out to be benign.

But even though he may change his personality somewhat, Atwater said he has no intention of leaving the trench warfare of high-level politics.

''What I'm going to do is take a new approach to how I proceed, because politics is people,'' he said as he headed for the daily radiation treatment that doctors believe will shrink the tumor.

''I've always loved people, but I have a better sense of humanity, a better sense of fellowship with people than I've ever had before,'' he said. ''I realize now I'm down there on somebody else's turf, and that you're not your own. It makes you re-evaluate everything.''

Atwater said he's come to realize that ''70 percent of the things I was frantically pursuing didn't matter anyhow.''

The RNC chief said that became even more evident in his recent talks with his mentor, Harry Dent of Columbia, who engineered Richard Nixon's so-called Southern strategy in 1968. Dent once had his own reputation as a hard-nosed political operative but is now a lay preacher.

''There's not a better fellow to talk to when you're down and out,'' said Atwater, who hopes to be back to his regular schedule within a month.

The 39-year-old Atwater, who got his start as an aide to Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., and eventually directed George Bush's successful 1988 presidential campaign, was addressing a political fund-raiser in Washington when he collapsed at the podium on March 9.

Tests at George Washington University Hospital identified the brain tumor and confirmed it was non-cancerous, but not before Atwater had more than enough time to agonize over the nature of the growth.

Despite his self-professed personality makeover, the part-time blues guitarist insisted he is still the same person.

''I'm the same guy, (but) you're seeing a guy who just stared right into the abyss. Things I didn't think about too much are now important, and that's human relationships and the love of a lot of people, and how valuable they are,'' he said.

''Forget money and power ... I had no idea how wonderful people are. I wish I had known this before,'' he said.

HOUSTON (MARCH 16) UPI - Heisman Trophy winner Andre Ware, who insisted publicly for months that he would return for his final season at the University of Houston, said Friday he will enter the upcoming NFL draft.

''This is by far the most difficult decision I've ever had to make in my life,''Ware said. ''I've cherished my last three years here, but for a variety of reasons, I've decided to make myself available for the NFL draft.''

Ware was questioned about his future in the weeks leading up to the announcement of the Heisman Award last December, and everytime affirmed that he was committed to playing anther season with the Cougars.

Severals factors since he won the award, however, helped change his mind. In addition to the Cougars still being on probation for NCAA violations that occurred before Ware arrived, the university lost head coach Jack Pardee to the NFL Houston Oilers, even though offensive coordinator John Jenkins was promoted to the top job.

Of more importance was the possibility the NFL will establish an entry-level wage scale before the 1991 season and end the flood of big signing bonuses for high draft choices.

League officials have not discussed the wage scale during this week's meetings in meetings in Orlando, Fla.

Still, Ware gave the appearance of intending to return. He purchased an insurance policy with Lloyd's of London and participated in the Cougars' spring training.

Ware helped Houston become the most prolific team in NCAA history, setting 54 NCAA and 84 Southwest Conference records last season. Ware set NCAA passing records by throwing for 4,699 yards and 46 touchdowns.

Ware has been projected by some NFL analysts as a possible first-round selection while others say he could fall to the second round or lower.

Pardee said the Oilers would consider drafting Ware in the first round as ''the best available athelte,'' even though quarterback is not a position of need for the Oilers.

Defense will be a top priority for the Oilers in the NFL draft April 22-23. Houston has the 15th pick and while Cody Carlson has been the backup to Warren Moon, Carlson has indicated he would like to be traded. Moon and Ware have also become good friends and attended the past Super Bowl together.

Ware is familiar with the run-and-shoot offense, which Pardee will use with the Oilers.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 16) UPI - Scientists have confirmed suspicions that an ozone hole recently developed over the North Pole that was similar to but less severe than a previously detected hole over the South Pole, it was reported Friday.

In studies published in the April issue of Geophysical Research Letters, federal researchers said their measurements show the upper atmosphere over the Arctic apparently suffered ozone losses of 5 percent to 7 percent during the winter of 1988-89. That compares to a 50 percent ozone decline recorded over the Antarctic during its worst season of ozone destruction.

In the upper atmosphere, ozone gas is beneficial to humans by shielding Earth from the sun's harmful ultraviolet radiation. Overexposure to ultraviolet rays can cause skin cancer and eye damage, and has been implicated in immune system problems.

Scientists have linked depletion of the ozone layer - first detected over the Antarctic in 1985 - to chlorofluorocarbons, chemicals used as refrigerants, industrial solvents and in aerosol products. At ground level ozone is a major component of smog and can cause respiratory distress.

The latest studies confirm conclusions of the Airborne Arctic Stratospheric Expedition, which in February 1989 reported that the atmosphere over the North Pole ''is primed for the destruction of ozone.'' At that time, researchers said they could not prove that ozone had been lost over the Arctic.

Now, researchers said further analysis has ''refined'' their early conclusions and led to more precise measurements of ozone loss. Using a radar-like technique, a team headed by Edward Browell of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said it detected ozone depletions of up to 17 percent at some altitudes, which translates into an overall loss of 5 percent to 7 percent.

Despite the disturbing discovery of ozone thinning over the Arctic, researchers said they think such holes will pose a lesser threat to wildlife in the Northern Hemisphere than in the Southern Hemisphere. Substantial differences in weather patterns make it unlikely ozone loss will ever be as great or last as long over the North Pole, they said.

''In our lifetime, it's never going to get as bad in the north as the south. The depletion will be more limited,'' said Mark Schoeberl of NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center.

AMMAN, JORDAN (MARCH 16) UPI - Former President Jimmy Carter, fresh from talks with Syrian President Hafez Assad, said Friday he was hopeful of the release of Western hostages in Lebanon because of ''very encouraging'' statements from Iran.

''More opportunities exist now for their release than ever before,'' Damascus Radio quoted Carter as saying before he left the Syrian capital for Jordan. ''I see movement now ... better chances than those I have seen for several years.''

Carter, whose remarks came amid reports of behind-the-scenes negotiations to free the captives, said: ''Statements from Tehran are very encouraging.''

''I think there is a growing desire on the part of the Iranian government and the U.S. government to work out the problem'' between them, he said.

The radio also quoted Carter as saying that Assad, Iran's only Arab ally, would do everything possible to free the hostages.

''President Assad made it clear to me ... that Syria would do everything possible to help the release of (the) hostages. Syria is exerting good offices to both locate the hostages, and convince those who might be holding them that hostages should be protected and released,'' he was quoted as saying.

Eighteen Western hostages are believed held by pro-Iranian fundamentalist groups in Lebanon. Eight of the hostages are Americans.

Carter's remarks came before he left for Jordan's Red Sea resort city of Aqaba at the start of the third leg of his Middle East tour, and a day after the captors of three kidnapped Americans threatened to kill them.

The kidnappers Thursday also vowed to attack all airports and airlines involved in transporting Soviet Jews to Israel.

Carter's visit is the fourth to the region since he left office in 1981. He last visited Jordan in 1983.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman in Amman said Carter and his wife Rosalyn would take time off from meetings with officials and explore Aqaba, situated in the southern part of the Arab kingdom, and were expected to travel to Amman later in the day.

The spokesman said Carter was scheduled to meet Jordan's Crown Prince Hassan, Premier Mudar Badran and Foreign Minister Marwan Kassem in Amman on Saturday. It was not immediately clear if Carter would meet King Hussein.

Information Minister Ibrahim Izzeddine told reporters that Jordanian officials would brief Carter, who mediated the 1978 Camp David accords that subsequently led to the 1979 Egypt-Israel peace treaty, on developments in the Middle East and prospects for Arab-Israeli peace.

''Of course Mr. Carter is welcome, but we do not expect that he is carrying anything substantial in his pockets,'' Izzeddine said. ''Mr. Carter is interested in following up international events, and I believe that he is very much associated with Middle East issues.''

His visit comes as rival Israeli leaders scrambled to form a new government following a vote of no-confidence against Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir. Carter was scheduled to start his visit to Israel Sunday.

CHARLESTON, WV (MARCH 16) UPI - The West Virginia Supreme Court Friday upheld a lower court ruling requiring striking teachers in Jefferson County to end their 10-day walkout and return to the classroom immediately.

Despite the ruling, the West Virginia Education Association vowed the walkout would continue because the court is not the arena to settle the state's first teachers strike.

''Until there is an acceptable agreement we can recommend to our members, the strike continues,'' said WVEA spokesperson Kathy McQuarrie. ''We are working with the leadership in the House and Senate on how to resolve the strike. It's not the court we consider (as) the arena for the consideration of this.''

Thursday night the Legislature approved a 3.5 percent pay raise for teachers and 2 percent for school service personnel, effective July 1, when the new fiscal year begins. A WVEA spokesman said he doubted the pay hike would be enough to encourage teachers to return to work.

Gov. Gaston Caperton's office responded to the Supreme Court's ruling calling it a ''step in the right direction.''

''We are not interested in hurting teachers. We are not interested in teachers losing their jobs,'' said Caperton spokesman Gordon Morse. ''The thing we are interested in is putting the education system in West Virginia back on track.''

Friday's Supreme Court ruling follows an emergency hearing Thursday in which the Jefferson County Education Assocation asked the court to lift the order, arguing that state laws do not prohibit teachers' walkouts. Jefferson County Circuit Judge Thomas Steptoe issued his ruling on Monday, but agreed to delay it pending the high court's action.

In its five-page opinion, the Supreme Court unanimously ruled teachers can be forced back to work because they are violating the terms of their teaching contracts.

''We are not aware of any court, which, in the absence of some specific statute, has held that teachers who are presently under a contract could not be enjoined from engaging in a work stoppage or strike for higher wages,'' said Justice Thomas Miller, in writing for the court.

Justice Thomas McHugh, whose wife is a teacher, disqualified himself from the case.

The opinion is seen as a springboard for other county boards of education to seek court action to force strike teachers to return to the classroom next eeek.

Based on the ruling, the state Board of Education said it would pursue a statewide back-to-work order Friday afternoon in Kanawha County Circuit Court. The West Virginia Federation of Teachers said it would focus on the hearing in Kanawha County Circuit Court because of its statewide implications.

''While we are reviewing the Supreme Court's order, it appears at this time it only applies to Jefferson County and any circuit court that may take similar action,'' said Bob Brown, executive director of the West Virginia Federation of Teachers.

West Virginia schools were closed Friday for a two day cooling-off period imposed earlier in the week by state schools Superintendent Hank Marockie.

The state's first teachers strike erupted March 7, when the WVEA charged that Caperton broke a promise to deliver teachers a 5 percent pay raise and to fully health insurance and retirement benefits. The WVEA represents 16,000 of West Virginia's 21,653 teachers. The rival 3,000-member West Virginia Federation of Teachers joined the walkout.

Thousands of teachers boycotted schools this week, virtually paralyzing most of the public school system.

Teachers in Greenbrier County agreed to return to the classroom Monday because of a local firing threat, and the county's board agreed to back the teachers' call for a special legislative session to deal with education issues.

Across the border, the Giles County, Va., school system agreed to take West Virginia students whose parents are frustrated by the strike.

Giles County school Superintendent Robert McCracken said he has five applications from four families, and also has received several informal inquiries. The Giles school board Thursday authorized McCracken to accept the students if they agree to stay the rest of the year and to pay $100 a month up front.

LIVINGSTON, MT (MARCH 16) UPI - Hundreds of cult members preparing to survive nuclear war were warned again Friday they face eviction from bomb shelters because of sewer violations.

Park County Sanitarian Ken Anderson and county Commissioners Carlo Cieri and Jim Hunt inspected three shelters Thursday and found evidence they have been occupied by members of the Church Universial and Triumphant.

''It appears people are living here,'' Anderson said before the inspection was cut off and he and the commissioners were thrown off the church property by a member waving handcuffs at them.

All week, hundreds of members of the survivalist church have headed to the bomb shelters near Livingston, apparently awaiting word from church leaders to enter them en masse.

Roads have been busy with out-of-towners, and stores are doing a good business as church members stock up on supplies.

Anderson visited three shelters and saw signs of occupation in just one. But he has heard several reports of church members living underground, and said many of the shelters do not have proper sewage systems.

Cieri and Hunt said they would try to obtain a court order allowing them to tour the shelters. Anderson said he aims to cite anyone living in a shelter without proper plumbing and will evict anyone who doesn't have a sewage permit.

Church spokesman Murray Steinman said any church members moving underground were not doing so on the church's orders.

Church member Mike Derkers said leader Elizabeth Clare Prophet has received prophecies predicting nuclear war, but he didn't know if that meant he was to prepare for a specific date.

''The Ascended Masters are saying there is a likelihood of nuclear first strike,'' Derkers said. ''But they didn't say it had to happen.''

Officials are suspicious of the church because of the convictions of two leaders last year on charges of using false names to buy $150,000 worth of assault weapons and ammunition.

At least three teenagers have run away because they don't want to join their parents in the underground shelters, authorities said.

HOUSTON (MARCH 16) UPI - Houston and Fort Worth are among six cities being considered by McDonnell Douglas Corp. for an $800 million plant to build a proposed jumbo jet, an economic development group said.

Also being considered for the Douglas Aircraft Co. facility are Norman, Okla.; Marietta, Ga.; Phoenix, Ariz.; and Shreveport, La., said company spokesman Steve Swinney. Douglas Aircraft, based in Long Beach, Calif., is a major component of St. Louis-based McDonnell Douglas.

The plant would employ 8,000 to 10,000 workers and have a direct economic impact of $1.7 billion, Greater Houston Partnership President Lee Hogan said Thursday.

But before plans for the facility can move ahead, the company must decide whether to proceed with design and manufacture of the new aircraft, the MD-12X, which could rival Boeing Co.'s 747.

The program is going through mark analysis now and the company is developing a business plan, Swinney said. The results of both will determine whether Douglas proceeds with the new aircraft, he said.

Industry analyst Kent Newcomb of A.G. Edwards & Sons said a final decision on the MD-12X also depends on the success of another Douglas aircraft, the MD-11, which is being flight tested.

The MD-12X would cost $1 billion to $4 billion to develop, and deliveries of the proposed 372- to 441-seat plane could begin in 1995, according to preliminary plans and industry analysts.

Analysts disagreed on whether McDonnell Douglas will go through with massive spending needed to develop the plane. The company, saddled with $2.5 billion in debt, lost $46 million before taxes last year and reportedly is suffering millions of dollars in cost overruns on the MD-11 and the C-17 cargo program for the military.

"The company is not going to be able to do something on that order of magnitude in the too near future because they are stretching the dollars," said Paul Nisbit, analyst with Prudential Bache Inc. in New York.

"It would probably be the latter part of the decade when they would actually have an airplane, or maybe later than that. It's not imminent by any means. I would consider it more a dream than a reality."

But others were more optimistic. "My guess is it's better than even money " said Wolfgang H. Demisch, managing director of UBS Securities in New York. "My guess is it will either go this year or it won't ever."

DETROIT (MARCH 16) UPI - The government said Friday it has upgraded investigations into several vehicle lines for safety defects, including 1.5 million 1984-89 Chrysler Corp. minivans for underdash fires and 820,000 1984-88 Chevrolet Camaros for rear wheels that could fall off.

Also upgraded to "engineering analysis" status by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration in its latest monthly report was an investigation into 423,000 1988 and 1989 Ford Thunderbirds and Mercury Cougars that may have sticking throttles.

The safety agency also reopened a probe into all 1990 Chevrolet Lumina sedans because those cars may have defective front safety belts, NHTSA spokesman Tim Hurd said.

That investigation, closed in early January, was reopened March 12 after an accident in Indiana where a Lumina driver was injured after his safety belt was allegedly cut by an O-ring which is part of the design, Hurd said.

An engineering analysis is instituted by NHTSA if warranted by a preliminary evaluation. However, it does not necessarily result in a manufacturer making a safety recall, although the agency has the power to force an automaker to do so.

NHTSA said it is aware of ten underdash fires in the Chrysler minivans, which include the Dodge Caravan and Plymouth Voyager models. The fires occur near the emergency brake cable, and NHTSA is now testing conponents.

The agency is aware of 132 accidents involving 59 injuries concerning an allegedly defective rear axle shaft in 1984-88 Camaros made by General Motors Corp. The failure can cause loss of a rear wheel, NHTSA said.

In the Thunderbird/Cougar investigation, NHTSA said it knows of 105 reports including ten accidents and seven injuries involving sticking throttles on the Ford Motor Co. cars, which may occur from moderate to higher speeds.

Preliminary evaluations opened by NHTSA according to its latest report include the following cars and trucks, all manufactured by GM:

- 1982-89 Chevrolet Astro and GMC Safari vans and Chevrolet S10 and GMC S15 light trucks, for defective spare tire carriers that could cause the spare to drop to the ground. About 2.04 million vehicles could be affected.

- 1990-model Chevrolet Corvettes, for underdash fires. NHTSA is evaluating those cars after GM issued a service bulletin to repair wire abrasion on the ZR-1, a more powerful version of the standard Corvette.

- 1990-model Chevrolet ZR-1 Corvettes, for parking brake failure. About 1,000 cars possibly affected.

- 1986-87 Chevrolet Corvettes for defective safety belt retractors; 33,000 cars may be affected.

VATICAN CITY (MARCH 16) UPI - Pope John Paul II assured an American Jewish Committee delegation during an audience in the Vatican Friday he is committed to promoting cooperation between Christians and Jews throughout the world.

The pope said the ''common spiritual heritage'' of Christians and Jews means ''we can effectively work together in promoting the dignity of every human person and in safeguarding human rights, especially religious freedom.

''We must also be united in combatting all forms of racial, ethnic or religious discrimination and hatred, including anti-Semitism,'' he said.

The American Jewish Committee delegation, headed by AJC President Sholom Comay, attended the audience at the start of a six-day European tour aimed primarily at urging a public campaign by church and government leaders against anti-Semitism in Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union.

After Rome, the delegation will visit Vienna and the Polish cities of Cracow and Warsaw to discuss the problem with government and Catholic Church officials.

The delegation will also visit the World War II Auschwitz death camp near Cracow, where 2.5 million Jews and 1.5 million non-Jews died, many of them victims of Nazi gas chambers.

They will check on progress in the Vatican-promised building of a special prayer center outside the Auschwitz camp, to which Carmelite nuns will be transferred from a convent they established inside the camp perimeter.

A dispute over the presence of the nuns in what Jews consider a shrine to the Holocaust embittered Catholic-Jewish relations. But the quarrel was settled on Sept. 19 when the Vatican announced plans to build the center and transfer the nuns to it.

In his speech to the AJC delegation, the pope made no reference to the Auschwitz dispute.

''Among Catholics it is the task of every local Church to promote cooperation between Christians and Jews,'' John Paul said. ''As the successor of St. Peter, I have a special concern for all the Church, and am therefore committed to furthering such a policy throughout the world.''

The pope said continuing contacts between the AJC and the Vatican's Commission for Religious Relations with the Jews ''reflect our common desire for better understanding and greater harmony.''

Analysis By: Vernon Scott

HOLLYWOOD (MARCH 16) UPI - If a film is a reflection of its director's vision, then it follows that the director is most responsible for the movie's success or failure and should receive the credit or discredit.

Not always, at least not with the directors division of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. This year two movies were nominated for best picture Academy Awards, but neither of their directors was nominated as best director.

"Field of Dreams" was nominated, but not director Phil Alden Robinson. "Driving Miss Daisy" was nominated, but not director Bruce Beresford. If "Field of Dreams" and "Driving Miss Daisy" were so great, who made them that way? The writer? Producer? Prop man?

It only makes sense that if these two films were deemed among the year's five best, they achieved that status through the talent, effort and vision of Robinson and Beresford. Huh-uh.

Instead, Kenneth Branagh and Woody Allen were nominated for best directors even though Branagh's "Henry V" and Allen's "Crimes and Misdemeanors" were not nominated for best picture. But if Branagh and Allen did such great jobs, why didn't their pictures measure up to a nomination?

Ask director Robinson why he was overlooked by the academy and he becomes somewhat self-conscious, like a bride left waiting at the altar. "I don't find it mysterious at all," said the quiet-spoken, bearded Robinson.

"Two different groups do the voting. The directors branch (for best director) and the academy as a whole (for best picture). Nobody has to split his ballot. The 4,700 members at large don't nominate the director, but they do nominate the five pictures. Only a relatively small group of directors do the nominating. Anyway I have no qualms about the directors who were nominated. They are all very deserving. I can't argue with their selection."

Those nominated in addition to Branagh and Allen were Oliver Stone for "Born on the Fourth of July" and Peter Weir for "Dead Poets Society."

"I didn't expect to be nominated and I would have been very surprised if I had been," Robinson said. If that's the case, how does he explain the best picture nomination of his "Field of Dreams?"

"On some level the picture touched people in a way they couldn't forget," he said. "My picture was not directed in such a way that people leaving the theater would be saying, 'Wow! Who directed that movie?' Instead they came out talking about how they were touched by the film. There are some pictures that do stick in the mind because the quality of direction is so remarkable or palpable.

"'Field of Dreams' is about the story, not the direction. I wasn't trying to draw attention to style. The fact that the story made it a success is a big thrill for me. I couldn't be happier with it.

"I got responses from men who told me they hadn't spoken to their fathers in years, but the film inspired them to get in touch. A lot of people told me they had crazy dreams of doing something special, but never acted on those dreams. But after seeing the film they decided to go out and follow their hearts.

"My film is about dreams fulfilled. It's not enough to just want something - you've got to take action. Throw caution to the wind and don't listen to logical people telling you you're being unsensible.

"If a person believes strongly enough that he or she feels something is right, then they should go ahead. There's very little encouragement out there to follow your dreams, to swim against the tide. I think that's why my picture touched audiences."

Robinson himself stepped into the void with his decision to make this baseball fantasy based on W.P. Kinsella's novel "Shoeless Joe." Every studio turned him down, admonishing him that sports pictures and fantasy were box-office strikeouts.

"I spent four or five years trying to get it produced," he said. "I was told it was impossible to make a movie from the book. They couldn't see it as a film because there was nothing to compare it with, no successful film like it in the past. They needed a frame of reference.

"Finally Larry Gordon financed the screenplay. When I had a script, people could visualize the movie. It became a mission. I had a strong feeling it had to be made. For me, the picture is the important thing, not an Oscar nomination."

WASHINGTON (MARCH 16) UPI - China, one of the world's largest wheat importers, bought 300,000 metric tons of soft red winter wheat Friday, exhausting a 5-week-old U.S. offer of discount prices on 1 million tons of wheat.

The wheat involved in the sale, the equivalent of 1.1 million bushels, was worth $41.9 million, based on Chicago prices. The wheat was sold through the Export Enhancement Program, the major U.S. export subsidy program. Five exporters were given subsidies worth $7 a ton.

With the transaction, Beijing has purchased 6.7 million tons, or 246.1 million bushels, of U.S. wheat since the marketing year opened on June 1. There are 36.7 bushels of wheat in a metric ton of 2,204.6 pounds.

U.S. analysts have forecast China will import 14 million tons of wheat during the 1989-1990 marketing year.

China is the No. 1 buyer of U.S. wheat exports.

Despite its position as a leading importer, China also is one of the largest wheat producers in the world. Domestic production has been unable to keep pace with demand, however.

U.S. officials discouraged subsidized sales to China in the weeks following the bloody repression of pro-democracy demonstrators last June. Discount sales resumed Sept. 29 with a deal involving 270,000 tons of wheat.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 16) UPI - Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said Friday he suspects that ''Libyan incompetence,'' not sabotage, caused the fire that damaged the Rabta chemical factory and he dismissed Moammar Gadhafi's threats against West Germany.

''If I were the Germans, I don't think I'd be quaking in my boots at this point,'' Cheney said in response to a question at the National Newspaper Association's Government Affairs Conference.

The Libyan leader has pledged to retaliate if his government determines West German sabotage was responsible for the fire Wednesday that seriously damaged the chemical factory at Rabta, 40 miles south of the Libyan capital of Tripoli.

The United States charged last week that the plant, which West German companies allegedly helped to build, had started making chemical weapons. Libya has maintained it was producing pharmaceuticals.

''It's a darn shame what happened at Rabta,'' a smiling Cheney said sarcastically, when a member of the audience asked his reaction to the fire and Gadhafi's threats.

''I am inclined to attribute it more to Libyan incompetence than anything else,'' Cheney said of the fire.

The White House has denied any U.S. involvement in the fire.

While dismissing Libya's threats, Cheney said, ''Mr. Gadhafi obviously has resorted to terrorism in the past and I think we have to be sensitive to that. He's launched terrorist attacks against Americans and others around the world.

''But he's had better weeks, let's put it that way,'' Cheney said smugly, obviously relishing the destruction of the Libyan chemical factory.

Gadhafi has threatened to expel West German citizens from Libya if his investigation finds a West German link to the fire.

''If the inquiries under way prove that the West German intelligence services are implicated in whatever act in the Libyan interior, the West German economic presence will be eliminated from Libya,'' Gadhafi said in a statement on Tripoli Radio. ''That state which is involved in espionage and sabotage in the interests of imperialism and Zionism will lose out.''

CAPE CANAVERAL, FL (MARCH 16) UPI - The shuttle Discovery was hauled to the launch pad Friday with NASA scrambling to resolve a potential problem with the ship's nose landing gear to avoid a delay for the April 12 launch of the Hubble Space Telescope.

Discovery, carried by a powerful crawler-transporter, was moved from the Vehicle Assembly Building at the Kennedy Space Center to launch pad 39B overnight Thursday for final processing to ready the ship for blastoff on the year's third shuttle mission.

The goal of the flight is the launch of the $1.5 billion Hubble Space Telescope, the most advanced optical instrument ever built to operate above Earth's hazy atmosphere and one expected to revolutionize optical astronomy.

But the launch date was in question Friday because of concern about a 6-inch nut that holds bearings in place around Discovery's nose landing gear axle.

The issue cropped up earlier this week when engineers discovered similar nuts on the shuttles Columbia and Atlantis appeared to be cross-threaded. Technicians assume the same problem exists with Discovery's nose gear.

But the only way to inspect the nut and make repairs, if necessary, would be to remove Discovery from its external tank and lower it to a horizontal position - a complex, time-consuming task that would require a roll back to the ''VAB'' and delay launch a week or more.

Even though an analysis of the problem was not expected to be completed for several days, NASA managers decided they had nothing to lose by proceeding in the meantime with roll out to the pad and routine preparations for launch.

''If further analysis indicates a problem does exist that would jeopardize Discovery, the vehicle would be brought back to the VAB and removed from the external tank for access to the forward landing gear,'' NASA said in a statement.

In a worst-case scenario, the nose gear axle bearings could seize, which could result in a landing gear tire blowout, not a pleasant prospect given the shuttle's 200 mph-plus touchdown speed.

The nut on Columbia's nose gear was removed and shipped back to its manufacturer by jet late Thursday for extensive tests to determine if the problem would pose any danger to Discovery or if the shuttle can be cleared to fly as is.

In the meantime, NASA managers juggled the launch processing schedule Friday and decided to move the start of a practice countdown up two days, from next Wednesday to Monday, which forced the crew to delay a press conference at the Johnson Space Center in Houston from Monday to Thursday.

Commander Loren Shriver, 45, co-pilot Charles Bolden, 43, Steven Hawley, 38, Bruce McCandless, 52, and Kathryn Sullivan, 38, now plan to fly to Florida Sunday to practice emergency procedures at the launch pad and to climb on board the shuttle Tuesday for the final hours of the mock countdown.

The processing schedule was changed to allow NASA to put off loading rocket fuel into the shuttle's on-board fuel tanks to make it easier to move Discovery back to the ''VAB'' quickly, without having to drain the tanks, if such a decision is made.

A source who requested anonymity said he believes there is a 50-50 chance the shuttle may have to be rolled back off the pad to replace the suspect nut. But he said the time needed to roll the ship back was minor compared to the impact of the replacement work ''and we might as well go for it.''

ISSAQUAH, WA (MARCH 16) UPI - Trailways bus driver Bob Pottinger's million miles of accident-free driving came to an end in Issaquah.

Police said Pottinger's bus struck a car Thursday, causing only minor damage to both vehicles but ending Pottinger's string.

Shortly before the accident, Pottinger, 72, had told his passengers they were being driven by someone a safety record of ''more than a million miles.''

The bus was en route from Seattle to Yakima when the accident occurred, Trailways officials said.

NEW YORK (MARCH 16) UPI - A Russian immigrant who posed as a car service driver and allegedly stole religious articles from at least six Jewish schools in Brooklyn was arrested on burglary charges, police said Friday.

The man, Bingamin Babaiev, 30, of Brooklyn, was arrested Thursday following a monthlong investigation that involved local members of the Orthodox Jewish community in Crown Heights, said detective Robert Rodenburg of the 66th Precinct, who investigated the case.

Babaiev, who is Jewish, wore a yamalka and entered the Yeshivas saying he was there to pick up a passenger and then allegedly stole tefillin, small boxes with leather straps used in morning prayer services, Rodenburg said.

The tefillin, which were left on shelves in the schools, were worth about $1,000 a set and Babaiev tried to sell them to local scholars who repaired and sold religious articles, but no sales were made, said Rodenburg.

Babaiev was carrying two sets of tefillin when he was arrested at 5 p.m. Thursday and police recovered 11 more tefillin in his home, Rodenburg said.

Babaiev was charged with three counts of burglary and additional charges were expected, police said. Babaiev apparently was in the country legally.

MAYNARD, Mass. (MARCH 16) UPI - Digital Equipment Corp. said Friday it was offering a voluntary severance package to at least 245 employees and immeditely cutting about 50 temporary workers at a Colorado plant.

The severance package was offered to 45 engineering and manufacturing employees at the Colorado Springs facility now and another 60 will get the option by the end of June, said Nikki Richardson, a spokeswoman for the nation's No. 2 computer maker.

Employees have 13 weeks during which they may take the offer, Richardson said.

Within 15 months, as many as 345 employees at the facility will receive the severance offer, she said.

Meanwhile, she said, the company would cut the number of temporary employees working at the plant from 96 to 40 or 50 ''almost immediately.''

Richardson said the 46 to 56 temporary workers to be eliminated were not being laid off because ''they're not our employees'' but instead work for employment agencies. She said she could not estimate how many such temporary workers the company has.

Only one of the company's four facilities in Colorado Springs was affected she said. Digital employs 3,700 workers in Colorado Springs, Richardson added.

The company, which is wrestling with a bloated workforce, flat revenues and the likelihood of a loss in the current quarter, has had a 32-year tradition of no layoffs.

However, the company has recently embarked on an effort to reduce its employment levels, which totaled 125,900 worldwide at the beginning of January.

The severance program offered in Colorado Springs was identical to one offered in September to about 700 employees in Salem, N.H., and to about 600 in Phoenix just last week, Richardson said. Employees with two years or less with the company will receive 40 weeks pay. This amount will rise in increments to as much as 104 weeks pay based on seniority, Richardson said.

Also, medical, dental and life insurance coverage will be extended for a year for all those leaving.

BRASILIA, BRAZIL (MARCH 16) UPI - Brazil's new president, Fernando Collor de Mello, ordered a price freeze, taxes on the rich and a new monetary unit as part of a sweeping economic package designed to halt skyrocketing inflation.

''There are no alternatives,'' the 40-year-old president said in a televised message to the Cabinet one day after his inauguration.

The economic program must be approved by Congress within 30 days. Although Collor's party controls only a handful of seats in Congress, his aides said they are certain the plan will win legislative approval.

Collor told the Cabinet his goal was to reduce the budget deficit, now estimated at 7 percent of the gross domestic product, to zero by the end of the year, and to terminate hyperinflation that has sent prices rising an average of more than 2 percent per day.

''Brazil must not accept defeat. There is only one alternative - to win,'' he declared.

Collor said the new monetary unit would be called the cruzeiro, replacing the novo cruzado now in circulation along with older monies. The value of the unit was not immediately known.

Among the stabilization steps announced by Collor are a retroactive price freeze to levels of March 12, the dissolution of 24 government departments and state companies, and the sale of 42 homes belonging to ministers and 10,000 apartments belonging to government officials.

The measures also include new taxes on large personal fortunes, reduction of tariff barriers on imports, elimination of subsidies including those to the important computer industry and to exports, and new taxes on large savings accounts and on profits.

According to the plan, wages will be increased in March by 72 percent to compensate for inflation in February, but after April 15 salaries will be fixed at a rate not necessarily coinciding with inflation.

Businessmen and their employees convicted of price speculation will be subject to prison sentences of up to five years, Collor said, and corrupt public employees will be fired.

On Thursday, shortly after receiving the presidential sash from outgoing President Jose Sarney at the Planalto Palace, Collor signed decrees slashing from 24 to 12 the number of government ministries in a sign of his cost-cutting campaign to reduce the deficit.

Inflation shot up by 2,751 percent in the 12-month period ending Feb. 28, and, until Collor's program, it was soaring at a rate of over 85 percent for the month of March alone.

With 144 million people, Brazil is the second most populated nation in the Western Hemisphere after the United States.

It shares borders with every country in South America except Chile and Ecuador, and the success or failures of its policies have immediate impact throughout the continent.

Collor is the first Brazilian president to be elected by direct popular vote since Janio Quadros in 1961. Quadros resigned after only seven months beginning a period of political instability that culminated in a coup in 1964 followed by 21 years of military rule.

In the difficult negotiations with foreign creditors who hold the burdensome $112 billion Brazilian foreign debt, the new president has said he wanted ''dialogue, not confrontations.''

GENEVA (MARCH 16) UPI - U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees Thorvald Stoltenberg warned governments Friday of major operational cutbacks because of lack of funds.

Stoltenberg, of Norway, said 1989 ended with a $38 million deficit which already cut into assistance programs.

Funding requirements for 1990, meanwhile, are estimated at $702 million but income which consists almost entirely of voluntary contributions is projected at only $550 million.

That means the agency will be lacking as much as $200 million unless contributions are increased, he said.

This ''considerable potential shortfall,'' Stoltenberg said in his message to world governments, means ''a severe reduction in planned activities.''

''Moreover, unless additional financial resources are forthcoming, UNHCR will be unable to face any new refugee situations that arise during the year,'' he said.

STEELTON, Pa. (MARCH 16) UPI - An increased demand for large-diameter pipe in 1989 was the only bright spot in an otherwise disappointing business year for Bethlehem Steel Corp.'s Rail Products & Pipe Division, the corporation said Friday.

But current indicators point to a possible improvement in rail sales later this year, and the division's pipe business is expected to increase further as more major pipeline projects are approved for constuction, according to Tim Lewis, president of the Steelton, Dauphin County, division.

''This year we see a gradual improvement in sales of railroad rails, while orders for pipe will remain strong,'' Lewis said. ''In fact, we expect our pipe shipments to grow during the new year, based on a number of pipe construction projects that will get under way over the next few months.''

The Bethlehem Steel division employed an average 1,917 people last year and purchased some $16.5 million worth of goods and services from suppliers in the region.

CARBONDALE, Ill. (MARCH 16) UPI - City officials said Friday they are taking seriously the prediction of a Dec. 3 earthquake and have ordered about a dozen department heads not to plan any vacations for that date.

''We're just taking precautions and being as prepared as we can be,'' Deputy City Manager Jeff Doherty said. ''If it happens we want to be as prepared as possible.''

The no-vacation policy does not yet apply to the city's other 250 employees, Doherty said.

Climatologist Iben Browning of New Mexico has said that tidal forces will be at a high point on Dec. 2 and into Dec. 3 that could trigger a quake along the New Madrid fault line.

One of the largest earthquakes in North America took place early in the 19th century along the fault line, which runs through Southern Illinois.

Doherty said an earthquake preparedness drill would be held this spring or summer as another precaution. He said the precautions did not necessarily lend credence to Browning's prediction.

Browning's predictions have been disputed by other experts who say he places too much emphasis on the tides. Browning gained some credibility when he predicted in early October that San Francisco would have an earthquake around Oct. 16. The 7.1 quake on the Richter Scale occured Oct.

Doherty said Carbondale had been planning for about four years to get itself ready for a possible quake. He said few buildings in the college town of 26,000 were built to sustain earthquakes.

''We want to have our police heads, fire heads, in position if something does happen,'' Doherty added.

Asked if the no-vacation policy might cause some panic in the Southern Illinois community, Doherty answered: ''We're looking at it another way. We don't want to be off guard.''

NAIROBI, KENYA (MARCH 16) UPI - The United Nations World Food Program announced Friday it would give 11,500 tons of food to help almost a million people facing drought and starvation in western Sudan.

In a statement released in Nairobi, Kenya, the Rome-based U.N. agency said the emergency food was needed for 998,000 people in Kordofan province, which stretches about 300 miles west and south from the capital, Khartoum.

Kordofan lost 36 percent of its growing area for millet and sorghum to a crippling drought in the 1989-90 agricultural season, the statement said.

The WFP announcement came less than a day after the Bush administration said it was moving to restart emergency food aid to Sudan, five months after the U.N.'s Operation Lifeline program was halted by the Khartoum government because of civil war in the south. The U.S. has pledged $16.7 million for famine relief in Sudan, administration officials have said.

Sudan suffered a succession of famines in the 1980s. In 1988 famine is estimated to have killed 250,000 people.

The major cause of these famines has been disruption by the civil war between the southern Sudanese People's Liberation Army and successive governments in Khartoum since 1983.

The present military government has waged an increasingly bitter war of words with western donors, accusing them of attempting to influence Sudanese politics with aid.

The U.S. last week cut off economic and military, but not humanitarian assistance to Sudan because the military, under Gen. Omar al Bashir, had not reinstated democratic freedoms within eight months of seizing power in June last year.

The government Thursday issued a statement saying it would not ''crawl or bow to pressure for the sake of foreign assistance.''

LONDON (MARCH 16) UPI - Stock prices ended the week higher on the London's International stock exchange Friday, as the British pound shrugged off the government's recent poor showing in the polls.

The Financial Times Stock Exchange 100-share index, which gained 13.6 points Thursday, ended the session up 29 points to 2,263.9. The narrower Financial Times 30 index which gained 7.1 points Thursday, was up 23.7 points to close at 1,789.4.

Volume was 485.5 million shares, compared with the 350.4 million shares tradedThursday.

Gilt-edged securities rebounded on the strength of the pound.

Analysts said a strong start on Wall Street helped the London market and better-than-expected earnings reports by a number of British companies revived the interest of investors in a number of issues.

The stock exchange seemed to ignore the pessimistic news recently released in a poll saying the British government was getting little confidence from the public.

Among the biggest gainers, Glaxo continued to benefit from Thursday's report of strong annual profits, jumping 50 cents to $12.66.

B.A.T Industries was expected to release strong annual results next week and dealers said the response to its proposals to sell its Argos retailing chain helped its stock rise 24 cents to $13.12.

ICI was up 32 cents to $18.19 on speculation it was about to sell its 25 percent stake in Enterprise Oil. The rumors hit Enterprise Oil shares, which were down 3 cents to $9.88.

Elsewhere, the hope of a bid from Irish businessman Larry Goodman lifted Unigate 18 cents to $4.70. Dealers said, however, that Goodman's preferred target may be the sugar division of Berisford.

LONDON (MARCH 16) UPI - As Baghdad and London engaged in diplomatic jousts over the execution of a London-based journalist, a postmortem opened Friday on the character of the man who went to the gallows for allegedly crossing the line between reporter and spy.

The British media dwelled on how Farzad Bazoft - the Iranian-born reporter hanged in Baghdad Thursday - was convicted for robbery in 1981, took exceptional risks when reporting in Iraq and had vague links with intelligence agencies.

''Why was a stateless Iranian, a freelance (reporter) traveling with British documents, allowed to go to Iraq, a notoriously repressive country which had only recently ended a bitter war with Iran?'' asked The Daily Telegraph.

Bazoft, 31, came to Britain as a 16-year-old student and never returned to Iran after the 1979 revolution. Friends said he was affable, popular and fired by a zeal for news.

An Iraqi military tribunal condemned Bazoft March 10 for allegedly spying for Israel last September, when he ventured to a military facility near Baghdad to investigate a massive blast reported to have killed hundreds of people.

Iraqi authorities said he disguised himself as an Indian doctor to enter the forbidden zone, where he took soil samples and photographs.

His colleagues at the Observer newspaper scoffed at the espionage charges, and said Bazoft's methods were rash but typical for the enthusiastic reporter.

''He had had a warm and comfortable reception on five previous occasions (in Iraq), and was lulled into a feeling that he was a friend,'' said an Observer reporter, John Merrith. ''He told (Iraqi authorities) he wanted this story. He certainly did not wander around the street with a stethoscope.''

Bazoft paid the ultimate price for underestimating the importance of national security in Iraq.

Some newspapers said his driving urge to succeed at the Observer undoubtedly weighed heavily in his decision to take exceptional risks to win the scoop he said he was after even as he walked to the gallows.

The Independent said Bazoft had a niche as a freelance writer at the Observer during the eight-year Gulf War, but the need for his expertise diminished with a cease-fire in 1988.

He fell behind on a mortgage and had to sell his home, moving into a rented apartment.

When the Iraqis invited him to visit, he eagerly took the chance to get a front-page story and a staff job, it said.

Bazoft had been through an earlier difficult period, when in 1981 he was convicted for $800 from a savings and loan bank by threatening to detonate a bomb. Officials said he served 12 months of an 18-month sentence, which also considered three offenses involving bad checks.

He also was arrested and accused of spying for Israel in Tunis in May 1989 while taking photographs outside the headquarters of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

The Guardian also said Bazoft had listed in his address book a former Israeli military attache in Tehran, whom he had interviewed for a story in 1986. The attache said he was simply a source for one of Bazoft's stories.

The newspaper said the two connections with intelligence personnel were probably innocent, but ''to a tyrannical and paranoid regime, seem all too easy to be proof that he worked not as a reporter, but as an enemy agent.''

WASHINGTON (MARCH 16) UPI - The Air Force said Friday a troubled new air-to-air missile will exceed a cost cap set by Congress and a senior official said the Air Force is reconsidering how many it needs because of events in Europe.

In addition, officials updated the cost estimate on an advanced fighter plane, guessing that it will cost about $40 million each.

The advanced medium range air-to-air missile, or AMRAAM, which Congress originally declared should cost about $7 billion for about 24,000 copies, has now climbed to $9.3 billion in 1984 dollars, Lt. Gen. Ronald Yates told the procurement subcommittee of the House Armed Services Committee Friday.

The Air Force, which is also handling the procurement of several thousand missiles for the Navy within the overall AMRAAM purchase, last month quit accepting delivery of the missile after getting about 140 because it was failing to meet quality and testing standards.

After initially setting a program limit of $7 billion, Congress raised the limit to $7.7 billion. Yates said about three-quarters of the increase between $7.7 billion and $9.3 billion was attributable to a Pentagon change in the way program costs are calculated, and most of the rest was attributable to inflation.

He also declared that Air Force planners are re-evaluating the number of missiles the Air Force needs in light of the reduced threat in Europe, where the Warsaw Pact has largely dissolved as a military threat and where a superpower conventional arms agreement is expected to be signed soon.

Yates, the highest ranking non-civilian purchasing officer in the Air Force, also said that the next generation fighter - the advanced tactical fighter, or ATF - is ''not out of bounds'' in its still classified cost estimates. He said the fighter is likely to cost about $40 million each.

Two teams of contractors are developing competing versions of the plane, expected to rely heavily on stealth technology. One fighter is believed ready to make its initial flight next month and the other in June or July.

Yates said the Air Force expects that ATF production would begin in 1997 and the first squadron would be operational in the year 2000.

Four and a half years ago the Air Force set a cost goal of $35 million per plane in 1985 dollars, a figure that did not include research and development costs. In 1988 the General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress, said the the Air Force wanted to buy 750 of the fighters.

Yates and John Welch, the senior civilian acquisition official for the service, said the Air Force will seek permission to go into full production of the missile when it determines the AMRAAM's manufacturers, Hughes and Raytheon, have corrected quality problems and the missile's reliability increases to 200 hours of flight time before needing maintenance.

The two also argued strongly for congressional approval of the C-17 cargo plane, insisting it is a necessary replacement for aging C-141s.

And they discussed problems affecting a missile known as Tacit Rainbow, a Northrop project based in Georgia intended to use a cruise missile to loiter above a battlefield to listen for air defense radars and then dive into a radar site once one has been detected.

The missile has not fared well in tests and cost estimates for production models are higher than anticipated.

PARIS (MARCH 16) UPI - Tiger prints and curling jeweled pythons brought new life to the sophisticated classics of designer Hubert de Givenchy at the fall-winter ready-to-wear shows for store buyers Friday.

Although the basic style of Givenchy changes little, his well-brought-up outfits sang with beauty and wearability after four days of far-out, sometimes vulgar styles in the 10-day fashion festival.

To the beat of American jazz of the '50's instead of the usual pounding rock, Givenchy paraded sighed-over knitwear - loose jackets or coats over skirts or belted dresses, often with knitted-in tiger designs. Some outfits mixed colors such as plum and mustard.

A black leather suit with a fitted collarless jacket bore the same rippling tiger motif in gold to match the gold jersey blouse.

Givenchy, one of the oldest designers in Paris at 63 yet still on top, had sequinned pythons coiling down the sleeves of a black evening trouser suit and on the front of a long black velvet gown.

Capes, a major trend so far in the shows of some 92 designers, floated through the Givenchy parade. A brown redingote-style coat with giant gold buttons brought wild applause.

Suits often mixed colors and fabrics, such as a red leather skirt under a mustard and red plaid woolen jacket and mustard silk blouse.

Dresses and skirts ended far above the knee and trouser suits offered an alternative. He kept shoulders square or rounded by reasonable padding.

Evening dresses were short and strapless and a long black velvet dress was split up to mid-thigh but they all had the elegant air of refinement.

The Paris shows are drowning in hoods. Bernard Perris hid heads on virtually every model on his runway - hooded blouses, hooded coats and jackets, hooded parkas with drawstring waists. The ultimate was two hoods, one on a dress or blouse, another on a jacket or coat.

Most of the shows are a riot of unwintery colors, such as Perris' combining rust pants, a lime green jacket and banana yellow blouse. Winter white also is common in the shows including Perris' white quilted jump suits.

Karl Lagerfeld rolled out supershort, superyoung skirts, jackets and coats that are magnificent on supershort, superyoung women. Other observers appeared disappointed.

He liked wide lapels, fitted jackets, capes, cigarette trousers, rows of brass buttons, stoles and scarves, tank-top dresses and embroidered lapels and pockets on short evening suits.

Two of the most charming collections were not found in the exhibition tents in the Louvre museum courtyard but in little private showrooms.

An American designer, Carmelo Pompodoro, 34, a fashion student in New York who went into business three years ago, has invaded Paris and already signed up five European distributors plus Japanese bankers for a shop in Tokyo.

''They think I'm an Italian,'' joked Pompodoro, of Italian ancestry.

His inexpensive, mix-match, casual line ($100-$600 retail) includes silk duffle coats, short hooded dresses, parkas, velveteen mini skirts or shorts over tights, loose crocheted jackets, black or white lace skirts, tops and jackets and long and full granny dresses with pointed crocheted over-skirts.

Up the street from the Louvre, Japanese Jun Inoue, for eight years director of Jean-Paul Gaultiers workroom, has opened his own showroom. He calls it June, July and August as a play on his first name.

EAST BERLIN (MARCH 16) UPI - East German candidates and their West German backers Friday entered the final race to catch votes for weekend elections expected to establish the first non-Communist government in the state's 40-year history.

In the small town of Magdeburg, West German Economic Minister Helmut Hausman of the Free Democratic Party said the introduction of a Western-style economy was a prerequisite for the country's development.

Gregor Gysi, who heads East Germany's ailing Communist Party, told his audience at a rally in the northern town of Guestrow that political stability was needed to ensure economic success.

Other electioneers from East and West addressed numerous rallies throughout East Germany, winding down their campaigns.

East German political parties have been told to stop campaigning late Friday to allow voters a full day of reflection before polls open early Sunday.

The Communist Party planned to hold its last meeting at East Berlin's Alexander Platz - five months ago the scene of massive demonstrations that triggered the fall of the hardline communist leadership.

In East Berlin, more than 100 people lined up outside the ''Democracy House'' - a building that houses several small pro-democracy groups - to listen to candidates discuss their views.

Analysts expect an extremely high turnout at Sunday's polls, the first free and secret elections since East Germany was formed as a Soviet satellite 40 years ago. Voters will choose among 24 parties and alliances.

In the past, the Communist Party and other parties and organizations it backed presented all their candidates in a single list approved by the Central Committee. Virtually all candidates were elected amid claims of massive electoral fraud.

A commission preparing the elections Friday announced measures aimed at preventing such irregularities.

The commission said that party political meetings will be banned within the immediate vicinity of polling stations.

It also banned parties from driving voters to the stations in cars bearing the symbol of a political party. Many East Germans claim that in the past they had been forced to vote and sometimes even trucked to voting stations.

Despite efforts to clean up its image, tarnished by 40 years of Stalinist policies, the Communist Party, called Party of Democratic Socialism, is unlikely to garner more than 15 percent of the vote.

Analysts predict the Social Democrats and the Conservatives will each win about one third of the vote. The two groups are likely to establish a coalition and form the country's first non-Communist government.

An East German conservative party backed by West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl, meanwhile, dismissed charges that its general secretary had had contacts with the secret police under the Communist leadership of Erich Honecker.

Spokesman Helmut Lueck of the East German Christian Democratic Party told the official East German news service ADN the accusation was being spread 36 hours before the opening of the polls in an effort to discredit the party allied with two other conservative parties in a bloc called the Alliance for Germany.

Lueck said the party general secretary, Martin Kirchner, had sometime ago called ''absurd'' the allegations that he had contacts to the secret police.

The latest development comes after the alliance supported by Kohl was shaken Wednesday by the admission of Wolfgang Schnur, head of the Democratic Awakening - one of the three parties in the conservative bloc - he had collaborated with the hated Stasi, the former State Security Ministry.

Schnur resigned as head of the party, which on Thursday selected Rainer Eppelmann, an East Berlin clergyman active in the civil rights movement, as its new leader.

CHICAGO (MARCH 16) UPI - A man who refused to turn over 50 cents to three assailants was kicked, beaten and stabbed early Friday, leaving him in critical condition, police said.

Paul Adams, 55, Chicago, and a woman were approached by the trio on the city's North Side about 3:15 a.m., said Norbert Rivera, a police spokesman.

'''Give me 50 cents. I know you've got 50 cents,''' Rivera quoted one the attackers as saying.

When Adams refused, he was kicked, beaten and stabbed. His female companion fled and called police, who found Adams with a ''knife sticking out of the left side of the chest,'' said Rivera.

He was taken to Illinois Masonic Hospital, where he was in critical condition, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Police saw three men run from the scene and later captured Raul Romeo, 17, and Luis Morales, 18, both of Chicago. They were searching for a third suspect.

NEW YORK (MARCH 16) UPI - A senior manager of the Lazard Freres investment banks said Friday that Satoshi Sumita, a former governor of the Bank of Japan, has agreed to act as adviser to the New York, London, and Paris houses.

Sumita will consult on international finances for Lazard Freres & Co., New York, Lazard Freres et Cie., Paris, and Lazard Brothers, London, said Michel David-Weill, chairman of the London investment bank.

"It is an honor as well as a great benefit for us to have access to Governor Sumita's broad and deep experience in Japan and international finance," said David-Weill, also a senior partner of the New York and Paris houses.

"We will value Governor Sumita's advice and counsel with the greatest care and attention," he continued. "Any banking firm today without a truly Japanese perspective will be lacking in a proper balance."

Lazard Freres & Co. also recently named former Treasury secretary W. Michael Blumenthal, now chief executive officer of Unisys Inc., as a limited partner and co-chairman of a Lazard Freres global coordination group.

The three Lazard houses, whose roots go back to 1848 when the first of them started up in San Francisco, today exist as separate but strategically linked investment banking firms in New York, Paris, and London. Besides their commercial activities, the banks have provided financial advice to a number of national and local governments.

In the United States Lazard Freres & Co. advises New York City, Washington D.C., Chicago, Detroit and Cleveland. The French investment house recently was appointed financial advisor to the Hungarian government. The Lazare houses are closely connected with the S. Pearson Group in Britain, owner of the Financial Times and other publications.

(MARCH 16) UPI - Today's People:

MARLA'S SENSUAL Y AND G: Marla Maples, the reported "other woman" of the Trump affair, is vain, sensuous, and charming but she isn't a gold digger, according to an analysis of her handwriting.

The New York Daily News had graphologist Charles Hamilton take a look at the handwritten note Maples released to the media last week when she announced she wouldn't be attending the grand opening of Donald Trump's Taj Mahal casino in Atlantic City, N.J.

Hamilton says Maples's stylish M's indicate she is "vain and pretentious, a threatrical creature who loves to dazzle and amuse society," while her long-tailed Y's and G's show a rich sensuality.

"Behind the egotism of her big writing is a sensitive woman of the world who knows how to cast out her enticing bait and snare the wary male," he said. Hamilton, who was one of the first to denounce the so-called Hitler Diaries as forgeries, says Maples's writing shows she is "primed for romance, ready for love and caresses" but adds, "I didn't find any desire for wealth."

FUNICELLO'S FUN: Annette Funicello has been reliving a bit of her past lately. Funicello, 46, and five other original Mouseketeers were at Walt Disney World's MGM Studios this week to shoot a one-year aniversary show for the new version of the Mickey Mouse Club show and it brought back fond memories for Funicello, the most famous Mousketeer of them all.

"I couldn't wait to get to work," she recalled of her own days in mouse ears. "I was always so happy. It was like leaving my home and going to my second home, to be with all my friends, 23 other Mouseketeers, and we truly were like good friends."

Now she and her "Beach Blanket Bingo" boyfriend, Frankie Avalon, have teamed up again and are touring in an oldies musical review. "They still want to see Frankie and me back together," she said, "and he's been asking me for years to go on the road with him and I've said, 'Leave me alone. I want to raise my children.' So he called not too long ago and said, 'Your kids are older now.' It's fun. It's a lot of fun."

ATTENTION WILLIE HORTON: Talk about kinder and gentler. Lee Atwater, the Republican National Committee chairman with a reputation for down-and-dirty politics, recently was discovered to have a benign brain tumor and he says it's given him a new outlook on life. "I'm the same guy (but) you're seeing a guy who just stared right into the abyss," Atwater, 39, told The State newspaper of Columbia, S.C.

"Things I didn't think about too much are now important and that's human relationships and the love of a lot of people and how valuable they are. Forget money and power ... I had no idea how wonderful people are. I wish I had known this before."

Will Atwater's metamorphosis lead to a change in his tactics? "I can't imagine me getting back in a fighting mood," he said. "I don't see how I'm every going to be mean. What I'm going to do is take a new approach to how I proceed because politics is people."

PEPPER ATTACK: Two members of the Red Hot Chili Peppers rock band were charged with assaulting a woman in the audience of a spring break show that was being taped for MTV Wednesday in Daytona Beach, Fla.

Bassist Michael "Flea" Balcary of Los Angeles was charged with battery, disorderly conduct, and solicitation to commit an unnatural and lascivious act, authorities said. Drummer Chad Smith, 28, of Los Angeles was charged with battery. They were arrested early Friday and released on bail.

The Peppers went wild during the Wednesday show and began beating up their equipment, authorities said, and then Balcary and Smith jumped into the crowd. Balcary picked up a woman and began to spin her around on his shoulders, while Smith pulled her bathing suit to one side and began to slap her bottom. When they fell down, Balcary knelt on the woman's legs and yelled profanity at her before she cried for help and the band was escorted away.

CAPE CANAVERAL, FL (MARCH 16) UPI - A stranded $150 million satellite was brought to life by remote control and successfully boosted into a higher, long-term storage orbit Friday, giving engineers time to determine if a shuttle rescue is feasible.

Dean Burch, director general of the 118-nation International Telecommunications Satellite Organization, said the errant Intelsat 6 communications station was no longer in any danger of a fiery plunge back into Earth's atmosphere.

''Last night, Intelsat completed the maneuvers that we have been working on day and night for the last 48 hours to move the Intelsat 6 satellite from a relatively low orbit above the Earth into a higher parking orbit,'' he said in a statement.

The uninsured relay station ''can now be maintained over the coming months while Intelsat explores options for a rescue of the mission.''

Among the options under study: a shuttle rescue flight to either bring the spacecraft back to Earth or a mission to repair it in orbit, possibly by bolting on a new booster rocket to replace one that was lost after a malfunction.

Intelsat 6 was stranded in a useless, dangerously low orbit Wednesday after it failed to properly separate from the second stage of its $115 million Titan 3 rocket about 25 minutes after liftoff from the Cape Canaveral Air Force Station.

Intelsat ground controllers then had no choice but to command the satellite to separate instead from its on-board ''perigee kick motor,'' a solid-fuel rocket required to boost the spacecraft toward its operational altitude of 22,300 miles over the equator.

The next step in a space drama played out by remote control was to fire Intelsat 6's on-board liquid-fueled rockets to raise the relay station's altitude and prevent atmospheric friction from causing it to drop out of orbit.

Intelsat controllers succeeded Friday in raising the low point of the orbit from 104 miles to 161 miles and the high point from 224 miles to 276 miles up, high enough to made the satellite relatively immune to the effects of atmospheric friction for months to come.

''In completing the maneuvers that have culminated in a raising of the orbit, Intelsat spacecraft engineers have successfully turned on all systems on the satellite necessary for adjusting the spin rate and the attitude of the satellite,'' Burch said.

''The systems that have been tested to date on the satellite appear to be functioning satisfactorily.''

Without the maneuvers, the errant satellite would have fallen back to Earth around March 25.

NASA issued a statement late Thursday indicating the agency would consider a shuttle rescue flight if the satellite was boosted into a safe orbit. With the maneuvers Thursday and Friday, that requirement appeared to be met.

''NASA has not been approached for assistance in rescuing the Intelsat spacecraft, but it is following and is keenly interested in the results of this mission,'' the space agency said Thursday.

NASA Administrator Richard Truly was briefed on the satellite problem Thursday, and many space agency observers viewed the official statement as a clear sign the agency would seriously consider such a rescue mission if asked.

Intelsat 6 is the second in a series of five high-power relay stations built by Hughes Aircraft Co. of El Segundo, Calif., under a $700 million contract. Each satellite is capable of handling 120,000 simultaneous telephone calls and three color television channels.

The first Intelsat 6 was successfully launched last October by a French-built Ariane 4 rocket. The second in the series was launched Wednesday by a commercial Titan 3 rocket making only its second flight.

Regardless of who was to blame for the initial satellite separation problem, the failure could pose a major setback for the fledgling U.S. commercial rocket industry in general and Titan-builder Martin Marietta Astronautics Co. of Denver in particular.

NASA rescued or repaired four satellites during three pre-Challenger shuttle missions, and while many agency planners are skeptical about the chances of such a flight for Intelsat 6, others are hopeful such a mission can be mounted.

But a host of major problems would have to be resolved, including ways to stabilize the satellite and retrieve or repair it, not to mention fitting such a mission into the already-crowded shuttle flight schedule.

JOHANNESBURG, SOUTH AFRICA (MARCH 16) UPI - President Frederik de Klerk forged ahead with his reform program Friday, setting April 11 for historic talks with the African National Congress and unveiling plans to privatize state assets to help finance a $1.1 billion black development fund.

After a month of domestic turmoil that has left more than 200 dead and scores wounded, de Klerk announced he would meet Nelson Mandela and other senior ANC leaders to discuss obstacles standing in the way of formal power-sharing negotiations.

A simultaneous announcement came from the ANC's headquarters in exile in Lusaka saying Mandela, as ANC deputy president, would lead the delegation to Cape Town. It disclosed no details on the rest of the team of exiled and South African-based ANC officials.

The preliminary talks will be the first between the ANC leadership and a South African head of state since the National Party won power in 1948 and established the discriminatory laws known as apartheid to protect minority white interests.

De Klerk and his predecessor, Pieter W. Botha, both met Mandela while he was imprisoned but Mandela insisted he agreed to the meetings as an individual and declined to characterize them as negotiations.

The president told a Cape Town news conference the talks would focus on black demands the government meet long-stated conditions before formal negotiations to end South Africa's protracted racial conflict may begin. Key unmet demands include the release of all political prisoners and an end to a 45-month-old state of emergency.

De Klerk repeated he wanted to lift the emergency ''as soon as possible,'' but added: ''I cannot do so reasonably while these additional powers are needed to contain the situation with regard to law and order.''

In the wake of de Klerk's reform initiatives unveiled on Feb. 2 that included lifting a 30-year ban on the ANC and the release of Nelson Mandela from 27 year imprisonment on sabotage charges, authorities have reported a sharp upswing in unrest. More than 110 people have died this month alone, although many killings have been blamed on internecine strife and not necessarily on political motives.

Thousands of panic-stricken blacks fearing attacks by Zulu vigilantes fled their homes in townships south of Johannesburg overnight, took up weapons and erected roadblocks where vehicles that refused to stop were attacked. At least three people died, including a white motorist who drove more than a mile with a knife embedded in his skull to escape, state-run radio reported Friday.

De Klerk also announced Friday an additional allocation of $385 million to a special $769 million black development fund announced Wednesday in the annual budget that sharply boosted spending on black education.

The additional financing, de Klerk said, would come from privatization of state assets and had ''nothing at all'' to do with the forthcoming meeting with the ANC, which has maintained its nearly 40-year-old call for nationalization of key industries.

The assets were not identified, but the government has previously announced plans to sell off the state-run South African Airways, the power company Eskom, the railways and other transport services.

Of the fund, one-third will be administred by the government, the remainder as a trust ''outside the direct ambit of the government so that private sector and other institutions in South Africa as well as abroad may also contribute to it,'' de Klerk said.

De Klerk named Jan Steyn, a former Supreme Court judge and highly respected honorary chairman of South Africa's Urban Foundation, to administer the trust.

''We want to ensure that what is done with this fund must have the support of the overwhelming majority of the people in this country,'' said de Klerk, whose budget this year allocated more than 40 percent to social programs and trimmed defense spending by nearly 15 percent in real terms.

''The trust must decided upon its priorities after proper consulation so that they address the needs as the needs are felt by the community and not as the needs are perceived by those who are not in need,'' de Klerk said.

(MARCH 16) UPI - 0South Africa's government will meet with the African National Congress next month for the first time in 42 years. President Frederik de Klerk today announced that formal talks with Nelson Mandela and other senior leaders of the A-N-C will be held on April 11th in Cape Town. The talks will focus on obstacles standing in the way of formal power-sharing negotiations. A two-sentence statement announced the talks and said they will include A-N-C officials from inside and outside South Africa.

MIAMI BEACH, FL (MARCH 16) UPI - A proposed federal authorization bill for the supercollider super conductor would limit overall spending on the project to $7.5 billion, a lawmaker told scientists and industrialists Friday.

Rep. Robert Roe, D-N.J., chairman of the House Science, Space and Technology Committee, unveiled the authorization bill at the 1990 International Industrial Symposium on the Supercollider.

The $7.5 billion limit is $500 million less than the Energy Department estimated last week as the total cost of the atom smasher.

Roe told the 700 industrialists, scientists and educators at the symposium he plans to present his bill to his committee next week.

Roe's bill places a $5 billion ceiling on federal expenditures for the project and proposes allowing state funds, private donations and international investment to make up the difference.

Roe said opponents of the superconducting super collider who feel the money would be better spent on Medicare, Medicaid and other social programs were expected to try to reduce spending for the project.

''What's important is to get the (financial) dimensions now,'' he said, adding that without the authorization bill, there will be annual fights in Congress to keep the project going.

The authorization bill also would provide protection to the state of Texas which has committed $1 billion to the project.

The Energy Department Thursday accepted the design of the superconducting super collider, clearing the way for Texas to buy 17,000 acres of land as the site of the atom smasher, which could help scientists better understand the nature of energy and the atom.

The government approval of the design was necessary before Texas could begin buying the land needed for the 54-mile long, underground atomic race track. The ring would slant into northwestern Ellis County, Texas, and encircle the city of Waxahachie.

The supercollider would hurl protons at the speed of light along the underground circular track where they would crash into one another, breaking into subnuclear particles, extending scientists' understanding of the atom and the strong and weak electromagnetic forces that hold the atom together.

Among the alternative funding options Roe listed were industrial donations and university contributions. He also proposed accepting offers from major hotel chains to provide the housing needed at the site for visiting scientists.

Roe urged those attending the symposium to lobby hard in Congress for the research instrument.

''We have to convince Congress the supercollider super conductor is a major priority of the United States,'' he said. ''You have to go to Congress and say this is what it's going to do in my field in my state.''

Other big ticket scientific projects competing for federal dollars are a proposed space station, an expedition to Mars and fusion research.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 16) UPI - Vice President Dan Quayle, pressing the U.S.-backed Contra forces to lay down their arms, met with Nicaraguan rebel leaders Friday and said, ''Now is the time to stop the fighting and begin the peace process.''

Quayle said demobilization should begin now and not wait until the April 25 inauguration of Violeta Chamorro as Nicaragua's new president. He also said ''an impartial third party'' should help oversee the operation.

Officials who accompanied the vice president on a trip to Latin America this past week presented an American plan to use United Nations peace-keeping forces to insure the security of the Contras when they disband and to keep track of the government transition. Nicaraguan officials seemed receptive to the idea, the officials said.

The Contras, who number about 12,000 and camp out in Honduras, have said they will disband after Chamorro takes power. But the United States wants the process to begin as soon as possible and also wants assurances from the Sandinista government that unarmed rebels will be safe.

''Commander Franklin,'' one of three Contra leaders who met with Quayle Friday, said during a picture-taking session, ''What we need is total demilitarization where we would go back to Nicaragua and become a labor force that would help aid in the development of the country.''

Speaking through an interpreter, Franklin said the Contras ''have the firm position that was just expressed by the vice president.''

Quayle told reporters: ''Now is the time to stop the fighting and begin the peace process. We don't have to wait until April 25. We should begin now.''

The vice president returned to Washington early Friday from his six-nation tour, during which Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega assured Quayle that he will turn over power to the Chamorro government, including control of the military, as scheduled.

Chamorro defeated Ortega in elections Feb. 25, which followed nearly a decade of war waged by the CIA-created Contras.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said that, during a telephone call Thursday, Chamorro thanked President Bush for the $300 million aid package he proposed earlier this week.

Quayle said, ''We support Mrs. Chamorro. She wants not only the democratic resistance to lay down their arms, but the Sandinistas to give up their arms as well.''

''Our challenge now is to work on the transition,'' he said.

The vice president noted that the ''Contras don't trust the Sandinistas, and that the Sandinistas don't trust the Contras. We have to bridge that gap of mistrust.''

(MARCH 16) UPI - A government report says wholesale prices stabilized in February because energy costs dropped. Unseasonably warm weather sent home heating oil prices down 30-point-two percent, to the lowest level since last August. Excluding volatile food and energy costs, producer prices rose four-tenths of one percent. The Labor Department says that during the past 12 months, inflation at the producer level has risen five-point-one percent.

The Commerce Departments reports that housing starts plunged seven percent last month, primarly due to a sharp drop in construction of new apartment buildings. The annual rate of new housing construction stood at one and one-half-Million last month. The February drop follows a 24-point-seven percent gain during the January warm spell. New housing permits in February also declined, falling a record 25 percent, to an annual rate of one-point-three-Million.

GENEVA (MARCH 16) UPI - Dr. Jonathan Mann, American head of the World Health Organization's Global Program on AIDS, abruptly resigned Friday in a policy dispute with agency Director-General Hiroshi Nakajima of Japan.

Mann said in a letter there were too many differences between himself and Nakajima over running the $100-million-a-year program. Nakajima was appointed director-general in 1988.

Mann said he had ''loved working in WHO'' and he and his division ''are justly proud of our accomplishments.''

The 42-year-old specialist in communicable diseases also said he has ''tremendous respect and administration'' for the U.N. health agency and its ''many remarkable and dedicated men and women.''

''Yet it has become increasingly evident, during the past two years, that a great variance exists on a series of issues which I consider critical for the Global AIDS Strategy and the Global Program on AIDS, between my position and that of the director-general,'' Mann wrote.

''Under these circumstances, I have decided to resign as director of the Global Program of AIDS, effective as of the end of my current contract in June 1990,'' he said. Assistants close to Mann said he handed his letter of resignation to Nakajima and then took part in a ceremony launching a special ''Fight AIDS Worldwide'' U.N. postage stamps.

WHO officials said privately that Nakajima wanted to dilute the considerable organizational autonomy that Mann had won for the AIDS Program within WHO and that was a basic cause of friction between the two men.

Calling Mann a ''powerful force for humanity in the epidemic,'' Dr. June Osborn, head of the U.S. National Commission on AIDS, Friday said she was ''extremely distressed'' by his departure.

Osborn, dean of the University of Michigan School of Public Health and a member of a global commission that advises WHO on AIDS, said she has no idea who will be named to replace Mann at the health organization.

Word about Mann's sudden resignation quickly spread through WHO's Geneva headquarters and about 150 members of his staff applauded and cheered as he left the ceremony.

''There is no doubt that he chose today to resign to make a bigger impact because of the new stamps,'' one ranking WHO official said.

People close to Mann said there were many differences with Nakajima on raising funds and how best to spend them, as well as on general approaches to fighting the spread of acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

Born July 30, 1947 in Boston, Mann campaigned strongly against all forms of discrimination against people with AIDS or carrying the HIV virus, which causes the deadly disease.

He worked previously with the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta and established an AIDS program in the African nation of Zaire.

Mann was appointed first director of the WHO Global Program on AIDS in 1986 and quickly built up a staff of more than 200 people at Geneva headquarters and in the field.

WHO also began collecting figures from its 166 member countries and started issuing monthly ''updates'' on known cases worldwide - 222,740 by the end of February although the true number is believed to be two or three times higher.

In his letters to Nakajima and to his staff, Mann said he would continue to ''fight against disease, ignorance and prejudice.''

''This goal can be pursued in many ways,'' he said. ''I have not yet decided what work I will undertake next,'' he said.

NEW YORK (MARCH 16) UPI - The Office of Thrift Supervision put troubled Nassau Federal Savings and Loan Association of Brooklyn, N.Y., into receivership with the Resolution Trust Corp. Friday and created a federal mutual association to take over its deposits and manage its assets and liabilities.

The Resolution Trust Corp., or RTC, created by Congress to run the national savings and loan bailout plan, was made conservator of the new institution, called the Nassau Savings & Loan Association, F.A.

An RTC statement said Nassau Savings will maintain normal business hours and operations under an RTC-appointed managing agent while the RTC negotiates a permanent resolution for the troubled thrift.

Managing agents under RTC conservatorships are responsible for minimizing operating losses, limiting asset growth and ensuring operations are conducted in a safe and sound manner. The work to conserve assets and preserve banking services to deposit and loan customers.

The RTC statement said Nassau Federal had assets of about $316.6 million and deposits of $302.3 million in 46,069 accounts. Deposits continue to be federally insured, it said. The RTC was established under the Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery and Enforcement Act of 1989.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 16) UPI - The rates on 30-year fixed mortgages increased by 0.05 percentage points this week while adjustable-rate mortgages were also up 0.05 percentage points, the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. said Friday.

The agency, which buys mortgages from lenders and packages them as securities for sale to investors, said interest on fixed-rate loans increased to 10.34 percent this week from 10.29 percent the week before.

Adjustable-rate mortgages averaged 8.55 percent, up from 8.50 percent last week, the agency said.

The fixed-rate average is for a 30-year loan covering 80 percent of a home's cost. The average adjustable-rate mortgage also is for 30 years, but for 75 percent of the home price.

BONN, WEST GERMANY (MARCH 16) UPI - Chancellor Helmut Kohl's government came under pressure Friday from the prime ministers of the West German states who appealed for swift action to halt the flood of East Germans.

Even prime ministers who are members of Kohl's Christian Democratic Party joined the heads of states ruled by Social Democrats to urge an end to special treatment for the immigrants as a means of discouraging East Germans wanting a better life in the West.

Ernst Albrecht, the Christian Democratic prime minister of the state of Lower Saxony, told a meeting of the Bundesrat, or the upper house of Parliament, that all the refugee camps are filled to capacity and many overcrowded.

Albrecht said he believed the federal government, which is reluctant to take action, does not realize how urgent the problem is in the states and local communities, where opposition to the immigrants is growing.

East Germans are immigrating to West Germany, where they get special treatment, benefits and financial aid, at the rate of 2,000 a day. So far this year 138,000 have crossed the border to the West.

Kohl has said he wants speedy unification to slow the movement. But the states fear it would continue even after the East German elections scheduled for Sunday.

The West German Interior Ministry has announced contingency plans to reduce the benefits, but said they would be introduced only after the situation in East Germany has stabilized.

BUCHAREST, ROMANIA (MARCH 16) UPI - The secret police under ousted ruler Nicolai Ceausescu intercepted more than 50,000 pieces of mail a week at a processing center where steaming machines and X-rays were used to monitor the contents.

Journalists on a tour Friday of part of a warehouse in southeastern Bucharest operated by the Telecommunications and Postal Ministry were shown a sorting center, steaming room, X-ray devices and several other rooms filled with equipment used to monitor the mail of Romania's 23 million citizens.

Maj. Gen. Nicolae Cerbo, deputy of the Romanian army's Signal Corps heading an investigation of the operations, said 100 to 120 people worked under the direction of the secret police.

''Everybody was specialized in a certain field,'' he said.

Cerbo said they opened, inspected and copied about 10 percent of the 50,000 to 60,000 pieces of mail that passed through it each week.

The mail was brought by train, truck and other routes to the center and had to be processed within 24 hours of its arrival, Cerbo said.

The well-lit processing rooms lead off from a dreary main hallway, darkened by contrast as a result of Ceausescu's drastic nationwide energy restrictions.

The walls needed paint, although one room had two small impressionist prints.

Dead plants throughout the rooms testified to the fact that its operations had been abandoned for a while. The December 1989 revolution resulted in the ouster and execution of Ceausescu.

The processing center categorized all letters by name and address, and the Securitate singled out targets for surveillance via individual memos.

Each suspect letter - about 10 or 12 of every 100 - was put into a large black plastic envelope that also recorded the subject's attitude toward the regime. Then it went to the steaming room, where letters were placed under special machines to gently open the envelopes.

''They found it was much easier to open letters from colder, drier climates like Sweden than, say, Africa, due to the moisture and composition of the glue,'' Cerbu said.

Parcels were checked in another room by X-ray, magnetic devices and other means.

Cerbu said only the Securitate knows how many subjects' mails were monitored.

The center was not computerized.

With regard to electronic surveillance, he said the elaborate network used for telephone monitoring - the subject of another inspection tour for journalists recently - has been completely dismantled.

''I can state no telephone in Romania is listened to,'' he said.

He was asked whether authorities would heed the opposition's demand that the equipment be destroyed.

''We shouldn't destroy the equipment, but put it to a more natural use,'' he said, without elaborating - a response that probably will not reassure many Romanians used to 45 years of living in a police state.

CHICAGO (MARCH 16) UPI - Grain futures were mostly higher in quiet trading but soybeans were lower at the close on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Soybeans were pressured by profit-taking and the weakness in soybean meal. However, losses in soybeans were limited by a late rally in soybean oil. Indications of tight domestic supplies of oil sent prices to their highest level since last summer, as did hopes of near-term export sales.

The activity was choppy in soybeans as traders watched economic situation in Brazil. The nearby March contract, which goes off the board next Wednesday was down 4 1/4 cents at the final bell.

Corn was moderately higher on a pick-up in buying activity, although gains were limited by increased country movement. Commercials were on both sides of the corn market.

March wheat rallied on the sale of 300,000 tons of export bonus wheat to China and gained 5 cents, while the new-crop was pressured by continued favorable weather conditions in the Wheat Belt.

At the close, corn was up 1/2 to 1 1/2, soybeans down 4 1/4 to up 1, wheat up 5 to off 1 1/2 and oats up 1 1/4 to 2.

(MARCH 16) UPI - A Greyhound employee was arrested Friday in Connecticut for allegedly firing a single gunshot into a bus approaching Hartford with its passengers, state police said.

The arrest in the sometimes violent and always tense 2-week-old strike came just as stalled talks were to resume in Tucson, Ariz., Saturday.

In Chattanooga, Tenn., police were escorting some Greyhound buses because of a sniper shooting Thursday. In Los Angeles, a police bomb squad exploded a suspicious suitcase full of clothes and an alarm clock after a telephone bomb threat to the terminal.

In Phoenix, Ariz., early Friday a shot was fired at a Greyhound bus minutes after it pulled out of the downtown terminal, police spokesman Leo Speliopoulos said.

The driver reported to police that she saw ''a muzzle flash'' from a passing car, described as an early 1970s Lincoln Continental. No one was injured, but the driver turned the bus around and returned to the terminal two blocks away.

Speliopoulos said the front right side of the windshield had ''a small pinhole'' in it. ''We surmise it was made by a bullet, but we don't know for sure.''

Connecticut State Police early Friday arrested Roger D. Cawtra, 44, of Stratford for allegedly firing a single shot at a New York-to-Boston Greyhound bus March 12 on Interstate 84. The bullet, fired from a passing car, lodged in the luggage compartment on the driver's side. No one was injured in the incident.

Cawtra was picked up at his home without incident and was held on $25,000 bond for a hearing in West Hartford Superior Court. Judge Allen W. Smith increased the bond to $100,000 and transferred the case to Hartford Superior Court for a hearing on March 27.

A Greyhound spokesman in Dallas said Cawtra - who was on medical leave for a neck injury - faces dismissal.

''If we conclude in our own investigation, separate from whatever the court does, that he caused that damage to our bus, then that is grounds for termination,'' Greyhound spokesman George Gravley said.

Cawtra was charged with first-degree criminal mischief, reckless endangerment, unlawful discharge of a firearm and unlawful discharge of a firearm on a public highway.

''We continue to believe these acts of terrorism are being done by a few people with serious problems,'' Gravley said, ''and do not reflect the vast amount of Greyhound employees.''

The extra police protection in Tennessee was offered when a Greyhound bus was struck by a bullet Thursday, a day after another shooting incident about six miles away.

Neither the driver nor any of the 43 passengers was hurt.

A bomb threat was telephoned to a Greyhound maintenance yard in Los Angeles Thursday night. The caller said there was a bomb in the lobby and personnel had 20 minutes to get out of the area, police Sgt. Tom Jones said.

A search of the facility turned up an unclaimed suitcase in a bus cargo area, Jones said.

''Due to the labor problem they pulled the suitcase out,'' he said. ''They heard some noises coming from inside the suitcase.''

The bomb squad was called and detonated the suitcase in the yard about 11 p.m.

''Somebody's clothes and alarm clock got blown all over the parking lot,'' he said. No explosives were in the suitcase.

Meanwhile, P. Anthony Lannie, Greyhound's executive vice president and chief labor negotiator, said contract talks would begin Saturday in Tucson.

Those talks were to be preceded Friday by separate meetings in Tucson with Bernard DeLury, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service Gravley said.

Representatives of the Amalgamated Council of Greyhound Local Unions and the nation's largest intercity bus line were to meet separately with DeLury to establish ground rules and discuss procedures for contract bargaining, Gravley said.

The strike, which began March 2, has been marred by violence and, including Thursday night's incident, at least nine incidents of gunfire involving Greyhound buses. One striker has been killed since the bitter walkout began.

NEW YORK (MARCH 16) UPI - An eyewitness in the killing of a black teenager who decided at the last minute not to testify against his friends was charged Friday with second-degree murder in the slaying.

John Vento, 21, was charged with intentional murder and showing a depraved indifference to human life in the August 1989 slaying of Yusuf Hawkins.

Prosectors say Vento reneged on a deal to testify against the others charged in the attack. His decision forced a postponement in the trial, and was seen as a major blow to the prosecution's efforts to build a solid cases against the seven others charged in the case.

Vento was to be arraigned on the indictment in state Supreme Court in Brooklyn before Justice Thaddeus Owens.

Hawkins and three companions had gone to the predominantly white Brooklyn neighborhood of Bensonhurst to look at a used car when they were attacked by a mob of baseball bat-wielding white youths.

The whites apparently mistook them for friends of a white neighborhood woman who had reportedly spurned one of the attackers to date blacks and Hispanics. Prosecutors say one of the attackers, Joseph Fama, pulled a gun and shot Hawkins dead.

The Hawkins slaying has been termed the worst case of racial violence in New York City since the December 1986 Howard Beach incident in which a black man was killed when a white mob chased him onto a highway in Queens.

Hynes insisted his case was not hurt by Vento's decision to renege, though he admitted that prosecutors would have to change strategy.

''I'm not so sure I'd give him the same deal now (as offered by former District Attorney Elizabeth Holtzman) - given his attitude,'' Hynes added.

Six others have been charged with murder in the case and a seventh was charged with assault.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 16) UPI - The State Department praised East German authorities Friday for inviting representatives from the United States and the other 34 signers of the Helsinki Agreement to observe March 18 parlimentary elections.

Independent observers attended elections in Poland and Hungary last year, but East Germany is the first emerging democracy in Europe to invite all Helsinki Agreement nations, said State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler.

''A number of American observers will be in place to benefit from these new procedures, including members of Congress,'' Tutwiler said.

Congessional observers will be: Sen. Paul Sarbanes, D-Md.; Rep. John Bryant, D-Texas; Rep. Jack Buechner, R-Mo.; Rep. Bill Richardson, D-N.M.; Rep. James Sensenbrenner, R-Wis. and Rep. David Skaggs, D-Colo.

Tutwiler said U.S. ambassador to East Germany Richard Barkley and embassy personnel also will observe the elections.

The Helsinki Agreement, also known as the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe, is an agreement of 35 nations on human rights and political issues in Europe.

''We commend this initiative of the German Democratic Republic and hope other ... states in the areas holding elections in the next few months will follow suit,'' Tutwiler said.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 16) UPI - Recent economic reports indicate that inflation's steady acceleration has been tempered, at least temporarily, while the nation's overall economic activity remains sluggish, economists said Friday.

"The aggregate economy is plodding along and that's enough to keep inflation in check but not enough to eliminate it," said Robert Dederick, chief economist at the Northern Trust Co. in Chicago.

"We avoided a recession seemingly, but (the economy) is at a stall," Dederick said. "This has been the case for the past several months. It's a long, hard slog bringing inflation down in the absence of a recession."

The Labor Department reported Friday that prices on the wholesale level remained stable in February after rising 1.8 percent the month before. At the same time, the Commerce Department said housing starts fell seven percent during the month after rising 24.7 percent in January. New housing permits also tumbled sharply last month, falling a record 25 percent to an annual rate of 1.3 million from 1.7 million in January.

The Federal Reserve also reported that industrial production rose 0.6 percent during the month after slipping one percent in January. Much of the advance was attributed to increased production of motor vehicles, but this gain was five percent below the pace of vehicle production in December.

"The economic statistics in the last couple of week have shown some improvement but the rate of economic growth remains very sluggish," said

Mickey Levy, chief economist at First Fidelity Bancorp in Philadelphia.

Levy said last month's increase in industrial production brought the nation's factory output up to October 1989 levels and have shown little change during the past 11 months.

"The economy is in a little better shape that three months ago, consumption has picked up some and inventories are lower, but we will experience a gradual but substandard growth in economic activity" he said.

David Seiders, chief economist for the National Association of Homebuilders, predicted new home construction "will fall off in March" and remain down for the remainder of the year despite a strong start.

The annual rate of new housing construction in the United States stood at 1.5 million in February compared to 1.6 million in January, about the same as February 1989.

In the manufacturing sector, a rebound in the production of motor vehicles and auto parts triggered a 0.6 percent increase in industrial production in February after a decline of one percent in January. Manufacturing output increased by 0.7 percent, the Federal Reserve said.

In another report, the Federal Reserve said America's factories, mines and utilities were operating at 82.3 percent of capacity in February, an increase of 0.3 percent over January's 82 percent.

The increase in utilization also came mostly from an increase in the operating rate for auto and truck assembly plants after most had shut down for part of January, the Federal Reserve said. "Utilization rates in most other industries, as well as in mining and utilities, declined in February " the Fed added.

Prices at the producer level, which indicate pricing trends at the consumer level, stabilized in February due to declining energy costs after climbing 1.8 percent in January, the Labor Department reported.

Unseasonably warm winter weather in much of the country helped push the often volatile energy prices down five percent, after a 13.6 percent gain the month before, while food prices rose at a slower rate, according to the department's Producer Price Index. Excluding food and energy prices, producer prices moved up 0.4 percent during the month. Economists welcomed the report as an indication that the growth of inflation on the wholesale level has been tempered.

"It's not a courageous prediction to suggest we'll have a continuation of what we've seen for the balance of the year," said Dirk von Dongen, of the National Association of Wholesaler-Distributors.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 16) UPI - Paul Steinle, the president of United Press International who for the last 25 months directed a major reorganization of the wire service, announced Friday he will resign March 31 to start a media company.

UPI Vice Chairman Joseph Taussig will take on the additional duties of president of the worldwide news agency until a replacement is selected for Steinle, 51, perhaps by the summer, Taussig said.

In a message to UPI employees, Steinle said: ''Because of the rebuilding process in which everyone in this company has participated during the past two years, I am confident that UPI will continue to grow and prosper.''

UPI reported a ''modest'' profit in the fourth quarter of 1989, Taussig said, after the news agency endured millions of dollars in losses over the past three decades. Taussig declined to release financial figures.

Steinle said he will remain on the UPI board of directors.

''Since the UPI-2000 business plan was launched two years ago, because of the efforts and dedication of every member of this organization, we can all point with pride to the fact that United Press International has been restored to stability,'' he said.

''Through team effort, a valuable journalistic tradition has been preserved and strengthened.''

Steinle, a Vietnam War radio correspondent and former president of Financial News Network, took the helm at UPI in February 1988 after New York-based Infotechnology Inc. assumed control of the beleaguered company from Mexican media baron Mario Vazquez Rana.

''On Paul's watch, UPI business systems were rebuilt, a new management team was assembled, a well-defined business plan launched and the staff directed toward the priorities of UPI renewal,'' said Dr. Earl Brian, chairman of UPI and Infotechnology.

Working with Brian and Infotechnology management, Steinle helped devise an austerity program to slash the life-threatening losses at the news agency through a series of layoffs of reporters, editors, photographers and communications personnel, as well as through other cost-cutting measures.

After the financial surgery and following rebuilding of the agency's resources and staff, ''the UPI of 1990s is adapting our services to meet the changing needs of our media clients,'' Steinle said.

''At the same time, we remain competitive: quickly and accurately reporting the trauma of earthquakes, combat in Panama, turbulence in the world economy, and the stunning historical events in Eastern Europe, South Africa and Central and South America - all in the best tradition of UPI journalism,'' he said.

Steinle said he was ''departing to pursue a personal, professional goal I have been nurturing for a number of years,'' to start a news and information production company called Steinle Communications.

He said it will ''present informative, reality-based video programming to a wide audience.'' Brian said Infotechnology has pledged to invest in the venture.

''When a person has an itch to start a new company, a person has to scratch it,'' Taussig said. ''It's the American dream.''

In 1986, Steinle was a member of the group that put together Brian's first bid to buy UPI, when the news agency, founded in 1907 by publisher E.W. Scripps, was emerging from Chapter 11 bankruptcy proceedings.

Instead, the bankruptcy court decided to permit the sale of UPI to Vazquez Rana.

Although the Mexican publisher aimed to restore the agency to its past glory, after a nearly two-year struggle against mounting losses he opted to give Infotechology control of UPI, which the firm eventually purchased outright.

In his message to employees, Steinle recalled his decision to join UPI and become its eighth president in less than six years.

''An author writing about career changes asked me in 1988 why I would choose at that time in my career to 'tackle' UPI. I told her - sincerely, but rather presumptuously - that I thought it was time to give something back to the profession, an industry that had given me so many opportunities,'' he said.

''In fact, I have been the main beneficiary of the past two years.

''Since working with the dedicated staff here in Washington and in bureaus around the world and since coming to understand more about UPI's contribution to our media, both in the United States and worldwide, I better appreciate the important competitive contribution UPI makes,'' Steinle said.

''To have been a small part of sustaining the UPI tradition and spirit has been deeply rewarding.''

WASHINGTON (MARCH 16) UPI - The Supreme Court, indicating its willingness to move quickly on the revived flag-burning issue, ordered Friday that legal documents in two cases be filed by March 26.

The court's action came on a motion by the Justice Department for ''expedited review'' of the constitutionality of the Flag Protection Act of 1989 - passed by Congress last year to reverse a high court ruling.

In a brief order Friday, the court said that written arguments on the case should be received by the court before noon March 26. That would enable the court to decide the case before its summer recess, assuming the jstices agree to hear it.

However, the court gave no other indication of its intentions and the case could be put off until the 1990-1991 term beginning in October. The court also could simply affirm court rulings that struck down the law without granting oral arguments.

Federal judges in both Seattle and Washington have thrown out cases of people charge under the law, citing last year's 5-4 Supreme Court ruling in a case from Texas that burning the flag as a political protest is protected by the First Amendment guarantee of free speech.

When the high court ruled in that case last June, President Bush began a push for a constitutional amendment to protect the flag. Instead, Congress passed the new law, despite arguments from Bush and others that any such law would be struck down.

The latest round of the controversy was sparked in October 1989, when demonstrators protesting the new law burned flags outside a post office in Seattle, but a judge threw out the case, finding the law unconstitutional.

On March 5, a federal judge in the District of Columbia reached a similar decision in a case dealing with an Oct. 30, 1989, flag burning on the steps of the Capitol.

The new legal battle put the administration in the unusual position of defending before the high court a law that it initially opposed. Several lawmakers have said that, if the Supreme Court strikes down the Flag Protection Act, they will renew the effort to amend the Constitution.

HOUSTON (MARCH 16) UPI - Aran Energy of Dublin hopes to turn a quick profit from projects in the Gulf of Mexico, executives said Friday as the company officially opened its North American subsidiary headquarters.

"We're concentrating on the Gulf coast, onshore and offshore. Natural gas is what we're looking for first and foremost," said Archie Thompson, president of Aran Energy Corp. "We will take oil prospects."

"Aran has recognized the void in the United States that is being left by the major oil companies that are looking internationally," for large offshore reserves, he said.

"We're completely looking for return on investment, looking for opportunities really to drill. We're not looking to go out and pick up a block and sit on it for three or four years. We're very cash-flow driven," Thompson said.

Michael J. Whelan, chairman of the Houston-based Aran Energy and chief executive of Aran Energy in Dublin, said the Gulf offers better opportunities for short-term returns than the North Sea where it takes longer for reserves to come on stream.

Most of the parent company's major operations are offshore Ireland and Great Britain. Aran plans to attend the Gulf of Mexico lease sale in New Orleans next week as a joint venture participant with other companies, Thompson said.

Aran actually opened its Houston office in November, but the company wanted to wait until some projects were under way before making any formal announcements, Thompson said.

"We wanted to get our feet on the ground and get involved in some deals. We wanted to be up and running. We're drilling some wells," he said. "The timing with St. Patrick's Day makes it a good time" for the official opening.

Thompson said he has an exploration budget in the range of $5 million to $6 million, which he hopes will pay for drilling about 15 wells this year.

Aran Energy so far is involved with three offshore wells and three onshore wells, concentrating its efforts onshore in Louisiana and offshore both Louisiana and Texas.

HARTFORD CITY, IN (MARCH 16) UPI - BP Chemicals, of Cleveland, announced Friday it will close the company's Hartford City commercial composites plant May 15. The closing will mean the elimination of 142 jobs, the British Petroleum Co. PLC subsidiary said.

"The decline of the current automotive markets and the lack of growth projected for products out of this facility necessitated the decision," said John Donnelly, general manager of the commercial composites business.

The plant produces sheet molding compound components for General Motors

Corp., including the company's Cadillac, Buick, Oldsmobile, Chevrolet, and Pontiac division. Components include rear-end panels, spoilers, and decorative trim parts.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 16) UPI - Defense Secretary Dick Cheney announced Friday that the long-awaited U.S.-Philippine negotiations on the future of the strategic U.S. military bases in the Philippines will begin in Manila next month.

''Hopefully, we'll be able to reach an agreement that will allow us to continue to use those facilities, but obviously if the Filipinos do not want us there or if we're unable to conclude an acceptable agreement from our standpoint, we'll depart,'' Cheney said.

Singapore is believed to be the most likely alternative for U.S. bases if the United States pulls out of the Philippines.

While answering questions at a National Newspaper Association's Government Affairs Conference, Cheney casually announced the start of the U.S.-Philippine talks with the statement: ''And we will begin the negotiations next month.''

The Pentagon later confirmed his remark, saying the negotiations will begin in mid-April. ''It's the week after Easter (April 15), but I don't think a date has been set yet,'' a defense official said.

The United States maintains two of its largest military bases in the world in the Philippines - Clark Air Base and Subic Bay Naval Base - and also has four smaller defense facilities. Their leases expire in September 1991.

The United States has argued that the bases in the Philippines are necessary to balance the Soviet naval and military presence in the Pacific.

The negotiations are expected to be long and hard-fought. Leftists in the Philippines want the 18,000 U.S. troops out while Philippine President Corazon Aquino is believed to want substantially more money for new leases.

Aquino is talking tough even though U.S. military support prevented her from being overthrown last December. When rebel soldiers attempted a coup, U.S. jets from Clark - under orders from President Bush - flew sorties over Manila, effectively keeping the planes of mutinous pilots on the ground.

The Reagan administration agreed in October 1988 to a two-year $962 million aid package for use of the bases. But Congress later sliced $96 million from that, angering the Philippine government and people.

When Cheney visited the Philippines last month on an official trip, he was snubbed by Aquino and burned in effigy.

''It's obviously not true that I'm Corazon Aquino's favorite defense secretary,'' Cheney joked when asked about the snub during his appearance before the newspaper publishers.

''The situation in the Philippines is a difficult one. ... We have, I think, an interest in continuing at Subic and Clark Air Base if we can,'' he said. ''... From our standpoint there is a limit to what we can afford to pay in order to continue to use those facilities.

''I tried to convey to them, while I was there, that Congress is not likely to approve an exorbitant price for our staying in the Philippines at a time when we're in the midst of closing 120-some bases here in the United States. That's not a viable proposition,'' he said.

STRASBOURG, FRANCE (MARCH 16) UPI - NATO commanders for central Europe, citing the changes in Eastern Europe, canceled maneuvers code-named ''Eagle'' that were scheduled to begin Monday and last until March 28, military sources said Friday.

The war games normally are held every two years, grouping units from Britain, France, the Benelux countries, West Germany and the United States.

Allied command for Central Europe canceled the Eagle maneuvers ''because of the situation in Eastern Europe,'' the sources said.

Some French officers involved in up to 20 months of preparations for the maneuvers expressed irritation at the change, which evidently was because of East German elections being held March 18.

The sources said the decision was made in response to pressure from Bonn.

France is a member of NATO, but does not belong to the integrated command of NATO.

(MARCH 16) UPI - A date has been set for formal talks between South Africa's government and the once-outlawed African National Congress. President Frederik de Klerk says he will sit down with Nelson Mandela and Iraq today organized anti-British demonstrations in response to Britain's retaliation for Baghdad's execution of a London-based journalist. The British ambassador to Iraq returned to London this morning. Ambassador Harold Walker said that relations between the two countries were dealt a ''terrible blow.''

Brazilian President Fernando Collor de Mello unveiled a package of drastic stabilization measures designed to halt hyper-inflation in Brazil. Today, just one day after his inauguration, he ordered a price rollback, new taxes and a new monetary unit called the crucero.

Several of the nation's economists expressed satisfaction with a government report showing that wholesale prices held steady in February, after rising one-point-eight percent the month before. Data Resources economist Cynthia Latta of Lexington, Massachusetts, says the report shows that inflation clearly is NOT getting worse.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 16) UPI - Secretary of State James Baker will visit black revolutionary Nelson Mandela and reformist South African President F.W. de Klerk during a trip to Africa next week, the State Department said Friday.

Baker will be the first secretary of state to visit South Africa since 1978, and his trip is designed to ''support the evolution in South Africa toward a non-racial democracy'' through negotiations, said State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler.

Baker, who leaves Sunday, will first go to Windhoek, Namibia, to attend ceremonies marking the independence of the southwest African nation from rule by South Africa.

While in Windhoek, Baker will meet Mandela, the leader of the African National Congress who spent more than 27 years in prison. De Klerk ordered Mandela's release on Feb. 11 as part of the process of pulling back apartheid, the institutional system of racial separation that denies black South Africans basic political rights.

The United States played a key role in ending the civil war in Namibia, the former German colony ruled by South Africa after World War I, including the withdrawal of Cuban and South African troops.

''We view this trip as an opportunity to demonstrate our support for the birth of a new and democratic nation in Africa,'' Tutwiler said. ''Namibia can serve as a model for multi-party democracy in the region, and for peaceful negotiated settlements.''

During a stay of little more than two days in Namibia, Baker is expected to meet with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze, foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher of West Germany, and President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt.

Baker is to go to Cape Town, South Africa, on Thursday for a brief visit with de Klerk, who has legalized the African National Congress and agreed to talks with Mandela starting April 11 to arrange negotiations to end apartheid and bring the nation's 26 million blacks and 5 million whites into a new political structure.

Baker will meet with President Mobutu Sese Seko of Zaire in Kinshasa before returning to Washington on March 23.

WENDOVER, UT (MARCH 16) UPI - An Air Force F-16 Fighter jet crashed Friday in the western Utah desert during a routine test flight, but the pilot of the single-seater aircraft ejected safely, authorities said.

The plane went down about 9:30 a.m. (MST) 5 miles northeast of Wendover, Utah, on the Utah-Nevada state line and about 120 miles west of Salt Lake City, said Hill Air Force Base spokeswoman Lt. Col. Portia McCracken.

Tooele County Sheriff's Sgt. Joe Bradshaw said, ''the pilot ejected and there's no injuries to him. There's no injuries to anyone.''

Bradshaw said the pilot, whose identity was not immediately release, was taken to the Wendover air field for debriefing.

The F-16 had been assigned to the northern Utah base for routine maintenance, McCracken said. ''It was on a routine test flight following maintenance when that crash occurred.''

An Air Force board of officers will conduct an investigation, she said.

NEW YORK (MARCH 16) UPI - Baseball owners Friday delivered their latest proposal for ending the 30-day spring training lockout to the offices of the Players Association.

Both sides indicated the proposal was sent and received shortly before 3 p.m. EST. Neither side has announced any formal negotiating sessions. Owners negotiator Chuck O'Connor had said Thursday the sides were to have met at 1 p.m., but it remains unclear why talks did not occur.

No formal talks have taken place since March 7, when the sides exchanged proposals on the key issue of salary arbitration. O'Connor refused to give specifics of the latest pitch but called it a ''wall-to-wall proposal.''

''It is not just another proposal,'' O'Connor said. ''We are holding nothing back. We have put together what we believe to be the most generous economic package in the history of this collective bargaining.''

O'Connor did not disagree when asked if the proposal would be a ''deal-maker,'' but officials of the Players' Association sounded skeptical.

''We anxiously await what he's talking about,'' said Lauren Rich, assistant general counsel for the union.

Gene Orza, the union's associate general counsel, was even more cautious.

''Beware of Greeks bearing gifts,'' he said.

Both management and players have rented briefing rooms in separate hotels. The commissioner's office gave no indication when announcements might come regarding the status of the April 2 Opening Day.

If Commissioner Fay Vincent and the league presidents announce the postponement of Opening Day, it would mark baseball's fourth in-season stoppage in 19 years.

A two-week strike claimed the first 86 games of the 1972 season. Players struck for 50 days in 1981, creating a split season. A two-day strike took place in 1985.

If adjustments do come, O'Connor said, they probably would come on a series-by-series or week-by-week basis.

Minor-league teams opened their exhibition season Friday.

Salary arbitration has snagged the talks, with owners saying players should need three years to be eligible. The union wants a rollback to two years.

Various players are coming to New York for a meeting of the union's executive board on Saturday, Rich said.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 16) UPI - Amid calls for tougher penalties, a House committee listened to testimony Friday about child labor law violations that led to death and dismemberment - and were punished by fines of a $1,000 or less.

The hearing of the House subcommittee on housing and employment came a day after the Labor Department announced that 500 of its investigators had found 7,000 children working illegally during a three-day nationwide sweep.

Rep. Tom Lantos, D-Calif., the panel chairman, pressed the department to release names of the 1,400 business found to have illegally employed children and to endorse proposals to toughen penalties and step up enforcement.

Robert Davis, a department legal official, turned over the names of some suspected violators, but asked the subcommittee to keep them secret until the department determines whether citations should be issued against them.

Lantos hinted he might release some names, but later said he would give the department until April 1 to begin identifying the companies.

Among the other witnesses before the committee was Suzanne Boutros of Plainfield, Ind., whose son, Jesse Colson, 17, was killed in a car crash last June while making deliveries for Domino's Pizza.

Boutros, who has formed a group called People Against Dangerous Deliveries said Domino's hires drivers under 18 in violation of child labor laws and endangers them by pressuring them to deliver pizzas within 30 minutes.

Boutros said in the case of her son, the store owner was fined $1,000 for the violation, and she called for tougher penalties as well as requiring delivery drivers to have a chauffeur's license.

Matthew Garvey, 16, of Laurel, Md., told the committee he was hired illegally by the Quality Carwash in his town at age 13 without even producing the required work permit, and said a boy only 9 years old worked with him.

One day, Garvey was sitting on a dryer that blows air, trying to keep cool when, the machine malfunctioned and ripped his leg off. Garvey said he had been told to avoid other machinery but his bosses ''didn't say anything about the dryer.''

Garvey's mother, Valerie Tyra, testified the business was fined $400 for having a broken dryer and $333 for having exposed wires in a wet place. It was fined another $1,820 several months later for not fixing the problems.

She then showed the committee pictures of the injuries suffered by her son a high school sophomore who now has an artificial leg and walks with a cane.

''These pictures are too horrendous to describe,'' said Lantos.

William Brooks, assistant secretary of labor for employment standards, told the committee that to his knowledge the department has never used its power to seek criminal penalties against a child labor violator.

He also said he did not want to ask for more money for investigators or tougher penalties until he see whether the department is using its resources to their fullest and that current tactics are inadequate.

''That's just rhetoric,'' said Lantos.

Lantos called for tougher penalities and requirements that fast-food chains make compliance with child labor laws, which limit the hours children can work and the jobs they can perform, a condition of acquiring a franchise.

UNITED NATIONS (MARCH 16) UPI - The Security Council backed Friday a plan to enlarge and extend the mandate of a U.N. observer team in Nicaragua to supervise the demobilization of U.S.-armed Contra rebels and assist the transition of the Managua government.

The plan, presented by Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar, received wide support among the council's 15 member states and will likely be formally approved next week, diplomats said.

''Nobody dissented,'' British U.N. Ambassador Crispin Tickell told reporters following private discussions by the council and Perez de Cuellar.

''The council gave support in principle to the plan, but it was not approved yet,'' U.S. Ambassador Thomas Pickering said. He said the council will meet next week to vote on the new strategy.

Perez de Cuellar said in the plan the U.N. Observer Group in Central America, or ONUCA by its Spanish acronym, will need additional personnel to supervise the demobilization of the 12,000 to 15,000 Contras.

He said the demobilization, which would be carried out on a voluntary basis, may take four to six weeks to complete depending on how the presidents of the five Central American countries want to dispose of the Nicaraguan rebels' weapons and military equipment including their uniforms.

He said outgoing Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega and President-elect Violeta Chamorro have requested that ONUCA remain in the country for two months after its mandate expires May 7. Chamorro will be inaugurated president April 25.

He said that both Ortega and Chamorro ''in recent days ... attach importance to voluntary demobilization as part of the process of transferring power.''

ONUCA was sent to verify compliance by the five Central American countries with accords on the democratization process, cessation of outside military assistance to local rebel forces and the non-use of the territory of one state for attacking others.

Perez de Cuellar said Costa Rica and Honduras have agreed in principle to let their territories be used on a temporary basis for the demobilization of Contras.

He said if the Security Council approves his plan, ONUCA's 260 military personnel will be increased to 379 and Venezuela will provide an additional infantry battalion of about 800 men.

Perez de Cuellar asked the council to urge member states to pay their assessed contributions to ONUCA, whose projected 6-month budget stood at $40.4 million. Only $5.4 million has been collected. The United States is the biggest debtor with $12 million owed.

ELIZABETH, NJ (MARCH 16) UPI - John Emil List, the quiet Sunday school teacher who vanished for 17 years after allegedly killing his family, sits in jail reading the Bible and books about the Civil War and World War II as he waits for his trial to start.

''He seems to be no problem, no attitudes,'' said Union County Sheriff Ralph Froelich, who brought the 64-year-old List back from Richmond, Va., after his arrest last year. ''He's quiet, does his reading, doesn't get involved with the rest of the activities.''

Jury selection is scheduled to start Tuesday for List's trial on five counts of murder.

List disappeared in late 1971, a few weeks before police broke into his large Victorian home in Westfield, N.J. The officers found the bodies of Helen List and the couple's three children, Patricia, Frederick and John Jr., laid out in the living room, a funeral dirge playing on the stereo.

Police, who believed that no one could do what List had apparently done and live with himself, said the next thing they expected to find was his body. Instead, they found the body of Alma List, his mother, upstairs.

They also reportedly found a letter to List's pastor saying he had killed his wife and daughter to keep them close to God and the boys because they would not understand why the other killings were necessary. The letter has not been released.

Although List, who had been using the name Robert Peter Clark, initially denied his identity after his arrest, he was forced to concede it for pre-trial motions. Investigators have used handwriting samples and have matched his fingerprints with those on List's Army records.

List, an accountant and a Lutheran who attended church regularly and taught Sunday school, allegedly planned the killings carefully, notifying his children's schools that they would be out of town. Police found evidence that he was having financial problems and was threatened with the loss of his heavily mortgaged house.

The only trace he left was his car, which was found in a parking lot at Kennedy International Airport in New York.

The killings, and List's disappearance, attracted worldwide publicity. A recent movie, ''The Stepfather,'' was based on the case.

In the meantime, List had returned to his old profession, but under a new name and in a new city. He apparently lived in Denver as Clark, working first as a cook and then as an accountant, going to church and listening to the classical music he favored. He told a friend that he had lived in Detroit and was a widower.

In 1977, he met a woman named Delores Miller through a Lutheran singles group. The couple married in 1985.

The Clarks moved to a Richmond suburb in 1988, where List once again found work as an accountant. But their quiet life was interrupted when a television show, Fox Network's ''America's Most Wanted,'' did a story on the case, showing a sculptor's mockup of how List might have aged.

A Denver friend of Delores Clark's saw the show and telephoned in the tip that led to his arrest June 1.

In jail, List is kept apart from the other inmates.

''It's not as though he were a difficult inmate,'' the sheriff said. ''He's just kept away from the others. He's not a physical man, kind of frail right now.''

SAN SALVADOR, EL SALVADOR (MARCH 16) UPI - Leftist rebels unilaterally suspended some military actions Friday but promised increased bloodshed if the government does not respond with concessions.

''If the government and armed forces intend to harden their militaristic postions, believing in the illusion of a weakened (rebel front), this misconception will obviously lead to a worsening of the war,'' the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, or FMLN, said in a communiqe.

The FMLN said it had stopped burning busses, placing bombs in front of retail stores and blowing up telephone equipment. In addition, the rebels said they would not assassinate civilians, including public officials.

The measures, which were first announced Tuesday and went into effect Friday, were characterized by the rebels as ''goodwill gestures'' to promote peace talks with the government.

A top government official Thursday told United Press International the government would welcome peace talks but added that the rebel concessions did not go far enough.

In November, after the rebels broke off talks and launched their biggest offensive of the 10-year civil war, President Alfredo Cristiani said he was willing to reinitiate talks but only after the FMLN suspended ''all actions that directly or indirectly affect the civilian population.''

Presidential spokesman Mauricio Sandoval said in an interview that the president maintained that position.

''They (the FMLN) have almost taken it,'' Sandoval said. ''One more small step is all that is needed.''

To meet the governments condition, the rebels would have to halt their extensive sabotage campaign against the electrical system and cease attacks in populated areas. The FMLN communique issued Friday said the rebels would be willing to take more steps, but only after the government responded with its own concessions.

''The government is publicly and morally obligated to make immediate goodwill gestures that permit the excercise of civic duty (and) halt violations of human rights,'' said the rebel communique, broadcast over local radio stations.

The FMLN has suggested that the government withdraw a state of siege in effect since November 12, a day after the rebels launched their massive offensive.

Some military officials have said the FMLN has been weakened by the electoral defeat of their only ally in the region, Nicaragua's Sandinista National Liberation Front.

Sandoval, however, said rebel strength had little to do with the need for a negotiated solution to the war that has cost over 72,000 lives, mostly civilians.

''It does not make sense for the government to try to quantify the destructive capacity of the FMLN,'' Sandoval said. ''Even a small armed group can cause plenty of damage.''

LOS ANGELES (MARCH 16) UPI - A Superior Court judge has dismissed one of two $10 million defamation lawsuits against comedian Arsenio Hall, citing both the entertainer's right to free speech and a case backlog, an attorney said Friday.

Hall was sued for calling Willis Edwards, a former NAACP official, an ''extortionist'' and ''tennis-shoe pimp.''

But Judge Ernest G. Williams dismissed the case Thursday, ruling that ''as a matter of law'' no defamation had occurred and that he would ''bite the bullet'' and let the state Court of Appeal determine the question because his court backlog did not allow him the time to spend 30 days on a case that would be appealed regardless of the outcome.

''We will appeal immediately,'' Geraldine Green, Edwards' attorney, said in response to the decision.

Green said she was ''outraged'' by the judge's decision to dismiss the case simply to save time.

''We will be filing an affidavit to not appear before Judge Williams,'' she added.

In his Jan. 20, 1989 suit, Edwards, the former president of the Beverly Hills-Hollywood branch of the NAACP, charged that Hall had referred to him as an ''extortionist'' in both an interview broadcast over KACE radio and printed in the Los Angeles Sentinel, a newspaper that serves a predominately black readership.

The statements were made after a November 1988 meeting in which Hall claimed Edwards demanded a $40,000 contribution to the NAACP to prevent Edwards from publicly announcing that Hall had not hired a sufficient number of blacks to work on his talk show.

After the meeting, Edwards issued a press release claiming that Hall said there were not enough qualified blacks to serve as writers, directors or producers on the show.

Hall's attorney, Morton G. Rosen, charged that the statements Hall made about Edwards were an expression of Hall's right to free spreech.

''Hall was charged with statements of fact when in actuality he made statements of opinion,'' Rosen said.

The judge agreed. ''The evidence shows a free, public debate, which is protected by the United States Constitution, based upon this society's very high value placed upon freedom of speech,'' Williams wrote in his ruling.

Green disagreed that Hall's speech was legally protected.

''We've got a whole line of cases that say if you accuse someone of a crime (extortion) you don't escape liability by just saying ''I think'' or ''In my opinion,'' she said.

Green also denied that Edwards ever asked for the $40,000 contribution.

Edwards filed a second, still pending $10 million defamation suit against the comedian and Rolling Stone magazine on Jan. 9, accusing Hall of calling him a ''phony ... black tennis-shoe pimp'' in an interview that was published in the November 2, 1989 issue of Rolling Stone.

SEATTLE (MARCH 16) UPI - Attorneys for Washington Public Power Supply System bondholders have reached a tentative agreement on how to distribute the more than $750 million settlement of their lawsuit over the agency's $2.25 billion bond default.

The proposal, filed Thursday in federal court in Tuscon, Ariz., would pay the bulk of the settlement to three groups of bondholders in WPPSS nuclear plants 4 and 5 in Washington state. The two reactors, which were never completed, were at the center of WPPSS' bond default in 1983, the largest municipal bond default in U.S. history.

Attorneys for approximately 24,000 bondholders who charged the supply system with fraud reached the settlement last September as the lawsuit was to go to trial before U.S. District Judge William Browning in Tucson.

Under the agreement filed with Browning, the amount to be paid to bondholders is currently worth about $752.8 million. But the payout is not expected until mid-1991, so interest could increase that sum to more than $800 million.

The payouts would be divided among those who purchased WPPSS bonds before and after June 15, 1983, when the Washington State Supreme Court ruled that promises made to repay WPPSS 4 and 5 bondholders were invalid.

Under the allocation plan, at least $93.5 million - not including interest - would be distributed among all bondholders regardless of when they purchased the issues.

Another sum that could reach $175 million would be set aside for attorneys' fees. However, Robert Sedgwick, an attorney representing post-June 1983 bondholders, said it is questionable whether Browning will approve that amount.

The remainder of the funds would be distributed to WPPSS bondholders represented by Chemical Banking Corp. and another group involved in the class-action suit against WPPSS.

The class action pulled together a number of suits filed against WPPSS in the wake of its 1983 default on construction bonds for plants 4 and 5 at the Hanford Nuclear Reservation and Satsop, Wash.

In the 1970s WPPSS initially planned to build five nuclear reactors. But cost overruns, an unexpected energy glut and other problems led to a halt on construction on four of the plants.

Only plant No. 2 was completed and is currently producing electricity for the supply system's members. Plants 1 and 3 were mothballed for possible future use.

In a related development, the WPPSS executive board Thursday approved a third round of refinancing to buy back the construction bonds for its nuclear plants. The supply system expects to save up to up to $80 million a year in interest payments under the refinancing program.

PRAGUE, CZECHOSLOVAKIA (MARCH 16) UPI - The foreign ministers of Warsaw Pact will meet in Prague Saturday to discuss the future of Germany in their first gathering since the Soviet Union began withdrawing its troops from Eastern Europe.

Czechoslovak Foreign Ministry spokesman Lubos Dobrovsky said the ministers will try to reach a common position on German unification and the shape of a new security arrangement for Europe.

The continued presence of Soviet troops in the East bloc, especially the 350,000 to 400,000 Soviet troops stationed in East Germany, and the Warsaw Pact's position on Polish demands to be represented in international talks on German unity are also expected to figure on the agenda.

The one-day meeting will be the first since the Soviet Union began withdrawing its troops from Eastern Europe at the request of Hungary and Czechoslovakia, and it comes after West German President Richard von Weizsacker asked Czechoslovaks to work with the Germans to build a new Europe.

Weizsacker, in Prague Thursday, asked Czechoslovaks to forgive the Nazi takeover of their country 51 years ago and said a united Germany would make no claim on its neighbors' borders.

On the eve of the seven-nation Warsaw Pact meeting, one senior European diplomat in Prague said he expected the conference to produce few concrete results.

''It's a response to a need to do some brainstorming,'' the diplomat said.

But another Western diplomat in Prague said the meeting may see a bid by the Warsaw Pact's newly democratic states to push their own agenda.

''The Czechs may use it to create a new security arrangement in Europe. They see the Warsaw Pact withering and they want out,'' said the diplomat.

The Czechoslovaks have called for removing the East and West military alliances and enlarging the role of the Conference for Security and Cooperation in Europe, the so-called Helsinki process.

''The Warsaw Pact is an alliance looking for a mission, and it could could be just a charade for a while,'' the diplomat said.

The Czechoslovak Foreign Ministry spokesman said the meeting was called by ''consensus of the Warsaw Pact member countres,'' but a Western diplomat said the gathering was suggested by the Czechs who received enthusiastic backing from Moscow.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 16) UPI - Sen. Daniel Moynihan, D-N.Y, said Friday he opposes a plan to balance the budget offered by the head of the House tax writing committee because it would cut Social Security benefits for an average retired couple by $3,192 over five years.

At a news conference on his 63rd birthday, Moynihan released an analysis of Rep. Dan Rostenkowski's plan, in which the Illinois Democrat proposed balancing the budget through tax increases, spending cuts and a one-year freeze on annual cost-of-living adjustments to federal retirement programs including previously untouchable Social Security benefits.

''This is the first time that I have heard that proposal made from our (Democratic) side of the aisle,'' Moynihan said, referring to the call for reduced Social Security benefits.

He said if Rostenkowski's plan was adopted, 400,000 Social Security recipients ''would drop below the poverty line.''

He also said lower Social Security benefits should not be part of any deficit reduction package because Social Security is supposed to be a separately financed insurance plan with no connection to general government spending.

Rostenkowski, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, said his broad plan, unveiled earlier this week to general praise for its boldness, would balance the federal budget by 1995 - a claim Moynihan disputes.

Moynihan said an average couple that retires at age 65 in 1990 would lose $588 in Social Security benefits in 1991 if Rostenkowski's plan to freeze Social Security cost-of-living adjustments, or COLAs, became law.

Assuming retirees would be entitled to a cost-of-living increase of 4.5 percent next year, that amounts to lost Social Security benefits of $49 a month for a couple with annual Social Security beneifts hn,1991 of $13,548.

Over five years, Moynihan said, the Rostenkowski proposal would cost an average retired couple a total of $3,192 in lost Social Security benefits.

''We have a stable (Social Security) system, it should be left alone,'' said Moynihan, who earlier this year proposed cutting Social Security taxes by $545 billion to reduce the huge Social Security trust fund surplus and prevent use of that money to finance operations and mask the deficit's true size.

Moynihan said he would still oppose Rostenkowski's plan even if the Social Security COLA freeze were dropped because Rostenkowski would allow continued use of the large and growing Social Security surplus to fund government operations and mask the deficit's size.

''I'm not for using the Social Security surplus for this purpose,'' he said.

The New York senator said that continuing to use the Social Security surplus would keep the deficit at $106 billion after five years rather than balancing the budget, as Rostenkowski claims.

''The deficit doesn't disappear,'' Moynihan said.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 16) UPI - Friends and family of hostage Terry Anderson marked the fifth anniversary of his captivity in Lebanon Friday with a somber rally near the White House and expressed hope behind-the-scene efforts will lead to his freedom ''in the coming weeks.''

Anderson's sister, Peggy Say, told the rally that the release of her brother and seven other American captives should only be on ''honorable'' terms.

''There was a time five years ago when I would have given anything, paid any price. ... I'm no longer willing to reward the people who did this. ... I don't want to punish them. I don't want to hunt them down and kill them. I want them to give me my brother back,'' she said.

President Bush and his wife, Barbara, met with Say, who said she was assured during the 30-minute meeting that Bush ''was doing everything I ever asked my president to do, and that is his very best.''

Bush told reporters he would not talk publicly about possible progress.

''There's a delicate balance here. You don't overdo public comments. You don't have too many dramatic meetings or call public attention to this,'' Bush said. Nonetheless, he felt the meeting was important. ''Peggy Say is a courageous woman. ... I just got thinking that Barbara and I would like to hold her hand.''

Bush also disclosed that he has been in contact with Syrian President Hafez Assad.

''I've been in touch with him (Assad),'' Bush said as he and the first lady toured the Tidal Basin to view the cherry blossom trees in full bloom. ''But no, I cannot. I don't want to get the hopes up through a lot of speculation and have them dashed down.''

After the meeting with Say, Bush told National Public Radio he was constrained from speaking because he did not want to ''send a signal to the hostage holders ... that there's more advantage in holding the hostages than in releasing them.''

''We're going to continue to do everything we can. I hope they realize that,'' Bush said at one poitn during the day when asked if he had a message for the hostage families.

At the rally across from the White House, Say said she is optimistic that world changes will soon bring freedom to the hostages.

''I'm convinced in my heart that in the coming weeks we will see the resolution of this crisis,'' she said. ''We will see it end in an honorable way.''

In a message to the captors, Say said: ''We are the American people and you have humiliated us and you have degraded us ... and you have killed us ... and you wonder why your claims of injustice fall on deaf ears.

''If you want us to hear your cries, you hear ours. ... You wonder why we don't hear your story and yet the man who told it so well has been chained to a basement wall for five years.''

The ceremony came a day after the captors of three other kidnapped Americans threatened to kill them unless the United States meets their demands, and as reports continued of secret talks concerning release of the 18 Western hostages believed held by pro-Iranian fundamentalist groups in Lebanon.

Bush has stated frequently in recent weeks that no U.S. officials are negotiating to win the release of Americans.

He said Friday, however, that he has received ''some reports'' from former President Jimmy Carter, who is travelling in the Middle East, and from Assad, who met with Carter earlier this week.

But Carter said after the meeting that he doubted Assad could have much influence in winning release of the Americans.

Bush emphasized Carter's activities were ''totally unofficial.''

Fitzwater said Bush had conversed with Assad through ''diplomatic channels'' but declined to get into other specifics.

''There have been a number of overtures to leaders in the Middle East, including Assad, in recent months on the hostage matter,'' he said.

He read a statement reiterating the U.S. demand for the unconditional and prompt release of all Americans.

ANNAPOLIS, MD (MARCH 16) UPI - Maryland senators vowing to debate for days resumed a filibuster Friday intended to block passage of a bill that would continue to make abortions widely available in the state.

Despite warnings from legislative leaders that the Senate would remain in session until the matter was settled, Senate President Thomas V. ''Mike'' Miller sent lawmakers home about 3:45 a.m. EST after 10 members failed to appear at a vote to end the extended debate.

The debate resumed about six and a half hours later, and both sides said the break for sleep did not hurt their cause in the filibuster that is expected to last several days.

Although admittedly a minority in the Senate, abortion opponents had held the floor since 1:20 p.m. Thursday by reading aloud from textbooks, constituent letters and legal briefs.

Miller scheduled votes at roughly two-hour intervals Friday to test the resolve of advocates on both sides of the bill, which would allow unrestricted abortions until a fetus is determined to be viable by a physician. After that time, abortions would be allowed in cases in which the health of the mother or the child were in danger.

Abortion opponents are counting on the filibuster to wear down the other side and force the bill to be withdrawn or amended.

''We who believe in life are going to do all we can to save that life,'' said Sen. Patrick O'Reilly of Prince George's County. ''We have to do what is morally correct.''

Abortions rights advocates slowly gained ground by the fifth vote on a motion to end the debate, and by 2:30 p.m. EST had 24 of the needed 32 Senate votes needed to end the discussion.

''We're ahead of where we thought we would be,'' said Baltimore Sen. Barbara Hoffman, who sponsored the abortions rights bill.

Friday's resumption of debate was preceded by an inspirational prayer from Senate Majority Leader Clarence Blount of Baltimore, who urged lawmakers to avoid allowing the debate to tear apart the Senate.

Debate Thursday morning before the filibuster led to passage of an amendment offered by opponents, which prohibited abortions solely because of the sex of the fetus.

Since the 90-day legislative session started Jan. 10, abortion has loomed as the most divisive issue in the General Assembly, despite claims by leadership that lawmakers would avoid the volatile issue in an election year for all 188 members of the Senate and House of Delegates.

The legislation at issue was introduced after Maryland Attorney General J. Joseph Curran Jr. determined that a 1968 state law would again become enforceable should the Roe vs. Wade decision be overturned by the U.S. Supreme Court.

The 1968 state law allowed abortions during the first trimester of pregnancy only in cases of rape, incest or where the mother's life was in danger. It also provided that abortions must be performed in accredited hospitals, and a medical board would have to approve all abortions.

The Senate's action is only the first step in making the legislation law, because the bill, which has not yet come up in the House of Delegates, must pass both chambers in identical form before the session's scheduled April 9 adjournment.

Should the legislation pass and be signed by Gov. William Donald Schaefer - who has not yet stated his stand on the issue - abortion opponents have vowed to petition for a referendum on the measure and allow voters to decide the law's fate in the November general election.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 16) UPI - While school children sang in remembrance of the American hostages under balmy skies across from the White House Friday, Terry Anderson was likely marking the fifth year of his captivity in a dark and damp basement, according to a former hostage.

After a rally marking the anniversary of America's longest-held hostage, Rev. Lawrence Jenco, who once shared a cell with Anderson, closed his eyes against the sun as he described how an ordinary day for Anderson might go.

''Terry Anderson is probably in a sealed room, un-blindfolded, unchained for the moment, but every time a key would go in the door he would have to put the blindfold back on.

''He probably is being allowed to go to the toilet once, having a meal of beans and rice, some Arabic bread and perhaps rereading articles that he's carried around with him from prison to prison or books that were given to him.

''That's his day ... that's all,'' Jenco said.

Jenco, who was abducted in Beirut two months before Anderson in 1985 and released 19 months later, and other hostages have said they expect their former captors have followed a pattern and have moved Anderson several times.

The holding places are often small, dungeon-like rooms in damp basements with mattresses on the floor. In the presence of their captors, hostages are blindfolded and chained to a wall by one arm. Often they wear only underwear.

Jenco said when he was released in 1986 he fully expected Anderson to follow him to freedom within a short time.

Jenco said when he left Anderson, the journalist said, '''promise me something, that I will not be forgotten.'''

''It's been four years since I last gave a hug and kiss to Terry Anderson '' Jenco said as he stood in the park across the street from the White House. ''Maybe shortly we'll be celebrating on the other side of the street.''

WASHINGTON (MARCH 16) UPI - The State Department issued a warning Friday to American travelers to the Soviet Union to be on guard against the downside of perestroika - street crime, violence from ethnic clashes and deteriorating health care.

The unusual travel advisory urged ''tourists in frail health not to visit the Soviet Union.'' It said there is a severe shortage of medical supplies including disposable hypodermic needles, antibiotics and anesthetics, as well as a shortage of diagnostic equipment, including X-rays.

The advisory warned that tourists who fall ill in the Soviet Union may have to be flown to the United States or Western Europe by air ambulance and that such a flight can cost $10,000 or more.

It warned the ill tourist not to expect any help from Intourist, the official guide.

The advisory said, ''Intourist, the Soviet travel organization, often will absolve itself of all responsibility for tourists who become so ill that they cannot maintain the tour schedule. The tourist is abandoned to fend for himself in the confusing, for westerners, Soviet medical system.''

The travel advisory also warned, ''Crime is a very real threat in the Soviet Union.'' It said there has been ''a substantial increase in violent street crime in the Soviet Union in the past year.''

Tourists were warned that U.S. authorities in Moscow ''have received increasing numbers of reports of muggings, robberies and pick-pocketing, burglaries, sexual assaults and beatings of American citizens.''

The advisory also warned that ethnic clashes ''have occurred with growing intensity over the past year,'' although the violence was not directed at American citizens or other foreigners.

But the notice advised American travelers to areas of potential political unrest to check with the U.S. embassy in Moscow or the consulate in Leningrad before traveling to trouble spots.

ANCHORAGE, AK (MARCH 16) UPI - The judge in the Joseph Hazelwood trial Friday refused a defense request to sequester the jury that will deliberate the Exxon Valdez skipper's fate.

But state Superior Court Judge Karl Johnstone granted the defense what it called a ''major victory'' in ruling that the skipper could not be considered guilty of acting recklessly for attempting the impossible task of trying to get the grounded Exxon Valdez off Bligh Reef.

The rulings came as lawyers began a two-day debate on jury instructions in preparations for Tuesday's closing arguments. Testimony in the 7-week-old trial ended Thursday - with Hazelwood choosing to remain silent and not testify - and the jury is expected to start deliberating Wednesday.

Defense lawyers predicted deliberations lasting several days - or right up to the March 24 anniversary of the 11-million-gallon oil spill, the worst in U.S. history.

Hazelwood, 43, of Huntington, N.Y., faces seven years, three months in jail and a $61,000 fine if convicted of three misdemeanors and a felony - reckless endangerment, operating the tanker while intoxicated, negligent discharge of oil and criminal mischief.

Defense lawyer Dick Madson asked Johnstone to sequester the jury of six men and six women during its deliberations next week ''because we're coming up on the anniversary.''

''It's going to be virtually impossible to insulate the jury from outside influence,'' Madson argued, openly voicing his ''fear of a potential mistrial.''

''We're looking at the anniversary date and I just know as sure as I'm standing here that all kinds of activity is going to occur,'' Madson told the judge.

In fact, the U.S. Coast Guard commandant and other federal officials, the president of Exxon Corp., various state environmental officials, prominent speakers from the Soviet Union, the United States and other countries participating in an international environment vs. development symposium, and media from all over have been flocking to Alaska one year after the disastrous wreck captured world attention.

Madson said sequestering would protect jurors from demonstrations, publicity and all the attention being heaped upon the Exxon Valdez spill.

Johnstone said such a request should have been made at the start of the trial, before jurors were sworn in, and that the situation has not changed sufficiently to warrant sequestering.

But the judge gave the defense its biggest victory of the case following weeks of debate and briefs that culminated with arguments Friday as jurors began a four-day weekend.

Johnstone ruled that Hazelwood's alleged attempt to dislodge the tanker from Bligh Reef - at the risk of endangering the crew, further damaging the ship and causing more oil to leak - could not be used to convict him of the felony charge of criminal mischief because, according to all evidence, the tanker was impossible to move.

''It's a major victory,'' defense lawyer Michael Chalos said. ''It takes part of the meat of their case away.''

However, jurors could still convict Hazelwood on the felony based on his actions leading up to the grounding. The judge's ruling essentially excludes Hazelwood's conduct following the grounding from consideration in three of the four charges.

One of the key elements of the felony is that Hazelwood tried to maneuver the badly damaged ship off Bligh Reef, recklessly creating a risk.

However, testimony was unanimous that the 987-foot tanker was so hard aground that nothing Hazelwood could have done would have moved the tanker off the rocks on which it was impaled.

Madson described the issue as straightforward: ''If it was impossible for Capt. Hazelwood to remove the Exxon Valdez from Bligh Reef betwen 12:10 a.m. and 1:41 a.m. (when the ship was aground and Hazelwood issued engine and rudder orders), could he be charged or convicted of reckless endangerment? A second question must also be answered: Can Hazelwood be convicted on the criminal mischief charge if it was based on recklessnes in trying to remove the vessel at a time when it was impossible to do so?''

COLUMBIA, MO (MARCH 19) UPI - Stories investigating the blood industry, an arson ring and the needless death of citrus trees were among the winners in the annual Investigative Reporters and Editors awards announced Friday.

The IRE, a national organization of 3,000 journalists, is headquartered at the University of Missouri-Columbia's School of Journalism.

The awards were for the best investigative stories published or aired in 1989 in newspapers, television, radio, magazines and books.

The university's journalism faculty screened more than 400 entries, and a panel of top investigative journalists picked up to three winners in each category.

For newspapers over 75,000 circulation, The Lexington (Ky.) Herald-Leader was honored for a series on how Kentucky's public schools are kept substandard.

Also named were The Philadelphia Inquirer's series on the blood industry and the Minneapolis-St. Paul Star Tribune's series examining a multimillion-dollar industry that profited from arson and was linked to the fire department.

Newspapers under 75,000 circulation that were honored include the Anchorage (Alaska) Daily News for a series on the failure of industry and federal regulators to establish safeguards to prevent the catastrophic oil spill in Alaska.

Also tabbed were The Texas Lawyer in Dallas for a story on the ad litem system and the Washington (D.C.) Daily News, for a series on dangerous levels of carcinogens in the local water supply.

U.S. News and World Report and Florida Trend of St. Petersburg, Fla., were named in the magazine honors for stories on government corruption and the needless destruction of citrus trees by state and federal officials, respectively.

For television in Top 20 markets, KQED-TV in San Francisco was honored for its examination of disciplinary action in San Francisco Police Department brutality cases.

Also named were Primetime Live/ABC News for an investigation into the downing of Pan Am Flight 103, and WWOR-TV in Secaucus, N.J., for a four-part series on state troopers who targeted innocent black and minority motorists.

In the television markets below the Top 20, WFTV-TV in Orlando, Fla., was honored for a one-hour documentary on how elderly citizens are victimized by the court system and by guardianship attorneys.

Also named was WTVF-TV in Nashville, Tenn., for its series on the questionable backgrounds of school bus drivers.

KTOK Radio News in Oklahoma City was tabbed for a series on an explosion of a B-1 bomber at Tinker Air Force Base.

The book, Inside Job by Mary Fricker, Paul Muolo and Steve Pizzo, was the only winner in its category. The book investigated the political and regulatory causes of the savings and loan crisis.

(MARCH 16) UPI - The first formal talks in more than four decades between a South African head of state and the African National Congress are to get under way next month. South African President Frederik de Klerk says he will meet with Nelson Mandela and other senior A-N-C leaders on April 11th. The Cape Town meeting is expected to focus on setting up formal negotiations to share power between South Africa's white-minority government and the country's black majority.

The shuttle Discovery is on a Florida launch pad for final processing in preparation for an April 12th lift-off to put the Hubble Space Telescope in orbit. Discovery's trip to launch pad 39-B was delayed 12 hours because of concern about a six-inch nut that holds bearings in place around the shuttle's nose landing gear axle. NASA managers are still trying to decide what to do about the problem, but decided to proceed with launch preparations anyway.

Mild temperatures across much of the eastern part of the nation bring hints of spring, while blizzards in Minnesota and North Dakota give evidence that winter is far from over. The National Weather service issued a weather advisory for blowing snow in Minnesota, where light snow was expected today. A snowstorm yesterday dumped up to one foot of heavy snow in western Minnesota. In New England, the weather was mild with temperatures ranging from 65 to 75 degrees.

Air Force officials say a B-52 bomber made an emergency landing at Griffiss Air Base near Syracuse, New York, after one of its hydraulic systems malfunctioned. Authorities say the plane was on a routine training mission from Kansas to Loring Air Base in Maine when it lost one of its six on-board hydraulic systems. The crew decided to try an emergency landing at the base 30 miles east of Syracuse. The plane carried a 500-pound concrete dummy bomb.

Analysis By: Vernon Scott

HOLLYWOOD (MARCH 16) UPI - Documentaries are the movies' stepchildren, best defined as something neglected by most filmgoers. No matter how well-made or enlightening, documentaries are generally doomed at the box office.

They don't star Michael J. Fox or Molly Ringwald. And, like the telephone book, they lack drama or comic plot in the accepted sense of the terms. All that, of course, doesn't mean they aren't worthy. The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, for instance, every year hands out an Oscar for best documentary.

This year there was a lot of talk about an Oscar for "Roger & Me," the hilarious account of director Michael Moore's pursuit of General Motors' top dog Roger B. Smith for an interview about closing auto plants in Moore's native Flint, Mich.

Praised by critics as the most entertaining documentary in decades, "Roger & Me" has earned only $6 million to date. It also failed to get an Academy Award nomination.

The academy insists that all documentary films be viewed by a special awards committee - unlike any other category - and a voting system used to determine the five nominated pictures. Moreover, final voting is limited to academy members who have attended screenings of all the nominees.

This year's nominees for best documentary feature: "Adam Clayton Powell," "Common Threads: Stories from the Quilt," "Crack USA: County Under Siege," "For All Mankind" and "Super Chief: The Life and Legacy of Earl Warren."

"Super Chief" is a little different from the others in that its creator, Judith Leonard, is a Tucson lawyer who never made any sort of movie before in her life.

Leonard and co-producer Bill Jersey were astonished in the course of making their film to encounter many people in Hollywood who had no idea who Warren was - which may give the producers an inkling of what to expect at the box office.

Narrated by Gregory Peck, the Warren documentary shows the late chief justice in a flattering light while revealing many sides of his personality and character. It covers his years as governor of California and his unsuccessful bid for the Republican Party presidential nomination.

The documentary is a sympathetic treatment of Warren's essential libralism and the historic decisions of the "Warren Court" that changed the course of 20th century American history. "No doubt he comes out a hero, but we tried very hard to put some balance into the film. It is an objective view " Leonard said.

Warren himself is infrequently seen on screen. The film relies heavily on interviews with his contemporaries, politicians, and historians giving their opinions of Warren's impact on American life.

"There is a tremendous amount of uproar now about what is going on with the Supreme Court," Leonard said. "And I think our picture helps put it into context.

"So much of what is going on now is a reaction to the Warren court and the legacy he left us - subjects like the Miranda Law, civil rights, and the entire body of criminal law.

"The big criticism of the Warren court was that they were activists and meddled in areas they never should have gotten into - according to his critics. But it depends on your perspective."

So far "Super Chief: The Life and Legacy of Earl Warren" has not been released to theaters and therefore has created little public outcry or controversy.

Leonard says feelings about Warren still run high, that he is the most beloved and the most hated of all chief justices. In the film, Warren is criticized by Judge Robert Bork and Lino Graglia, University of Texas Law School professor, among others.

Praise is heaped upon Warren by Justices William J. Brennan and Thurgood Marshall along with members of the Warren family, biographer Irving Stone and various politicians.

One of the most memorable tidbits of Warren lore is Dwight D. Eisenhower's comment after he had left office that the biggest blunder of his presidency was appointing Warren to the court.

Leonard spent some three years developing and producing the documentary. She enjoyed the process so much that she has decided to move to Hollywood to pursue the prospect of making more films in the future.

HALLOWELL, ME (MARCH 19) UPI - The Soviet Union told the Samantha Smith Center Friday that 30 additional spots have been created for American students this summer at a youth camp on the Black Sea.

The spots at Camp Artek are in addition to 62 spots that were reserved previously for American students.

Jane Smith, Samantha's mother and the director of the Samantha Smith Center, said the center will sponsor the additional students if a way can be found to raise the money to pay for the visits.

''We have a list of students in Maine who would like to attend the camps in the U.S.S.R.,'' Smith said. ''But they will only be able to attend if we can raise the $2,500 scholarship per student.''

The money will have to be raised in the next three weeks, Smith said, since the Soviets want to have the visits confirmed by that time.

Samantha Smith was a 9-year-old schoolgirl when she wrote to Soviet Premier Yuri Andropov, expressing concerns about the prospects of nuclear war. Andropov invited Samantha to visit the Soviet Union. She and her parents agreed and traveled there in 1983 in a widely publicized visit.

She and her father died in a plane crash in 1985. The Samantha Smith Center was founded by her mother after the crash to encourage student exchanges between the United States and Soviet Union.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 16) UPI - The government has declared wild chimpanzees an endangered species, a move that will provide additional federal protection for man's closest animal relative, officials confirmed Friday.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service had classified the primate as a ''threatened'' species, but officials said additional protection was needed in view of recent studies documenting a drastic decline in the population of wild chimps in Africa.

The endangered status designation also was extended to the pygmy chimpanzee, which despite its name is about the same size as the chimpanzee but with a narrower chest and bigger lower limbs.

The chimpanzee has disappeared from five of the 25 African countries that represent its historic range and its population has fallen from an all-time high of about 2 million to a current estimate of 175,000 because of overhunting and loss of habitat to man.

The pygmy chimpanzee lives only in Zaire and experts estimate its population at 15,000.

Elizabeth Lipscomb, a spokeswoman for the fish and wildlife service, said that by granting endangered status, the government was outlawing the importation of any chimps taken from the wild.

The move, first disclosed in a little-noticed Federal Register notice earlier this week, comes in response to a petition filed with the fish and wildlife service by the World Wildlife Fund, the Humane Society of the United States and Jane Goodall, the renowned chimpanzee researcher.

In the November 1987 petition, Goodall said the continued removal of infant chimps from the wild was driving the ape to the verge of extinction in Africa.

She also said chimps were threatened by increasing contact with humans because they can contract many of the same diseases that afflict humans.

Because chimps are so physiologically close to humans, they are extremely valuable in biomedical research, especially AIDS studies, and public health officials have expressed concern about restricting their use.

As a result, the fish and wildlife service specifically exempted the 1,100 to 1,450 captive chimpanzees now held at U.S. biomedical facilities from the endangered status designation.

Captive chimps will remain classified as ''threatened,'' a designation that places tight restrictions on importation and other uses. Lipscomb said any additional chimps needed for research would be obtained from captive chimp breeding programs either in the United States or abroad.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 16) UPI - A non-commissioned Army officer from Fort Ord, Calif., will be charged with murder soon for shooting a Panamanian prisoner during the Dec. 20 invasion of Panama, the Army Times said Friday.

In an article that will appear in Monday's edition of Army Times, the independent weekly defense publication said the Army's Criminal Investigation Command had nearly completed its investigation of the incident.

The Army had no immediate comment on the article or the alleged shooting.

''Command officials are expected to recommend that the non-commissioned officer, a member of the 7th Infantry Division (Light), Fort Ord., Calif., be court-martialed on a charge of murder,'' the Army Times article said, citing ''top-ranking Army officials'' as the source for its information.

The article does not identify the soldier.

The following account of the incident was provided by Army officials, the publication said.

''The NCO and other soldiers were manning a checkpoint at a roadblock in Panama during the invasion when several Panamanians drove up. When the Panamanians were ordered to halt, someone inside the car tossed a hand grenade at the soldiers,'' the Army Times said.

''The soldiers then fired on the car, according to this account, killing several occupants. The remaining passengers quickly surrendered, got out of the car and were taken prisoner. The senior NCO allegedly shot one of the prisoners and severely beat at least one other.''

The Army Times said its sources would not say when charges will be brought only that it is expected soon, perhaps within days.

The alleged murder was the gravest of more than 60 incidents arising from the Dec. 20 U.S. invasion, the Army Times said. Army sources said various violent incidents resulted in 21 formal invastions, and eight involved deaths.

''In addition to the expected murder charge, sources said they expect another incident to result in a charge of wrongful death,'' Army Times said. ''Yet another case, in which one source said a soldier allegedly shot and killed a buddy 'while screwing around with his weapon,' might yield lesser charges.''

#90075u2113 03/16/1990 ~United Press International
NEW YORK (MARCH 16) UPI - The dollar ended mixed in New York trading Friday as foreign exchange traders flattened positions ahead of East German elections, which could determine whether unification with West Germany goes smoothly.

Players said Sunday's election of East Germany's first democratic government could reduce uncertainty clouding the process of German monetary and political unification, thereby strengthening the German mark.

Currency dealers were also wary of a weekend interest rate hike by the Bank of Japan, which has been under international pressure to move up its official discount rate to counter inflation and boost the yen.

Considering all these risks, participants said, it was not a good weekend to have large large currency positions outstanding. "There's a lot that's up in the air," said Christiane Mandell, a foreign exchange vice president with Security Pacific International Bank in Los Angeles. "There's been a lot of position-squaring."

In late New York trading, the dollar was changing hands at 1.6985 marks, up slightly from 1.6975 Thursday. Against the Japanese currency, the dollar was quoted at 152.65 Japanese yen, ahead from 152.20.

Mandell said the main question in the East German elections was "whether that (new) government will carry on (unification) negotiations in the same way the interim leadership has."

If the East German party allied with West Germany'sopposition Social Democrats wins, it could prove contentious in talks with West Germany's ruling Christian Democrats, she said.

But currency analyst Lisa Finstrom of Shearson Lehman Hutton in New York said results will merely decide who's in charge. "The fact is, this election does not by any way shape or form lessen uncertainty," she said.

Trader Urs Beeler of Credit Suisse said the salient fact is that the election will give East Germany a government, "and that is already a very positive fact, and that will create a strong mark."

On Japanese interest rates, Beeler voiced skepticism as to the likelihood of a Bank of Japan hike in its official discount rate from the current 4.25 percent level. With the Japanese fiscal year ending March 31, the central bank would incur investor wrath if it acted before then, he said.

Players said a collection of economic data released Friday had little impact on the dollar. Higher industrial production and factory use balanced off a decline in housing starts, and inflation was stable.

Other dollar rates: 1.5095 Swiss francs, off from 1.5170; 5.7345 French francs, unchanged; and 1,253 Italian lire, off from 1,253.25. The British pound declined to $1.6190 from $1.6225.

In Europe the dollar closed lower across the board. In Frankfurt it was down to 1.6950 German marks against 1.7055 Thursday and it also fell in Zurich to 1.5065 Swiss francs from 1.5260.

The dollar declined in Paris, Brussels and Milan to 5.7390 French francs against 5.7830, 35.24 Belgian francs compared with 35.52 and 1,254.10 Italian lire against 1,263.10 at the previous day's close. In London the pound moved up to $1.6240 from $1.6175.

Earlier in Tokyo, the dollar edged up against the yen to close at 152.50 from 152.47 the previous day. Trading was cautious amid suspense over the possible Bank of Japan interest hike.

Republic National Bank in New York closed cash gold higher at $400 an ounce against $398.25 Thursday. The New York Commodity Exchange settled gold at $399.60 an ounce, up from $398.10. In Zurich, gold rose to $401 an ounce from $398.50 Thursday. London gold rose to $400.50 an ounce from $398.25.

Republic closed cash silver at $5.12 an ounce, up from $5.10. Comex spot silver rose to $5.093 an ounce from $5.079. Zurich silver was unchanged at $5.10 an ounce. London silver rose to $5.13 from $5.11.

HAMBURG, N.Y. (MARCH 16) UPI - Town police, who spend no small amount of time trying to rid their community of marijuana, have decided to grow some.

Hamburg police said they will plant marijuana seeds purchased in a mail-order catalog and if a crop comes in, they will take the pot to parents' groups to illustrate how easy it is for teenagers to come across the drug.

''If it works, we'll be able to show parents and others how readily available it (marijuana) is,'' said Lt. Carmen Kesner, head of the Drug Education Office in Hamburg, a Buffalo suburb.

''We think parents ought to be aware that some kids are growing their own marijuana,'' Kesner said. ''Parents can be so naive. Many of them probably don't know what a marijuana plant looks like.''

Kesner said he saw an advertisement for the catalog in a recent issue of High Times magazine, dedicated to the decriminalization of marijuana, and sent for it. He ordered the seeds from the catalog.

The department purchased a ''grab bag'' of seeds for $25, plus $10 for shipping and handling. Prices go up to $150 for 15 ''high-grade'' seeds.

Kenser said he is concerned marijuana smoked today is much more potent than the versions their baby-boom parents may have used, containing the active ingredient THC in doses up to five times as great.

The U.S. Drug Enforcement Agency said providing equipment and advice for growing your own marijuana has become a multimillion-dollar industry and still is growing.

ANALYSIS BY JOAN HANAUER

NEW YORK (MARCH 16) UPI - Ted Koppel took over as anchor of ABC's new ''Nightline'' program on Mar. 24, 1980, and, in the ensuing 10 years, it has been the best of times and the worst of times.

''Nightline'' aficionados will get to see both in prime time in April, when the network will air an as-yet untitled anniversary special, at a date and time to be announced.

Koppel talked about the anniversary special and reminisced about ''Nightline'' in an interview.

''It's going to be a sort of composite of some of the high points and low points, the best confrontations, the funniest moments and the most dramatic,'' he said of the anniversary show. ''We'll have the recollections of some of the people who put the show together, the producers and directors and bookers.

''It will be a sort of inside look at 'Nightline' and a retrospective of some of the material we've done over the years.''

At the top of the list of most important programs Koppel placed those he did in South Africa five years ago and a few weeks ago, the Israeli town meeting with Israelis and Palestinians, the week spent in the Philippines covering the revolution there.

Asked about low points, he said:

''There were some programs that seemed like a good idea when we talked about them but turned out to be excruciatingly boring and dumb. There was the one on gardening that stands out in everybody's memory.

''There was the Fourth of July show we did, shooting Willie Nelson and Kris Kristofferson live from a concert in Texas. There was a technical glitch and they couldn't hear me. There were the two of them waiting on stage and mumbling to each other. They were acutely discomforted by the whole thing and so were we.''

That's what can happen on live television. The interview Koppel found funniest never saw air - it was the taped interview with a Soviet cosmonaut.

''He was supposed to speak English - but he didn't understand English,'' Koppel said. ''I would ask a question and he kept giving me the same answer because it was essentially the only thing he knew how to say.

''He totally cracked me up and I ended up convulsed on the desk. He was sort of a Russian Jose Jimenez.''

Some of Koppel's memories strike a far different emotional chord.

''Sometimes these things happens when you least expect then, not involving big names but instead people who for one reason or another are in the middle of a personal crisis, who can be tremendously forthcoming and responsive,'' he said.

''I remember one young woman who was Amerasian, her father was American and her mother was Thai. I asked her what was the most extraordinary thing about coming to the United States, and she said, 'Seeing the sky.' I asked her what she meant - after all, she could see the sky in Thailand. '''No,' she said. 'In Thailand I was too ashamed to look up.'

''It was one of those moments that blow you away.''

Another moment - also unexpected but in a different vein - came when Koppel was talking to a couple from Texas who were very active in reviewing textbooks for material they thought should be excised. Another guest was a woman in Chicago who was head of the Librarians' Union.

He asked the people in Texas for an example of what they objected to and the answer they gave him was explicit and unprintable. Koppel couldn't wait to change the subject.

''At that point I said, 'Let's go to Chicago.' The producer said in the microphone in my ear, 'The satellite to Chicago just went down.' I honestly don't remember what I said; I'm sure I asked some dumb question.''

''Nightline'' has evolved over the decade it has been on the air, Koppel said, and he cited among other things the town meeting format and the ability to expand the program to as much as three-and-a-half hours. The show broke new ground last June in covering the Beijing demonstrations in Tiananmen Square. The correspondents were working 20-22 hour a days and did not have time to give traditional reports for ''Nightline.''

''We had the producer just debrief on camera the correspondents, the camera people, the other producers, and we sort of wove those answers into a report and ended with seven, eight, nine minutes every night.''

Koppel admits the people who book guests have a lot easier time than in the early days, when ''they would ask people to appear on this program they never heard of at 11:30 at night.''

The answer sometimes would be, ''Are you crazy?''

There's one other change that Koppel noted.

''It's amazing how quickly 10 years have gone by,'' he said. ''It doesn't seem like 10 years. Then I look at myself on the early programs and I realize how young I was and how much time has gone by.''

(MARCH 16) UPI - Former President Jimmy Carter today expressed optimism about the release of Western hostages in Lebanon. Damascus Radio quotes Carter as saying he's hopeful of the hostages' release because of ''very encouraging'' statements from Iran. Carter made the remarks before he left Syria for Jordan. The comments come amid reports of behind-the-scenes negotiations to free the 18 captives, including eight Americans.

Intelsat engineers are happy today after successfully boosting a stranded 150-Million-dollar satellite into a safe, higher orbit. The relay station was brought to life last night by remote control and moved from a relatively low orbit, where it was in danger of falling back into Earth's atmosphere. The maneuver gives engineers more time to determine if a shuttle rescue mission is feasible to repair the satellite or return it to Earth.

Israeli Labor party boss Shimon Peres appears optimistic about his chances of leading the next government. Peres and Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir each met with members of their parties and began contacts with other parties after yesterday's NO-confidence vote brought down the Shamir government. President Chaim Herzog is to decide which political party will attempt to form the new government.

The West Virginia Supreme Court today upheld a lower-court ruling ordering Jefferson County teachers back to work, but the teachers say they will stay on strike. The West Virginia Education Association says the courtroom is NOT the arena to settle the teacher strike. A spokesman says the union is working with state legislators to resolve the 10-day-old walkout. Governor Gaston Caperton says the high court decision is ''a step in the right direction.''

SAN FERNANDO, CA (MARCH 19) UPI - Two men were sentenced Friday to four years in state prison each for mailing obscene death threats to at least 265 prominent residents in a massive, though unsuccessful, extortion scheme.

Roman Makuch, 27, and Richard Faroni, 26, former civilian volunteers with the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department, were convicted Jan. 29 of one count of conspiracy and 10 counts each of attempted extortion and sending threatening letters for extortion purposes.

They were sentenced by Superior Court Judge Ronald Coen, who convicted them after an eight-day non-jury trial.

Makuch and Faroni, both former Antelope Valley residents where they were employed as aerospace workers by Rockwell International, could have been sentenced to eight years in state prison.

With credit for time already served, the men could be eligible for parole in less than a year.

''The only reason I'm imposing what some may consider a lenient sentence is that thank God, no one paid out any money,'' Coen said.

Prior to sentencing, Makuch asked Coen to place him on probation, saying that since being in custody for the past 15 months, ''I've had a lot of time to think. I now have a different view of the world.'' The judge rejected the bid.

Deputy District Attorney Steve Cooley said the two men on Nov. 1, 1988, mailed at least 265 obscenity-laden death threats to prominent citizens of the Antelope Valley, including bank officers, lawyers and the former Lancaster city manager.

The letters, produced on a word processor, demanded amounts ranging up to $600,000.

None of the intended victims, however, paid any ransom money, Cooley said.

Many of the letters contained personal information about the intended victims and threatened death to the victims' children and relatives if the ransoms were not paid.

''If you decide not to pay,'' one letter said, ''we (will) blow your brains out and then contact your wife, or the girlfriend of yours. Read names of those who (did not cooperate with us) in the obituarys (sic).

Cooley said many of the victims immediately reported the letters to the sheriff's department. The men were taken into custody in Las Vegas over the 1988 Thanksgiving weekend.

''This is one for the books,'' Cooley said. ''I don't think a plot like this, involving this kind of effort, with this kind of goal or motivation, has ever occurred in the annals of American crime.''

(MARCH 16) UPI - On the eve of St. Patrick's Day, President Bush says there is NO place for violence in creating a new future for Ireland. Bush accepted a gift of shamrocks from Ireland's deputy prime minister during a White House Rose Garden ceremony today. Lenihan says the shamrocks are ''a symbol of unity and the values'' Ireland shares with the American people. Bush wore a green tie and his wife Barbara wore a bright green dress in the tradtion of the holiday.

Pope John Paul says he's committed to promoting co-operation between Christians and Jews throughout the world. The pope held an audience today with an American Jewish Committee delegation in the Vatican. He said Christians and Jews must be united in combatting all forms of racial, ethnic or religious discrimination and hatred, including anti-Semitism.

(MARCH 16) UPI - Researchers confirm suspicions of a new hole in the ozone layer over the North Pole that is less severe than one previously detected over the South Pole. Studies in the Geophysical Research Letters indicate that the upper atmosphere over the Arctic apparently suffered ozone losses of five to seven percent in the winter of 1988-1989. A 50 percent ozone decline was recorded over the Antarctic during its worst season of ozone destruction. Ozone gas shields Earth from the sun's ultra-violet rays.

Republican National Chairman Lee Atwater reportedly says his recent look at his own mortality has made him a changed man. A South Carolina newspaper reports that Atwater... known for his negative, hardball politics... plans to be kinder and gentler in the future. Reflecting on the recent diagnosis of his benign brain tumor, Atwater is quoted as saying he CAN'T imagine ''getting back in a fighting mood.''

(MARCH 16) UPI - Oil prices resumed their downward drift in quiet trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange Friday, apparently unmoved by a Vienna meeting of OPEC oil ministers who control more than a third of the world's crude oil output.

The benchmark West Texas Intermediate crude for April delivery dropped 31 cents to $20.07 a barrel on the exchange, a decline of 36 cents on the week. Estimated volume was a moderately light 66,886 contracts.

WTI fell 30 cents on the U.S. Gulf Coast cash market to $20.10 a barrel, a loss of 30 cents on the week.

Unleaded gasoline for April delivery dropped 0.98 cent to 56.96 cents a gallon on the Merc, still 1.97 cents higher than a week ago.

May delivery gasoline contracts, where most of the Merc action has been recently, dove 1.37 cents to 61.57 cents a gallon, a gain of 1.06 cents on the week.

Unleaded gasoline on the New York Harbor cash market slipped 0.85 cent to 55.20 cents a gallon, ending 3.35 cents higher than a week ago.

The 13 oil ministers of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries kicked off their Vienna meeting Friday to reassess world prices in light of the cartel's output limits, but the session produced no market-moving news.

''There was a lack of any fires,'' said Gail Sagel of Paine Webber Inc. in New York, referring to refinery fires that often drive oil prices up.

Peter Beutel of Elders Futures Inc. in New York noted that there has been downward pressure on crude prices this month as refineries curtail output during their seasonal maintenance ''turnarounds'' from heating oil to gasoline production.

''There's a lack of demand for crude during the turnaround period,'' the analyst said.

This was reflected in a report Tuesday by the oil industry's American Petroleum Institute showing that crude inventories rose 7 million barrels last week and that gasoline stocks fell for the first time in nine weeks.

The fall in crude prices over the week, coinciding with an increase in the price of gasoline, returned the ''crack spread'' between these prices ''to more where it should be,'' said Paine Webber's Michael McDermott.

The crack spread ended Friday on the Merc at $3.85 a barrel, versus $1.66 a week ago.

On the European spot market, Britain's widely traded North Sea Brent crude skidded 30 cents to $18.30 a barrel, 38 cents below its week-ago level.

The United Arab Emirates' Dubai light - the key OPEC crude from the Middle East shipped mainly to the Far East - fell 15 cents to $15.70 a barrel, a weekly decline of 30 cents.

On the Merc, home heating oil for April delivery declined 0.52 cent to 54.46 cents a gallon, 0.60 cent higher than last Friday. It gained 0.8 cent to 57.95 cents a gallon on the New York Harbor cash market.

Oil prices had moved up sharply Thursday after ARCO Pipeline Co. shut down its pipeline carrying crude from Houston to its Cushing, Okla., midwestern distribution terminal because of a rupture Tuesday night.

Spokesman Earl Sims in ARCO's Dallas office said an alternative line rigged around the rupture was in the process of being tested. ''If the test is successful, we'll be back in operation tomorrow,'' he said. ''That's our plan at least.''

Because of several days of supply stored along the pipeline, there haven't been any shortages of deliveries thusfar at Cushing, Sims said, adding: ''If we get back in operation by tomorrow, we shouldn't experience any shortages.''

SAN DIEGO (MARCH 16) UPI - Seven Guardian Angels were arrested on misdemeanor battery and false imprisonment charges following a late-night scuffle with two men on a downtown street, police said Friday.

The self-appointed crimefighters were placed under citizen's arrest at 11:30 p.m. Tuesday and later were cited by police for assaulting Melvin Jackson and Thomas Criner without cause, police spokesman Bill Robinson said.

The citations were issued after witnesses in a nearby bar told police that Jackson and Criner had done nothing to provoke the fight, Robinson said.

The seven Angels, including six members in their early 20s and one teenager, were released after signing written promises to appear in court later this month.

Jackson and Criner were not arrested, and no one was hurt in the incident.

''The Angels believed they saw one of the two men involved in a narcotics transaction and they decided to take action - which is something no citizen should do,'' Robinson said.

''Their function, as we see it, is to serve as our eyes and ears, not to be enforcers or vigilantes. This action smacks of vigilantism,'' he said.

Weston Conwell, the Guardian Angels' regional coordinator, said the seven members would fight the misdemeanor charges in court and would likely file countercharges against Jackson and Criner.

''We have a problem with the San Diego Police Department and we're setting up a meeting with them right now to express our concern over what happened last night,'' Conwell said.

He alleged Jackson is ''a habitual crack dealer, someone we've had repeated altercations with and someone the police have had repeated altercations with.

''When we catch someone smoking crack, they have broken the law and we confront them. Usually, they dispose of the drugs and go on their way. But Jackson became explosive and started throwing punches. At that point, we had to take him down,'' said Conwell.

Guardian Angels in other cities have been cited by police for their activities on the street.

Last year, 40 Guardian Angels were arrested in New York City on misdemeanor charges while conducting a sweep of Restaurant Row. The Angels were released and charges were later dropped, Conwell said.

In the mid-1980s, the Angels patrolled the U.S.-Mexican border to protect illegal aliens from robbers, Robinson said.

''But they left the area about 3 or 4 years ago, after they were robbed along the border. Then, about a year ago, they announced a new recruiting drive and began patrolling selected area of the city,'' he said.

''This is the first report we've had of a confrontation between the Angels and citizens. There are those citizens who stand by the Angels and appreciate their companionship. And there are those who do not,'' he said.

SAN FRANCISCO (MARCH 16) UPI - Jurors in the corruption trial of federal judge Robert Aguilar said Friday they are deadlocked on all eight counts against Aguilar and two codefendants, but the panel was ordered to keep deliberating.

U.S. District Judge Louis Bechtle ordered the panel back to the jury room to continue deliberations after six full days. The judge instructed all the jurors to reconsider their positions.

Outside the courtroom, Patrick Hallinan, attorney for Aguilar, said he would seek a mistrial if jurors are unable to reach agreement Friday.

Hallinan said he believes the jurors are split 9-3 in favor of the defense. But there was no disclosure in court of how the juror vote stands.

''These people look like they are committed to their positions. I don't think they are going to move a bit,'' Hallinan said.

Aguilar is the first federal judge in the nation accused of racketeering, an allegation usually reserved for organized crime targets. His trial began Feb. 5.

Aguilar was indicted June 13, 1989, after a two-year investigation by the FBI that included wiretaps on the judge's home and courthouse chambers telephones.

The eight-count indictment charged Aguilar with using his judicial office in an effort to influence two other judges in the handling of two criminal cases, helping his former secretary remain a fugitive in Mexico for 10 years to avoid a prison term for tax evasion.

He was also accused of disclosing wiretap information and lying to the FBI.

The alleged crimes took place between August 1980 and April 1988, according to the indictment.

Charged with him were Rudy Tham, 66, a convicted Teamster Union embezzler, and Abe Chapman, 83, a self-described mob assassin of the 1930s nicknamed ''The Trigger.''

Since 1980, three other federal judges have been indicted on various criminal charges. All three were impeached from their lifetime posts by Congress.

The 58-year-old jurist testified for two days as the only witness in his own defense during the trial.

Four federal judges, all colleagues of Aguilar's, testified as witnesses for the prosecution.

Throughout his meticulous testimony Aguilar denied any wrongdoing and contradicted the testimony of numerous prosecution witnesses, including at least one of the four judges who testified.

Aguilar, a Jimmy Carter appointee, has maintained that he was the victim of overzealous FBI agents and government prosecutors bent on toppling a liberal judge.

During his 10-year career on the bench, Aguilar blocked federal aerial herbicide spraying of suspected marijuana fields and halted a nationwide immigration service program of unannounced factory sweeps for illegal aliens.

Aguilar also temporarily stopped deportation of an Irish Republican Army terrorist wanted on a murder charge in London. Changes in the U.S. treaty with Britain were required to get the man deported.

The central crime in the eight-count indictment stems from the three-way relationship between Aguilar, Chapman - who is a relative of Aguilar's by marriage, and Tham.

Though Aguilar and Tham never met, the government contends they conspired to influence U.S. District Judge Stanley Weigel using Chapman and Tham's attorney Edward Solomon as go-betweens.

Tham tried unsuccessfully to get Weigel to grant a hearing on Tham's effort to overturn his 1980 embezzling conviction.

Weigel testified that Aguilar did nothing improper but simply asked him once about the date for a hearing in Tham's case.

The government said Tham got Aguilar's brother an $11 per hour warehouse job in exchange for his help.

Aguilar was also accused of conspiring to influence U.S. District Judge Sam Conti in the trial of Aguilar's longtime friend and ex-casino owner Ronald Cloud, a Fresno businessman convicted in 1987 in a $20 million bank fraud.

Cloud had given Aguilar a $12,000 interest-free lifetime loan in 1983.

Aguilar said he only wanted to warn Conti he planned to testify as a character witness for Cloud.

Aguilar also purportedly helped his former secretary Vera Hoff remain a fugitive in Mexico for 10 years to avoid a two-year sentence for tax evasion.

Hoff testified that Aguilar bought her custom-built San Jose, Calif. home with no down payment in 1979, shortly before she fled to Mexico.

She also said Aguilar visited her twice in Acapulco in 1981 and 1982, bringing his girlfriend, Susan Penland, who later slapped the judge with a palimony suit. That case is still pending.

Aguilar denied he knew Hoff was a fugitive saying Hoff told him only her sentence ''had been taken care of.''

He also was charged with lying to the FBI about his role in Tham's case and disclosing wiretap information to Chapman, a convicted felon.

In the last decade three federal judges have been indicted - Harry Claiborne, Nevada, in December 1983; Walter Nixon, Mississippi, 1985; and Alcee Hastings, Florida, 1981.

Claiborne and Nixon were convicted of various charges. Hastings was acquitted.

All three were impeached and removed from office by Congress.

NEW YORK (MARCH 16) UPI - U.S. government securities prices rose Friday on release of a motley batch of economic figures, shaking off the news that wholesale prices excluding those of food and energy were up 0.4 percent last month.

The government said industrial production increased 0.6 percent in February, led by the automobile industry, after declining 1 percent in January. But it also said housing starts were off by 7 percent, following a weather-related 24.7 percent increase in the first month of the year.

That news was not shocking, particularly after the stunning increase the week before in employment, which drove bond prices down. And the figures could be looked at in different lights to yield different conclusions.

''There's a little bit in there for everybody,'' said Donald Straszheim, chief economist for Merrill Lynch Capital Markets. ''The markets did reasonably well, but I don't think the reaction was all that much to these data.''

''We're getting a lot of volatility and the numbers continue to be volatile,'' said Roger Shields, Chemical Bank's international economist, adding, ''Clearly, the bond market liked what they saw.''

At the end of trading Friday, the benchmark 30-year bond, the 8 1/2 of 2020, was at 99 17/32 for a yield of 8.54 percent, compared with 98 20/32 and 8.63 one week before, a gain of 7/8 point or $8.75 for each $1,000 face value.

The bond rose 3/4 point from its Thursday close of 98 25/32 and 8.61 percent.

Straszheim said that despite higher industrial output, manufacturing is ''quite anemic still'' and the overall industrial outlook ''not strong.''

Bond prices tend to rise on signs of economic weakness that make a stronger case for the Federal Reserve Board to lower interest rates, which improves the relative return on long-term bonds. Most analysts say, though that the Fed is unlikely to ease credit given the current economic tone.

The producer price index of wholesale inflation held steady, perhaps pleasing some bond investors even if its core components - excluding food and energy - rose by 0.4 percent, nearly a 5 percent annual rate. ''That's too high, and really not good news,'' Straszheim said.

But Shields called the steady producer price index ''a huge change from the last number'' in January, which rose by 1.8 percent.

''I would guess that (bond) markets are saying that things were not as bad as we thought, but I don't think that's a rousing vote of confidence,'' Shields said. He said he was still concerned about upward pressure on U.S. yields from inflation in other major industrial countries.

Bond market expectations of inflation, which can nibble away at bond returns, tend to drive down government securities prices and push up yields, the market-determined interest rates on bonds.

''It's not a very pretty picture - high interest rates and inflation which is not really bad but is worrisome,'' Shields said.

Ten-year Treasury notes closed at 99 16/32 to yield 8.57 percent, compared with 99 3/32 and 8.64 percent a week earlier. Five-year Treasury notes closed at 99 17/32 for a yield of 8.60 percent, against 99 8/32 and 8.67 percent.

Three-year Treasury notes closed at 99 12/32 for a yield of 8.62 percent, compared with 99 6/32 and 8.69 percent. Two-year notes closed at 99 24/32 for a yield of 8.64 percent, against 99 20/32 and 8.71 percent.

Six-month Treasury bills ended at a discount rate of 7.85 to yield 8.28 percent, compared with the previous week's yield of 8.31 percent. Three-month T-bills ended at a discount rate of 7.91 percent to yield 8.18 percent, against a yield of 8.24 percent a week before.

Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc.'s index of long-term Treasury bonds was up 9.18 points for the week, or 0.72 percent, to close at 1,284.17.

The Federal funds rate closed at 8 1/4 percent, the perceived Federal Reserve target rate of 8 1/4 percent. The Fed funds rate, which banks charge each other for overnight loans, is a building block for most other rates.

PAWTUCKET, RI (MARCH 19) UPI - The remains of a woman buried nearly a century ago have been pulled from a cemetery vault and scattered about, and police said Friday they are seeking to find out who was behind the grisly deed.

Detective Lt. Thomas Harris said it appeared some of the bones pulled out, including the skull, were stolen, but it was difficult to determine because most of them were in small pieces.

John Mullin, the caretaker of Oak Grove Cemetery, said it appeared to him that the incident may have been the work of a satanic cult. Cult members typically look for ''certain bones,'' such as the skull, to use for rituals, he said.

But Harris said the cemetery desecration, which occurred sometime late Wednesday or early Thursday, may also have been either a prank by teenagers or the work of thieves in search of valuables.

Police were investigating to determine who was responsible. Harris said he had a lead but declined to elaborate.

Mullin said he found the bones scattered about the vault of the woman Thursday morning. There were also pieces of her casket, clothing, a hat and an old wooden comb.

The casket and vault were damaged by water seepage over the years, making it difficult to determine whether anything had been stolen, Harris said.

The culprits may have chosen the burial site because removing a concrete cover to get into a vault is easier than digging up a grave, he said. There was evidence the culprits used tools to remove the cover, Harris added.

Pathologists and anthropologists will be called in to examine the remains.

On Friday morning, Mullin said he and detectives found mysterious backward writing and drawings on another tomb at Oak Grove. He described the drawing as a some type of ''scroll work'' that looked like an ''angel in flight.''

SAN FRANCISCO (MARCH 16) UPI - A federal judge Friday temporarily blocked the Navy from conducting random drug tests on civilian employees, except those who operate aircraft and dangerous machinery and those with top-secret security clearances.

U.S. District Court Judge Lowell D. Jensen, on constitutional grounds, also prohibited the Navy from testing civilian workers after an accident unless there was reasonable cause to suspect drug use.

Jensen ruled that the Navy's ''Drug-Free Workplace Program'' program is too broad and barred the service from implementing parts of the program while he considers a lawsuit filed by unions and other groups representing about 300,000 civilian Navy workers around the world.

In a separate but similar decision, Jensen also ruled that 6,000 employees of the federal Office of Personnel Management - which administers government personnel policies - may not be forced to take drug tests merely because they are involved in an accident. He said, however, that OPM may require a post-accident test if it has reasonable suspicion that an employee has used drugs.

''OPM employees do not pose a sufficient threat to public safety (to allow post-accident testing without reasonable cause),'' Jensen wrote. ''They merely drive government vehicles on public roads. Their mistakes, whether drug-related or otherwise, do not have catastrophic consequences. ... In this manner, OPM employees are unlike nuclear power plants workers, air traffic controllers, railroad workers, and oil tanker crews.''

The American Federation of Government Employees, which represents about 74,000 Navy Department employees and 700,000 government workers worldwide, said the ruling in the Navy case stopped what it called ''highly invasive and demeaning drug testing.''

''This decision proves that the courts will not allow the government to subject federal workers to agency drug testing programs without adequate justification,'' AFGE President John Sturdivant said.

''Though AFGE shares the desire to stop the illegal flow and use of drugs in this country, we cannot support the wholesale deprivation of federal employees' constitutional rights,'' Sturdivant said.

The Navy drug program would have required about 80,000 employees to submit to random drug testing. All 300,000 civilian employees would have been subject to testing after an accident.

While blocking random testing of employees in less hazardous occupations, Jensen permitted random drug tests for Navy civilian employees whose specific duties require them to operate potentially dangerous machinery, including aircraft crews, loboaotive engineers and boat operators.

He also blocked automatic testing of workers in ''national security'' areas, unless they hold top secret clearances.

MIAMI BEACH, FL (MARCH 19) UPI - A key congressman Friday proposed a $7.5 billion cap on spending for the superconducting supercollider, one of the most ambitious scientific projects ever and one whose estimated cost has skyrocketed.

Rep. Robert A. Roe, D-N.J., chairman of the House Science, Space and Technology Committee, announced his proposal to scientists and industrialists at the 1990 International Industrial Symposium on the Supercollider.

The $7.5 billion limit is $500 million below what the Energy Department estimated last week as the total cost of the atom smasher, to be built in Texas.

Roe told the 700 industrialists, scientists and educators he plans to present his proposal in the form of a bill to his committee next week.

The measure would place a $5 billion ceiling on federal expenditures for the project and proposes allowing state funds, private donations and international investment to make up the difference.

The state of Texas has pledged $1 billion for the project. Before design changes pushed the total cost estimate to $8 billion, the administration said it expected foreign participants would contribute an additional one-third.

Rep. Jim Chapman, D-Texas, a member of the House Appropriations Committee and project supporter, said international investment will be the key to obtaining the $318 million in funding for the project in the next fiscal year that the Bush administration is requesting.

''Make no mistake about it: This is not a done deal,'' Chapman said. ''The international plan is a major component to make it work. It's as important as the price.''

Roe said opponents of the supercollider who feel the money would be better spent on Medicare, Medicaid and other social programs were expected to try to reduce spending for the project.

''What's important is to get the (financial) dimensions now,'' he said, adding that, without the authorization bill, there will be annual fights in Congress to keep the project going.

''If pro-defense people insist on maintaining full-strength support for the military despite the recent changes in the world, we're going to get squeezed on the domestic side to do all we need to do,'' Chapman said. ''The SSC could get caught up in it.''

The Energy Department is scheduled to brief congressmen Wednesday on the international participation plan. Deputy Energy Secretary W. Henson Moore said he expects to begin negotiating with foreign governments on the SSC foreign investment plan in June.

The Energy Department Thursday accepted the design of the super collider, clearing the way for Texas to buy 17,000 acres of land as the site of the atom smasher, which could help scientists better understand the fundamental nature of energy and matter.

The DOE approval of the design was necessary before Texas could begin buying the land needed for the underground tunnel of supermagnets 54 miles in circumference. The ring would slant into northwestern Ellis County, Texas, and encircle the city of Waxahachie.

The supercollider would hurl protons at the speed of light through the tunnel where they would crash into one another, breaking into subnuclear particles. Scientists hope to extend their understanding of the atom and the strong and weak electromagnetic forces that hold it together by observing the breakup of the particles.

Among the alternative funding options Roe listed were industrial donations and university contributions. He also proposed accepting offers from major hotel chains to provide the housing needed at the site for visiting scientists.

Roe urged those attending the symposium to lobby hard in Congress for the research instrument. Other big ticket scientific projects competing for federal dollars are a proposed space station, expedition to Mars and fusion research.

PORTLAND, OR (MARCH 19) UPI - A federal court jury Friday rejected claims of sexual discrimination filed by the nation's first woman big-city police chief against Mayor Bud Clark and the city.

The jurors, three women and three men, said unanimously they found no evidence that sexual discrimination played a role in Clark's decision to appoint a commission that recommended in 1986 that Portland Police Chief Penny Harrington be replaced, leading to her resignation.

''I am very happy with the verdict,'' Clark said as he walked from the courthouse. ''I was suprised it came so soon.''

The jury deliberated for less than five hours after hearing three weeks of testimony.

Harrington was the first woman in the nation to head a big-city police agency when she was appointed by Clark in 1985.

She served for only 18 months before Clark appointed a commission to look into complaints about the way she reorganized the Police Bureau's vice squad and into allegations that her husband, police officer Gary Harrington, had tipped off an old friend that he was under investigation in a drug case.

The commission, headed by former U.S. Attorney Sidney Lezak, recommended disciplinary action that resulted in a 10-day suspension of Gary Harrington. It also recommended that the chief be replaced because of an uncompromising mangement style and because she had lost the support of top command officers.

The 49-year-old policewoman argued that her job performance never would have been reviewed by a special commission in public hearings had she been a male rather than the nation's first female chief.

Harrington said she was disappointed with the verdict and had not made a decision on whether to appeal.

''We knew it was an uphill fight,'' she said. ''There have been four years of stigma attached to my name.

''At least the truth of what happened came out and I had an opportunity to clear my name,'' she said. ''I don't consider it a defeat.''

JERSEY CITY, NJ (MARCH 16) UPI - Five members of a family were found dead in their basement apartment Friday by police called to their home by a family friend who had not seen them in more than a week, authorities said.

The initial investigation centered on the heating system in the eight-unit four-story building, said Glenn Cunningham, a Jersey City police lieutenant.

''The cause is undetermined, but it seems they are focusing on some type of asphyxiation,'' he said. ''They are looking at the heating system, but no cause has been determined at this point.''

Neighbors reported that the building did not have heat and the family used a propane heater to keep themselves warm. The building, which has been undergoing renovations for a number of years, did not have gas service, Public Service Electric & Gas Co. said.

The names of the victims were not released, pending notification of next of kin.

Found dead in the only occupied apartment in the four-story building were a 35-year-old male, a 27-year-old female and three boys, aged 6, 3 and 1 year old, Cunningham said.

TEGA CAY, SC (MARCH 19) UPI - The origin of a fire that destroyed Jim and Tammy Bakker's former mansion could not be determined after a weeklong probe, South Carolina's top arson investigator said Friday.

Gerald Brooks, arson control officer for the state fire marshal, said the ''near-total destruction'' of the $1 million home prevented him from reaching any conclusion on the cause of the blaze.

If there was any evidence of arson, it was consumed in the fire, Brooks said at a news conference at the Tega Cay fire station.

He described the owner of the mansion, pizza parlor chain owner Robert Rubino, 48, as very cooperative during the investigation.

The home, sold to Rubino at bankruptcy auction after the Bakkers were evicted during the PTL scandal, was once touted as an example of the opulent lifestyle of the convicted former television evangelist and his wife.

The Bakkers lived in the four-bedroom home from 1981 to 1987. It featured three kitchens, a music room, an exercise room, electronically controlled draperies, 25 closets and a master bedroom that had his-and-hers bathroom suites connected by a sunken whirlpool tub flanked by a glass-enclosed rock garden.

The Bakkers were evicted from the five-level parsonage after his fall from grace over a sex scandal. The Rev. Jerry Falwell - who took control of Bakker's PTL ministry - ordered them out, persuaded a federal bankruptcy court to issue an eviction notice and then, when they had finally left, changed the locks.

Bakker is serving a 45-year prison sentence at the Federal Medical Center in Rochester, Minn., for his conviction last fall on 24 counts of fleecing PTL followers.

(MARCH 16) UPI - Americans mark a grim anniversary- the end of Terry Anderson's fifth year in captivity... South Africa's president pushes ahead with his racial reform programs... and a stranded communications satellite gets a boost. Those and other stories, next, from U-P-I.

President Bush today spoke out about the plight of the eight American hostages in Lebanon.

The president says the fate of the hostages concerns him every single day and he will continue to ''do everything'' possible to win their release.

Bush revealed that he's been in contact with Syria's president about the situation, but he says he has NO good news to share. He told reporters that he DOESN'T ''want to get the hopes up through a lot of speculation and have them dashed down.''

But he pledged to- in his words- ''keep on talking, keep on trying... sometimes privately, sometimes publicly ... to get those hostages out of there.''

For weeks, there have been reports and speculation of behind-the-scenes negotiations to free the hostages.

Bush's remarks today come on the fifth anniversary of the kidnapping of American journalist Terry Anderson. Yesterday, the captors of three other kidnapped Americans threatened to kill them unless the United States meets their demands.

DAYTONA BEACH, FL (MARCH 19) UPI - Two members of the rock 'n' roll band Red Hot Chili Peppers were arrested Friday on charges they jumped from the stage during a spring break performance and assaulted a woman in the audience.

Bass guitarist Michael Balzary of Los Angeles, known by the stage name ''Flea,'' was charged with battery, disorderly conduct and solicitation to commit an unnatural and lascivious act, authorities said. Drummer Chad Smith, 28, of Los Angeles was charged with battery.

Both were arrested at a Daytona Beach hotel about 12:45 a.m. Friday, booked, then released on bond. Balzary was free on $2,000 bond and Smith on $1,000 bond, said Volusia County beach ranger Guy Grasso.

Authorities said the woman was bruised and shaken.

''I think she sustained the injuries by trying to fight them off, when she was slammed to the ground by one of them. The other bruise she sustained to her leg when the other member tried to rip off her bathing suit,'' said beach ranger Sgt. Ray Caruso.

The four-man Los Angeles band, best known for its 1989 album ''Mother's Milk,'' was performing on the beach before a spring break crowd and for MTV cameras Wednesday when band members ''became wild on stage'' and began ''beating up'' their equipment, Grasso said. Then, Balzary and Smith jumped into the crowd.

Balzary picked up the woman and began to spin her around on his shoulders, while Smith pulled her bathing suit to one side and began to slap her bottom, Grasso said.

Officials said Balzary got on top of the woman, asked her to perform a sex act, then began to simulate the act.

After the woman cried for help, the band was escorted away.

The woman apparently was picked from the audience at random and has signed a complaint against the band members, Grasso said.

Kathy Watson, the band's publicist in New York, said the incident had been exaggerated.

Tina Exarhos, an MTV spokeswoman, said the performance would be aired this weekend on the cable channel, but the off-stage incident would be edited out.

(MARCH 16) UPI - Defense Secretary Cheney says it's a shame what happened to Libya's chemical factory, but he says the fire that damaged the plant was probably attributable more to ''Libyan incompetence'' than anything else.

The United States charged last week that the plant was making chemical weapons, but Libya says it was producing pharmaceuticals.

Libya says the plant was sabotaged and has threatened to retaliate if it's determined that West German intelligence was involved.

In Bonn, a spokesman today denied any West German responsibility for the fire and called for a halt to threats against Germans in Libya.

But Cheney dismisses the threats by Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi , saying- quote- ''If I were the Germans, I don't think I'd be quaking in my boots at this point.''

At the same time, Cheney noted that Gadhafi has resorted to terrorism in the past by launching attacks against Americans and others around the world.

More steps are being taken in South African President Frederik de Klerk's reform plan.

The first formal meeting between the African National Congress and de Klerk's National Party government will take place next month. And de Klerk unveiled plans to privatize state assets to help finance a one-point-one-BILLION-dollar black development fund.

De Klerk today announced that he would meet with Nelson Mandela and other senior A-N-C leaders on April 11th in Cape Town. The working-level talks will focus on obstacles remaining in the way of formal power-sharing negotiations.

Major hurdles include the release of all political prisoners and the end of a 45-month-old state of emergency.

De Klerk said he wanted to lift the emergency, but could NOT because of violence that has claimed more than 200 lives in the past month.

(MARCH 16) UPI - A rift between Great Britain and Iraq over yesterday's execution of a London-based journalist is heating up.

Britain's ambassador to Iraq returned home today after being recalled as part of his nation's retaliatory measures for the hanging of Farzad Bazoft.

Those measures also include the suspension of all planned ministerial visits to Iraq and the expulsion of six Iraqis who were training with the British military.

The Iraqi government also got into the act... saying it's organizing massive anti-British demonstrations for tomorrow in response to Britain's diplomatic actions.

The British media today raised questions about why the Iranian-born Bazoft was ever allowed to travel to Iraq. A newspaper report suggests that it was a bad idea, considering the recent war between Iran and Iraq.

A former aide to John Poindexter told a federal court in Washington today that there was an obvious gap in false White House chronologies about secret U-S arms sales to Iran.

Ronald Sable, testifying in Poindexter's Iran-Contra trial, says he saw an immediate problem with the chronologies, which are a key part of the case against Poindexter.

According to Sable, the chronologies showed former President Reagan saying in October 1985 that NO arms had been traded for hostages. But in January 1986 there was a so-called presidential ''finding'' authorizing arms transfers.

The ''finding'' was actually a new version of a previous document Reagan had signed that explicitly linked the secret arms sales to release of the hostages.

Sable was in charge of National Security Council congressional relations under Poindexter, who's accused of five felony counts of lying to Congress and obstructing its investigation of the Iran-Contra scandal.

LOS ANGELES (MARCH 19) UPI - A federal jury Friday rejected a freelance journalist's claim that police violated his civil rights by forcing him to destroy his own film after he took photographs at a reception for Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir.

After three hours of deliberations, the jury absolved a police detective and a federal agent of any wrongdoing alleged in the 1988 lawsuit filed by journalist Terrence Mulgannon.

''The jury system truly works and justice was done,'' Assistant City Attorney Victoria Chaney said.

Mulgannon, 38, of West Los Angeles had contended detective David Weller, now head of the Police Department's bomb squad, confronted him at the gathering at the Simon Wiesenthal Center and threatened to arrest him if he did not turn over film of photographs he had taken.

Rather than allow police to confiscate the film, Mulgannon broke the film cartridge and exposed it himself.

Mulgannon, now an associate editor at a national sports magazine, testified he destroyed the film himself because he feared his name would be placed in police intelligence files.

The detective asked Mulgannon for the film at the prompting of a federal agent, who was concerned his picture had been taken by Mulgannon.

The agent, William Queen of the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, testified he was preparing for an undercover assignment at the time and felt it could be jeopardized if his identity was exposed to the public in photographs.

Mulgannon said he attended the event while ''on a journalistic fishing expedition'' for a story about terrorism for a publication called ''Terrorism, Violence and Insurgency.''

Mulgannon said Weller ''threatened to arrest me unless I did something with the film.'' He said the detective told him there was a federal law against photographing ''foreign agents.''

Weller, however, testified that his exchange with Mulgannon was amicable and he never threatened him with arrest. Weller said Mulgannon voluntarily exposed the film.

Mulgannon testified he remembered photographing an Israeli agent at the gathering, during which Shamir unveiled the cornerstone for a new Museum of Tolerance to commemorate victims of the Holocaust. But Mulgannon said he had no recollection of taking pictures of Queen.

(MARCH 16) UPI - Technicians at Cape Canaveral, Florida, are busy today working on a couple of potentially costly problems.

Intelstat engineers are trying to determine the feasibility of using a shuttle to rescue a 150-Million-dollar satellite that's stranded in orbit.

The Intelsat communications satellite was fired up by remote control and boosted into a higher, long-term orbit today... eliminating the risk of its falling back into the Earth's atmosphere.

The satellite became stranded on Wednesday after it failed to separate from the second stage of its Titan-3 rocket shortly after liftoff.

NASA technicians are working to resolve a potential problem threatening to delay the April 12th launch of the shuttle Discovery.

Discovery was hauled to its launch pad today for final processing in preparation for the flight. The shuttle is set to carry the Hubble Space Telescope into orbit.

But a potential problem with the ship's nose landing gear could push blastoff back by a week or more.

Political leaders in Israel are wrangling over the task of forming a new government.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, who heads the Likud Party, and rival Labor Party leader Shimon Peres met with members of their parties today and began contacts with other parties to form a coalition government.

Israeli President Chaim Herzog begins political consultations tomorrow to determine which party will attempt to form the new government.

Shamir's government collapsed yesterday when a historic NO-confidence vote was approved, and now he's facing mounting pressure to resign as head of his party.

Meanwhile, Peres is speaking optimistically about his chances of leading Israel's next government.

He told Tel Aviv high school students that he believes he will be able to form a coalition excluding Likud.

NEWPORT BEACH, CA (MARCH 19) UPI - The consulting psychiatrist for a Sierra Nevada camp for troubled youths pleaded innocent Friday to charges he sexually abused a patient after drugging him with prescribed medication.

Dr. James H. White, charged with performing oral copulation of the patient while the man was under the influence of an anesthetic, entered his innocent plea at a Harbor Municipal Court arraignment.

The charge is a felony that carries a maximum penalty of eight years in prison.

White, 47, has been a consulting psychiatrist at Camp O'Neal for about 18 months, and is listed on state records as a director of the non-profit corporation that runs the facility.

Three youths and two counselors from the camp were among seven people who drowned at a lake during an outing last month.

In addition to the criminal investigation by police and prosecutors, White is also the subject of an investigation by the California Medical Board in which he faces possible suspension or revocation of his medical license.

White was arrested Thursday at his Newport Beach office after investigators obtained search warrants that were based on information from one of White's patients alleging the psychiatrist performed oral sex while the patient was under anesthesia and photographed the act.

Investigators said the encounter allegedly took place at White's home in Corona del Mar last summer. The 29-year-old alleged victim was unaware of the incident until early this year, when he found photographs of the act among the doctor's belongings, police Sgt. Andy Gonis said. The victim contacted police March 5.

The alleged victim, whose name was not released, told investigators that White treated him for stress related to a back injury. At some point, Gonis said, the two became friends and White invited the patient to stay through the summer at his home.

The man said White gave him tranquilizers that often made him doze off, but that he did not suspect anything until early this year when he found the photographs. The patient also told investigators he saw pictures and videotapes of other men who appeared to be unconscious as White performed sex acts on them.

In an outing last month, three youths from the camp, two counselors and two would-be rescuers drowned when they fell through the ice at Convict Lake.

The state closed the camp Friday after an investigation of the Feb. 19 drownings uncovered allegations of sexual abuse of youths and other violations of state regulations.

(MARCH 16) UPI - The sister of American hostage Terry Anderson says the release of her brother and seven other American captives in Lebanon should only be made on what she called ''honorable'' terms. Peggy Say told a somber rally in Washington marking the fifth anniversary of Anderson's captivity that she's NO longer willing to pay any price to win the hostages' release. She said she just wants her brother back... and expressed hope that behind-the-scene efforts will lead to his freedom ''in the coming weeks.''

Senator Daniel Moynihan says he's against a deficit reduction plan offered by Illinois Congressman Dan Rostenkowski. The New York Democrat says Rostenkowski's plan would cut Social Security benefits for an average retired couple by more than three-thousand dollars over five years. He says that if the plan is adopted, 400-thousand Social Security recipients ''would drop below the poverty line.''

A filibuster that began yesterday afternoon in the Maryland Senate is continuing today as abortion opponents try to block passage of a bill that would continue to make abortions widely available. Senate President Thomas Miller has scheduled votes on a motion to end the extended debate every two hours. If it's NOT voted down, the filibuster is expected to last several days.

The first meeting of Warsaw Pact foreign ministers since the beginning of the Soviet troop withdrawal in Eastern Europe will take place tomorrow in Prague, Czechoslovakia. The ministers will try to come to agreement on a position concerning German unification and a new security arrangement for Europe.

A House sub-committee listened to testimony today aimed at getting lawmakers to pass tougher child labor laws. Sub-committee members heard stories of children who were hired in violation of labor laws and were injured or killed on the job. The employers in those cases received fines of one-thousand dollars or less.

(MARCH 16) UPI - Associated Press reporter Terry Anderson has now been held hostage in Lebanon for five years. Friends and family of Anderson marked the anniversary today with a rally near the White House. President Bush assured them he is doing ''his very best'' to free the hostages. A pro-Iranian extremist group yesterday renewed its threats to kill three hostages.

The stranded Intelsat-6 satellite has successfully lifted itself into a higher orbit with its own on-board rockets. The 150-Million-dollar communications satellite is now in what's called a storage orbit, giving Intelsat engineers time to determine how they want to salvage the device. The satellite failed to reach its intended orbit when it did NOT detach from a Titan-3 rocket following launch Wednesday morning.

The African National Congress says Deputy President Nelson Mandela will lead it's delegation in talks next month with the South African government. South African President Frederik de Klerk announced today he would meet with the A-N-C leaders April 11th. The two sides will discuss demands which blacks say must be met before holding formal power-sharing talks.

A Connecticut judge has set a March 27th hearing date for a man arrested in one of the sniper attacks that have plagued Greyhound buses during the two-week-old strike against the company. (MARCH 16) UPI - The Alaska jury that will decide the fate of Exxon Valdez tanker Captain Joseph Hazelwood will NOT be sequestered when it begins deliberations next week. The judge in the case made the ruling today, one day after final testimony was presented. Closing arguments are scheduled for Tuesday, with the jury to begin deliberations the following day.

East Germany went through its final day of campaigning today on the way to the nation's first free elections on Sunday. The parties involved have agreed to halt campaigning tonight to give the country a full day of reflection before the polls open. Communist leaders claim to offer the voters stability, while pro-Western campaigners say they'll re-vitalize the economy.

Condemned killer Robert Alton Harris is one step closer to an April 3rd date with the gas chamber at California's San Quentin prison. The state Supreme Court in San Francisco today denied Harris' last-round appeal. That increases the likelihood he'll become the first prisoner put to death in California in 23 years. Harris' lawyers say they'll go to San Diego federal court next week in an effort to delay the execution.

A Los Angeles woman convicted in what authorities call the worst case of animal neglect in city history claims she was ''railroaded'' because of her beliefs. (MARCH 16) UPI - A former assistant to John Poindexter says there was an obvious gap in false White House chronologies about the arms sales in the Iran-Contra scandal.

Ronald Sable made the charge today during testimony at Poindexter's Iran-Contra trial in Washington.

Sable says the chronologies show former President Reagan saying in October 1985 that NO arms had been traded for hostages. He says they later show a presidential ''finding'' in January 1986 authorizing arms transfers to Iran.

That ''finding'' was a new version of a previous document that Reagan had signed... explicitly linking the secret arms sales to release of the hostages.

Oliver North had testified at the trial earlier that the chronologies were altered under the orders of Robert McFarlane... a former national security adviser who had left the government.

Prosecutors say Poindexter sent North a ''well done'' message that proves he was congratulating the former Marine for deceiving lawmakers.

Poindexter's trial is moving along rapidly and special prosecutor Dan Webb says he plans to rest his case next Monday.

The chairman of a House panel hearing testimony about violations of child labor laws is urging the Labor Department to release the names of 14-hundred businesses found to have illegally employed children.

California Democrat Tom Lantos says he'll give the department until April 1st to begin identifying the companies or he will do it himself.

Lantos' subcommittee today heard from people who want lawmakers to toughen penalties for violations of the child labor laws.

The testimony included stories about children who were killed or severely injured working for employers who never should have hired them. The employers in these cases received only fines of one-thousand dollars or less.

The Labor Department recently conducted a three-day nationwide sweep that found seven-thousand children working illegally.

But it wants to keep the names of the companies secret until determining whether citations should be issued against them.

(MARCH 16) UPI - Defense Secretary Cheney characterized the fire that ruined an alleged Libyan chemical-weapons plant this week as- in his sarcastic words- ''a darn shame.''

Cheney today rebuffed allegations both that the United States and West Germany were involved in the blaze. He attributed the fire to- quoting here- ''Libyan incompetence.''

Libya has threatened to retaliate if an investigation shows any West German involvement in the fire. That would mean sending home any West Germans in Libya, but it also hints at terrorism.

But Cheney today responded to the thinly veiled threats with the comment... ''If I were the Germans, I wouldn't be quaking in my boots.''

And as for Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi, Cheney said simply... ''He's had better weeks.''

East Germany is catching on quickly to the Western form of political campaigning.

NO fewer than 24 separate parties and alliances are jockeying for position in the nation's first free elections, set to take place on Sunday.

The campaign came to an end tonight, with the parties requested to allow tomorrow as a day of reflection for East German voters.

But it came to a rousing finale. With pro-Western campaigners saying they would re-vitalize the economy, the ailing Communist Party asserted that it would be political stability that would help lead the country out of its economic doldrums.

But the communists found new ways to present their old message. Their campaign music video featured the rock 'n' roll anthem ''Born to be Wild.'' And supporters of Communist leader Gregor Gysi have been seen wearing stickers reading, in English, ''Don't worry, take Gysi.''

Even so, the communists are NOT expected to take more than 15 percent of the vote Sunday.

(MARCH 16) UPI - There was NO dissension among the 15 members of the United Nations Security Council today when they presented with a plan for extending and enlarging the mandate of a U-N observer team in Nicaragua.

U-N Secretary General Perez de Cuellar unveiled the plan that calls for increased supervision of the demobilization of Nicaragua's Contra rebels and assisting the tranisition of the nation's government.

Diplomats say the Security Council voiced wide approval of the plan and it's likely to formally approve it next week.

The agreement calls for the observer group to be increased from 260 military personnel to 379. Venezuela would also provide an additional infantry battalion of about 800 soldiers to supervise the demobilization.

Perez de Cuellar says outgoing Nicaraguan President Ortega has requested the group remain in the country two months after its mandate expires May 7th.

The U-S government has granted the chimpanzee protection as an endangered species.

The U-S Fish and Wildlife Service had classified chimps as ''threatened.'' The new ''endangered'' designation outlaws any importation of chimps taken from the wild.

The population of chimps in Africa has plummeted from a high of two-Million to the current estimate of 175-thousand, with the drop attributed to overhunting and loss of habitat to humans. Pygmy chimpanzees- also considered an endangered species- number only 15-thousand.

Medical researchers were concerned about the implications of chimpanzees becoming an endangered species. Chimps have become an essential part of AIDS research because of their similarities to humans. The over one-thousand chimps now held at U-S biomedical study centers are exempt from the new restrictions.

BEIJING (MARCH 17) UPI - China has won a bidding competition to launch a communications satellite for a telecommunications consortium of eight Arab nations, a state-run news agency reported Saturday.

The semi-official China News Service said the satellite will be launched aboard a Chinese carrier rocket at the end of 1991 for the Arabian Satellite Communications Organization.

The Chinese government has been marketing its carrier rocket launch capability for several years. Its first commercial launch is planned next month for the Asiasat satellite, owned by a joint venture among Chinese, British and Hong Kong companies.

The report said the Arab consortium has already put two satellites in orbit since 1985. The organization's members include Oman, Kuwait, Saudi Arabia, Bahrain, Morocco, Iraq, Syria and Jordan.

CNS said the Chinese launch marketing firm, Great Wall Industrial Co., won in the bidding for the Arab satellite in a "sharp competition" against the European Ariane launch service. The report did not give further details.

The Asiasat satellite is to be launched between April 5-9 from the Chinese launch facility in Xichang, in remote southwest Sichuan Province. China has also signed contracts with Australia to launch two satellites in 1991 and 1992.

AGANA, GUAM (MARCH 17) UPI - The Guam Legislature, ignoring legal advice from the U.S. territory's attorney general, has approved a proposal to ban abortions, but Gov. Joseph Ada was still contemplating Saturday whether to sign the bill into law.

The Legislature approved the bill - a direct challenge to the Supreme Court's landmark Roe vs. Wade abortion decision - on March 9 in front of a gallery packed with anti-abortion advocates led by Catholic Archbishop Anthony Apuron. The archbishop had warned earlier that he would try to excommunicate any senator who voted against the bill.

The bill, which would essentially ban all abortions in Guam, would create what is believed to be the most restrictive abortion law in the United States or its territories, observers said. Under the measure, those performing an abortion could be charged with a felony, while women receiving an abortion could be charged with a misdemeanor.

The bill also includes a provision that would put the issue to a referendum during the Nov. 6 general election, allowing voters to make the final decision on whether the bill becomes law. That would make abortion a key issue in the gubernatorial and legislative elections being held at the same time.

The Legislature approved the anti-abortion bill despite an opinion from Elizabeth Barrett Anderson, the island's attorney general, that the measure was unconstitutional.

Anderson said the U.S. Supreme Court did not overturn Roe vs. Wade, its decision establishing a constitutional right to abortion, when it handed down a ruling last year that allowed states to determine whether abortions should be performed in public facilities at public expense.

Ada, the governor of Guam, has until March 21 to act on the bill, and a spokesman said Saturday that he was still considering what to do. He previously has indicated he would sign the bill into law in order to let the voters decide the issue in the November referendum.

But the American Civil Liberties Union, after learning about the passage of the bill, has stepped up pressure on the governor to veto the measure. Janet Benshoof, an ACLU legal expert on constitutional privacy issues, is expected to arrive in Guam next week to discuss the issue with Ada. Benshoof is also scheduled to address the Guam Press Club March 20.

The ACLU representative agreed with Guam's attorney general that if the measure is signed into law, it will be challenged in court long before the Nov. 6 referendum.

Carol O'Donnell, a clinical social worker, said there is already a plan to take the issue to court. Political observers on the island said that, if the governor signed the bill, there was little chance it would be approved in the November referendum.

EAST BERLIN (MARCH 17) UPI - East German candidates ended their campaigns to give voters a full day of reflection Saturday before choosing what is widely expected to be the first non-communist government in the nation's 40-year history.

Western-style speeches and propaganda marked final campaign rallies Friday night, with even the Communist Party displaying a campaign video to the tune of the rock anthem "Born to be Wild."

West German backers of the fledgling democratic parties, meanwhile, anxiously awaited the results of Sunday's elections, which could later play an important role in negotiations for the reunification of the two German states.

In the small town of Magdeburg, West German Economic Minister Helmut Hausman of the Free Democratic Party said the introduction of a Western-style economy was a prerequisite for the country's development.

Gregor Gysi, who heads East Germany's ailing Communist Party, told his audience at a rally in the northern town of Guestrow that political stability was needed to ensure economic success.

He repeated the message at a final rally at East Berlin's Alexander Platz - five months ago the scene of massive demonstrations that triggered the fall of the hardline communist leadership.

"What happened earlier in the party is an embarrassment, but there were honest, hardworking people in the party," said Rene Wiggers, a 73-year-old technician among the thousands who gave Gysi a roaring ovation.

Like dozens of others, Wiggers waved a huge East German flag in time to the music video, which featured Gysi astride a motorcycle explaining how the party will move the country forward. Many communist supporters in the audience proudly displayed stickers that read, in English, "Don't worry, take Gysi."

But most observers do not expect the party, now officially called the Party of Democratic Socialism, to gain much more than 15 percent of the vote. "We are starting from scratch again. We are looking forward to becoming a strong opposition, that in itself will be a victory," Wiggers said.

Other electioneers from East and West addressed numerous rallies throughout East Germany. East German political parties were told to stop campaigning late Friday to allow voters a full day before polls open early Sunday.

Analysts expect an extremely high turnout at Sunday's polls, the first free and secret elections since East Germany was formed as a Soviet satellite 40 years ago. Voters will choose among 24 parties and alliances.

Analysts predict the Social Democrats and the Conservatives will each win about one third of the vote. The two groups are likely to establish a coalition and form the country's first non-Communist government.

The State Department praised East German authorities for inviting representatives from the United States and the other 34 signers of the Helsinki Agreement on human rights and political issues to observe the elections.

Independent observers attended elections in Poland and Hungary last year, but East Germany is the first emerging democracy in Europe to invite all Helsinki Agreement nations, said State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler.

In the past, the Communist Party and other parties and organizations it backed presented all their candidates in a single list approved by the Central Committee. Virtually all candidates were elected amid claims of massive electoral fraud. A commission preparing the elections announced Friday measures aimed at preventing such irregularities.

The commission said party political meetings will be banned within the immediate vicinity of polling stations. It also banned parties from driving voters to the stations in cars bearing the symbol of a political party.

An East German conservative party backed by West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl, meanwhile, dismissed charges that its general secretary had had contacts with the secret police under the Communist leadership of Erich Honecker.

Spokesman Helmut Lueck of the East German Christian Democratic Party told the official East German news service ADN the accusation was being spread 36 hours before the opening of the polls in an effort to discredit the party allied with two other conservative parties in a bloc called the Alliance for Germany. Lueck said the party general secretary, Martin Kirchner, had sometime ago called "absurd" the allegations that he had contacts to the secret police.

The latest development comes after the alliance supported by Kohl was shaken Wednesday by the admission of Wolfgang Schnur, head of the Democratic Awakening - one of the three parties in the conservative bloc - that he had collaborated with the hated Stasi, the former State Security Ministry.

MOSCOW (MARCH 17) UPI - President Mikhail Gorbachev set a three-day deadline Saturday for Lithuania to respond to a ruling by the Soviet Congress of People's Deputies that labeled the republic's declaration of independence "null and void."

Gorbachev made the request in a telegram to Lithuania's new president, Vytautus Landsbergis, but did not specify what steps would be taken if Lithuania refuses to do so. Lithuania has repeatedly insisted on its right of secession from the Soviet Union.

The official Tass news agency said the telegram asked that "measures on the resolution's fulfillment be reported in a three-day period." The resolution, adopted Thursday by a vote of 1,463 to 94 with 128 abstentions said the declaration of independence was "null and void" and ruled that Soviet laws still apply throughout the republic.

Landsbergis, the Sajudis chief elected Lithuania's president Sunday after Parliament passed the independence declaration, said by phone from Vilnius that Gorbachev's message had a "patronizing character." But he added: "The tone of the message is not sharp. It is not an ultimatum."

Landsbergis said he would respond to the message by Monday in a "calm reply." But Landsbergis made his position clear late Thursday on republic television. He said the resolution approved Thursday in Moscow "was a decision taken by a foreign country and it was not relevant in Lithuania," Tass said. "It is not a problem that they (in Moscow) do not recognize us now," Landsbergis said. "The time will come and they will recognize us."

Politburo member Vadim Medvedev, however, said Moscow does not intend to hold negotiations with Lithuania despite Gorbachev's statement Thursday that he is ready for a "respectful dialogue." "We will not sit down at a table the way we do with foreign representatives," Medvedev told United Press International.

Friday, Lithuania suspended Communist Party activities at its main government and media agencies, and said it will set up 37 border checkpoints to stop the flow of goods to the rest of the Soviet Union, Tass said.

Acting Lithuanian Prime Minister Kazamira Prunskene, a leader of the Sajudis nationalist movement that swept the Feb. 24 parliamentary elections, said in a televised address Thursday evening that Lithuania is preparing documents spelling out the terms of secession from the Soviet Union, Tass said. The documents include a draft treaty and provisions for resolving border issues and the status of Soviet army troops in Lithuania, Prunskene said.

The Parliament's presidium, its executive arm meeting between legislative sessions, "also discussed measures to limit the uncontrolled export of commodities from the republic," Tass said. "Toward that end, it is planned to set up 37 border checkpoints shortly."

The obstruction of goods going from Lithuania to the other 14 Soviet republics could be the first salvo in a budding economic war between Vilnius and Moscow, which has threatened to block oil, gas, and other vital supplies Lithuania gets from the rest of the country.

At his first news conference in his new and more powerful presidential post, Gorbachev said Thursday a mechanism for any republic to secede will be discussed in the Supreme Soviet, the central legislature in Moscow.

Gorbachev said the dialogue would consider the future relationship with the republic, which Sunday proclaimed the rebirth of the independent state that was annexed by the Soviet Union in 1940.

BEIRUT, LEBANON (MARCH 17) UPI - Negotiations are underway between a Swiss delegation and the captors of two Swiss workers of the International Committee of the Red Cross to secure the workers' release, the Lebanese magazine Ash Shiraa said Saturday.

Ash Shiraa, which has good contacts among Islamic fundamentalists and first broke the story of the Iran-Contra scandal, said the three-man delegation arrived recently in the southern port city of Sidon and began negotiations for the release of Elio Erriquez and Emmanuel Christen.

Erriquez, 23, and Christen, 32, were kidnapped last October near the Palestinian refugee camp of Ein El Helweh on the outskirts of Sidon, 24 miles south of Beirut.

There has been no claim of responsibility for the abduction, but the camp is controlled by various guerrilla factions loyal to Palestine Liberation Organization Chairman Yasir Arafat and radical groups supported by Syria, Libya, and Iran.

The magazine quoted security sources in Sidon as saying that while the Swiss delegation, made up of two military personnel and a civilian, was efforting to free Erriquez and Christen, an unidentified Lebanese negotiator went to Switzerland seeking the release of Lebanese plane hijacker Hussein Hariri, imprisoned in Geneva.

Hariri was sentenced last year to life imprisonment for hijacking an Air Afrique jetliner, forcing it to land at Geneva, and killing a French male passenger. Ash Shiraa said no details were yet available regarding the negotiations in both Lebanon and Switzerland.

Erriquez and Christen are among 18 Westerners still believed held hostage in Lebanon by various fundamentalist groups. Also being held are eight U.S citizens, four Britons, two West Germans, one Irishman, and an Italian.

Friday marked the beginning of the sixth year in captivity of the longest held hostage - American journalist Terry Anderson. Relatives of Anderson, an Associated Press reporter kidnapped by the Islamic Jihad in 1985, appealed Friday for his release, and his four-year-old daughter he has never seen said in a videotape, "I love you, daddy. Come home, please come home."

BEIJING (MARCH 17) UPI - The Chinese government will present an austere blueprint for national life in 1990 at its annual parliament session this week, calling for continued economic belt-tightening, strict political campaigns and an increase in military spending, party and government sources say.

The more than two-week session of the National People's Congress, the nominal parliament, opens Tuesday with a major address by Premier Li Peng, and the assessment comes from Chinese sources familiar with documents prepared fo the meeting.

It is the first full NPC meeting since the government's violent crackdown last June on the pro-democracy movement. Hard-line leaders have since slowed the previous decade's free-market economic reforms and reasserted Marxist control over politics and culture. During the session, the NPC will essentially rubber-stamp policies decided by Communist Party leaders earlier this month.

Although the 1988 and 1989 meetings dabbled in freer debate, this year's is likely to be restrained. Chinese leaders face smoldering domestic discontent as well as international isolation, sharpened by the recent liberalizations in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe.

According to the Chinese sources, the meeting's key document, Premier Li's so-called work report, is devoid of inspiration and will maintain current policies with a few minor refinements. The economy and social order will be its major topics.

The report says an economic austerity program begun in late 1988 will continue, but tacitly acknowledges that along with achieving the goals of controlling breakneck growth and record inflation, the measures have also pushed China to the brink of recession.

The government has already begun to ease tight credit and inject funds into some sectors to reverse an industrial slowdown that has closed factories, hiked unemployment and led to fears of unrest.

More money will be pumped into key sectors such as agriculture, but the report also places emphasis on centralization and large, historically inefficient state-owned industries, a retreat from the market-oriented reforms launched in the late 1970s.

Defense spending will see its first substantial increase after falling in real terms for each of the past four years. Analysts say the hike represents both a reward to the military for its role in last year's crackdown, and a bid to quiet dissent in the ranks.

Sources said the military budget will rise 15.2 percent over last year to nearly $6 billion. The spending, nonetheless, will only keep pace with or marginally exceed inflation.

Politically, Li's report details the revival of mass-line mobilization staked out by Communist Party leaders at a meeting earlier this month. It will emphasize tight control and "grass roots" contact to keep officials in touch with the public.

The party is already engaged in perhaps its biggest mass campaign since the turbulent 1966-1976 Cultural Revolution, having revived the legend of Lei Feng, a dedicated soldier made into a hero of the 1960s by Mao Tse-tung. The legend has since been discredited.

But officials have turned out millions of people nationwide to sweep streets, give haircuts and perform other volunteer services in the "Lei Feng" spirit and attend mandatory study sessions on his life. Chinese have reacted with apathy and disdain.

"We have seen all this before, during the Cultural Revolution, and they told us that was a bad period," said a Chinese intellectual. "Now suddenly it has again become a good thing."

The sources said Li's report also will advocate tighter control of private business, including a tax designed to trim the inflated incomes of entrepreneurs. It will also call for withdrawing official financing of non-governmental institutes and organizations.

Rumors have abounded that some senior officials might lose their posts during the parliament session. But at a cocktail reception Friday night for correspondents, NPC spokesman Yao Guang said flatly there would be no such changes.

(MARCH 17) UPI - The family of American hostage Terry Anderson marked the fifth anniversary of his capture with a videotaped message from the four-year-old daughter he has never seen. The Supreme Court of West Virginia Friday stayed a lower court decision ordering striking teachers to go back to work. Teachers' unions argue a county court had NO jurisdiction to issue a state-wide order. The state Supreme Court put the issue on hold until a Tuesday hearing. Yet the justices also ruled in another county that the teachers must go back to the classroom. The court's opinion said the strike is illegal while the teachers are under contract.

Lithuania plans to enforce its declaration of independence at its Soviet border. The Baltic republic will prevent all goods from reaching the Soviet Union. Lithuania Friday suspended Communist Party activities at its main government and media agencies. The acting prime minister say the republic is drawing up documents to resolve the status of the border and Soviet troops in the region.

The State Department issued a warning Friday to American travelers to the Soviet Union. The department warned to be on guard against street crime and ethnic clashes. The unusual travel advisory also urged ''tourists in frail health NOT to visit the Soviet Union.'' It said there is a severe shortage of medical supplies. Ill tourists may have to be flown out of the country by air ambulance at a cost of 10-thousand dollars.

CAIRO, EGYPT (MARCH 17) UPI - About 1,500 Iraqis marched on the British Embassy in Baghdad Saturday chanting anti-British slogans to protest

Britain's sharp condemnation of the hanging of a London-based journalist on spying charges, diplomatic sources said.

Diplomatic sources in Baghdad said orderly, anti-British marches also took place in the southern Iraqi city of Basra and other provincial centers. London has already pulled its ambassador out of Baghdad to protest the hanging.

Also Saturday, Iraq denounced what it described as U.S. threats against Libya following reports that Tripoli was manufacturing mustard and nerve gasses at a chemical plant in Rabta.

The plant was damaged in a fire Wednesday night. State-run Tripoli Radio initially blamed "the United States and Israel" for the arson, but Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi later hinted West Germany may have been involved.

"Iraq denounces any aggressive threat against any Arab country, including Libya, considering such action a threat to pan-Arab security," an Iraqi Foreign Ministry spokesman said. The spokesman said such interference was "blatant interference in the internal affairs of a sovereign state."

State-owned Baghdad Radio, meanwhile, said thousands of demonstrators who marched on the British Embassy in Baghdad expressed their readiness to defend their country against British interference in Iraq's internal affairs.

The radio said demonstrations were also held in other Iraqi cities as part of a nationwide anti-British campaign organized by the ruling Baath Socialist party.

Britain recalled its ambassador to Baghdad after the execution of Farzad Bazoft, 31, an Iranian-born journalist who entered Iraq on British papers on assignment for the London weekly Observer.

British nurse Daphne Parish, 52, was given a 15-year prison sentence after being found guilty of aiding Bazoft in his alleged spying mission. Iraqi press reports said Bazoft had spied for Iran, Israel, and Britain. Britain has denied the charges, and after withdrawing its ambassador, terminated the studies of Iraqi students in Britain.

But London, which enjoys a healthy trade balance with Iraq, stopped short of imposing economic sanctions against Baghdad and did not break diplomatic ties as some members of the British House of Commons had demanded.

Britain's relations with Iraq's gulf war foe Iran also remain strained, after Tehran broke diplomatic ties with London last year, in the wake of late Iranian leader Ayatollah Khomeini's death decree on Indian-born British author Salman Rushdie.

JERUSALEM (MARCH 17) UPI - Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said Saturday he would not give in to the dictates of rabbis, members of his Likud Party or other political factions in the wake of a no-confidence vote that brought down his government.

In an interview with Israel Radio, Shamir said that if he had been able to agree to a compromise proposal to avoid the no-confidence vote he would have done so earlier in the week during a meeting of Israel's inner Cabinet. The Cabinet debate centered on acceptance of a U.S. plan to help start Israeli-Palestinian talks.

President Chaim Herzog begins official consultations Sunday with political parties to determine which one he believes has the best chance of forming Israel's next government. Among his first meetings are discussions with Labor, Likud, the religious Shas, and the left-wing Citizens' Rights Movement.

Since Friday, there also have been discussions within the country's two major parties and contacts with smaller religious, left-wing and right-wing parties. Shamir is expected to continue those discussions Saturday night after the Jewish Sabbath ends, his spokesman Yossi Achimeir said. "There is a lot to plan and to prepare," he said.

Shamir's firing Tuesday of Labor leader Shimon Peres from the Cabinet prompted the resignations of the ten other Labor ministers, triggering the collapse of the "national unity" coalition and setting the stage for the no-confidence vote Thursday that brought down Shamir's government.

The coalition government collapsed over disagreement between Likud and Labor on acceptance of the proposal by Secretary of State James Baker on how to begin Israeli-Palestinian talks. The primary disagreement was over the role of East Jerusalem Palestinians, which Likud opposes.

Rabbi Ovadia Yosef, spiritual leader of the ultra-Orthodox Shas Party, attempted to broker a last-minute compromise to re-establish the coalition within hours of Thursday's decisive vote. But his efforts failed when Shamir rejected the proposal that included acceptance of the Baker plan.

After Shamir's rejection Yosef told five of the six Shas members of Israel's Parliament, the Knesset, to vote against the government. Those five votes swayed the no-confidence vote Thursday against Shamir - 60 to 55 - and in favor of Peres. Shas, with a constituency generally favoring Likud policy, had been expected to side with Shamir until the day of the vote.

Israel Radio quoted Shamir as saying he would not bow to the dictates of rabbis, ministers within his Likud Party, or members of other political parties. Shamir faces pressure from within his party to resign the Likud leadership.

Shamir also told the radio he had been "deceived" in the past few days but declined to elaborate. Achimeir also declined to specify who the prime minister was referring to but said, "Everybody can think about the factors the personalities that cheated him. It is clear."

Asked whether Shamir was dejected or angered by his defeat, Achimeir said, "It is not a question of emotions now because now we are looking forward - how to foil the possibility of a Peres-led government and do our utmost" to keep Likud in power.

Likud and Labor formed the ruling coalition, or "national unity" government after the 1988 elections, but only after more than 45 days of negotiations, each working hard to woo the 13 crucial votes of the Knesset's ultra-Orthodox religious parties. The religious parties - whose delegates seek the agreement of their individual spiritual leaders before making political decisions - are expected to be key once again in this round of government formation.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 18) UPI - President Bush, in an interview released Saturday, said he was ''glad to clarify'' for budget director Richard Darman that he remains opposed to any new taxes.

The president was attempting to clear up confusion spawned this week over administration support for a $511 billion deficit reduction plan from House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Dan Rostenkowski. That plan called for a rejection of all tax cut proposals.

Asked if his budget director was indicating in comments made last week that the administration was open to negotiations on new taxes, Bush said Darman was really only discussing the White House's much-touted capital gains tax cut in appearing to indicate new room for discussion on the sensitive tax question.

''That's what Dick intended to say,'' the president said in an interview with National Public Radio, taped Friday and release Saturday. ''So I'm glad to clarify it for him.''

After Rostenkowski's plan received an unexpectedly positive reception from the White House last week, Bush and other administration officials said they could not support many major points of the proposal.

But questions continued to crop up when Darman, appearing to signal some room for negotiations on the question of new taxes, said Bush would not accept any taxes that hurt economic growth but might consider some ''growth-oriented revenue increases.''

''I read that in the paper a day or so ago and then asked him what he was talking about,'' Bush said.

On Thursday, Darman reviewed the Rostenkowski plan on Capitol Hill and said the White House could not accept a five-year, $100 billion tax hike for gasoline, tobacco, beer and pollutants; a one-year freeze in Social Security cost of living adjustments; a ban on tax reductions and a $150 billion cut in Pentagon spending over five years.

Darman also said the administration rejected a proposal to eliminate the Gramm-Rudman balanced budget law and a plan to raise from 28 percent to 33 percent an income tax formula used for a segment of wealthy Americans.

At the same time, Bush said the plan had ''some very interesting concepts in there,'' and conceded he will not get all that he wants in the budget talks.

''I'm not saying everything has to be done exactly the way I want it done. And it won't be,'' he said.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 18) UPI - Like its secular counterpart, Christian education is in need of reform and renewal, a major study of hundreds of mainline Protestant congregations said Saturday.

The 3 1/2-year study ''Effective Christian Education,'' conducted by the Minneapolis-based Search Institute, examined Christian education programs in 561 congregations in five ''mainline'' Protestant denominations and the Southern Baptist Convention.

The study found disinterest by adults in adult education programs; a failure to maintain youth involvement after 8th grade; difficulty keeping voluntary teachers; apparent disinterest on the part of the clergy; and a failure of current programs and educational methods to address the changing needs and interests of adults, adolescents and children.

''The need for change in Christian education parallels, in urgency and complexity, the need for change in public education,'' said the study, which was financed by the Lily Endowment.

While noting efforts at reform, the study also said, ''A clear understanding of the role and potential of Christian education in congregational life has often been lacking in these efforts at reform.''

It said Christian education programs are what educators call ''low dosage exposure,'' with most people spending about 30-40 hours a year at best in any formal education program.

''Of all the areas of congregational life we examined, involvement in an effective Christian education program has the strongest tie to a person's growth in faith and loyalty to one's congregation and denomination,'' it said.

''While other congregational factors also matter, nothing matters more than effective Christian education,'' the study said.

''Only a minority of Protestant adults evidence the kind of integrated, vibrant and life-encompassing faith congregations seek to develop,'' the study said. ''For most adults, faith is underdeveloped, lacking some of the key elements necessary for faith maturity.''

Similarly, the study said, a majority of adolescents have an ''underdeveloped faith'' and it found faith ''least well formed among 9th and 10th grade boys.''

Among the study's major findings were:

-Maturity of faith is linked to age, increasing with each successive decade and is most likely to be found mong those over 70.

-In every age group from the 30s on, women exhibit greater faith maturity than men.

-Denominational loyalty is strong among adults but is less evident among those between ages 20 and 60 than among those 60 and older.

-Among youth, less than two-thirds of adolescents express high denominational or congregational loyalty.

-In each of the six denominations, a majority of adolescents evidence one or more ''at risk'' indicators, such as depression or drug use, and most youths report their congregation puts little emphasis on chemical or sex education.

Among recommendations made by the study was a call for congregations to seek to increase the involvement of older members - especially those over 70 - who are an underused resource ''who should be connected in a meaningful, relational way to children, adolescents, and younger adults.''

It also said national Christian education offices need a clearer mandate of purpose and additional strength from denominational headquarters.

''Seminaries will need to strengthen Christian education curricula and requirements, assist in the development of regional training centers and place additional emphasis on continuing education for pastors,'' the report said.

The report also called for more stress on ''the experience of serving others'' as a key component of Christian education, arguing ''acts of mercy, compassion, or the promotion of social justice is an important influence on the deepening of faith.''

TUCSON, AZ (MARCH 17) UPI - Greyhound officials and representatives for striking employees resumed contract talks with the help of a mediator Saturday, but they disagreed on the likelihood of a settlement.

"I have high hopes but very low expectations," said P. Anthony Lannie, Greyhound's executive vice president and chief negotiator, before the talks began.

Lannie charged the Amalgamated Council of Greyhound Locals with being unreasonable in its demands, and in a reference to the gunplay and other violence that has marked the strike, said: "If anything, the violence and the terrorism that we've seen on the picket line is an indication of an attitude that they will continue to be unreasonable."

Lannie's Greyhound bargaining team and union negotiators led by Edward Strait convened in separate meeting rooms in a Tucson hotel Saturday morning, with federal mediator Bernard DeLury going back and forth between the two groups. Later in the morning, the two sides met face-to-face for about an hour before breaking for lunch.

During the morning talks, the union presented its promised "counter-proposal," which the company was apparently studying during the three-hour midday break.

Before the talks convened, Strait was optimistic that the discussions, the first since the strike began March 2, might end in a settlement. He would not elaborate on the union's new offer, other than to say it was developed by the union without the mediator. "I don't believe we're that far apart," he said. "I believe there's a contract out there to be had."

Strait said the union does not condone the recent acts of strike-related violence and blames "crazies" for the actions. Before talks began, the two sides also differed on the major roadblocks to a new contract. "The only issue is money - pure and simple," Greyhound's Lannie said. Strait, however, contended that the union is most concerned about other issues, primarily work rules and grievance procedure arbitration.

Earlier contract talks broke off, triggering the bitter walkout by many of the company's 6,300 union drivers and some 3,000 baggage handlers, mechanics, ticket agents, and reservation clerks.

Greyhound has hired about 1,000 permanent replacement drivers in an attempt to remedy schedule disruptions, angering some union members and spawning gunfire and other violence.

In Phoenix early Friday, a shot was fired at a Greyhound bus minutes after it pulled out of the downtown terminal, police said. The driver reported that she saw "a muzzle flash" from a passing car. No one was injured, but the driver returned to the terminal two blocks away.

In Connecticut, a Greyhound employee identified as Roger D. Cawtra, 44, of Stratford was arrested Friday for allegedly firing a single gunshot March 12 at a bus approaching Hartford, state police said. No one was injured. A Greyhound spokesman in Dallas said Cawtra, who was on medical leave for a neck injury, faces dismissal.

"We continue to believe these acts of terrorism are being done by a few people with serious problems and do not reflect the vast amount of Greyhound employees," Greyhound spokesman George Gravley said.

In Chattanooga, Tenn., police were escorting some Greyhound buses because of a sniper shooting Thursday. In the most serious incident, a striker was accidentally crushed to death by a bus in Northern California.

Greyhound, based in Dallas, is the nation's largest intercity bus company. It carried 22 million passengers last year and is crucial to low-income travelers who live in smaller communities.

Late last year, Greyhound offered the union a new, three-year contract that included a 6.9 percent increase in wages and benefits in the first year. Union members, citing a 22-percent pay cut they took when the company was sold in 1987, rejected the offer.

(MARCH 17) UPI - Talks to begin in bitter Greyhound strike... plan to balance budget criticized, these stories, and more, up next from U-P-I...

The union representing striking Greyhound employees has promised to offer a ''counter-proposal'' when the two sides meet today in Tucson, Arizona.

The meeting is the first since the bitter, sometimes violent walkout against the nation's largest intercity bus line began 16 days ago.

Edward Strait, president of the Amalgamated Council of Greyhound Local Unions... met last night for several hours with a federal mediator discussing the counter-proposal.

Throughout the strike, the union has declined to reveal its demands. Strait would NOT elaborate on the new offer beyond saying it was developed by the union without the mediator.

The strike began March 2nd when efforts collapsed to negotiate a new contract covering 63-hundred bus drivers and some three-thousand baggage handlers, mechanics, ticket agents and reservation clerks.

Scattered shooting incidents have marred the strike. In the latest violence, police in Phoenix say a shot was fired at a Greyhound bus yesterday minutes after it pulled out of the downtown terminal.

(MARCH 17) UPI - It's all over but the voting in East Germany, where candidates and their West German backers wrapped up their campaigns for tomorrow's elections.

East Germany is holding its first elections for a NON-Communist government in its 40-year history.

Several prominent West German politicians campaigned in East Germany in anticipation of German reunification, which may come as early as this year.

In Magdeburg, West German Economic Minister Helmut Hausman said the a Western-style economy is a prerequisite for East German development.

In Washington, the State Department praised East German authorities for inviting U-S envoys and the other 34 signers of the Helsinki Agreement to observe tomorrow's parlimentary elections.

Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said a number of American observers, including members of Congress... will observe the elections.

Federal officials say they have hauled in more than one ton of cocaine in a major drug bust that snared nine so-called ''significant players'' in the Colombian Medellin drug cartel.

The announcement came yesterday and summed up a six-month investigation in which federal agents convinced the alleged ringleader, a Peruvian living in San Francisco, they could pull off large drug transactions.

After winning the good graces of the reported kingpin, the agents brought more than one ton of cocaine from Peru to the United States. Convinced of the undercover agents' intentions, the dealer allegedly arranged to sell them more than one ton of cocaine.

Federal agents arrested three people at an airstrip in an unspecified Central American nation, one person in Florida and five people in California.

A government spokesman says the drug ring was looking to extend its market into the San Francisco Bay area.

(MARCH 17) UPI - There's division on Capitol Hill over a recent plan that House Ways and Means Committee chairman Dan Rostenkoski touts as the way to balance the budget.

Fellow Democrat Senator Daniel Moynihan expressed his discontent with Rostenkowki's idea by saying if it was adopted, it would force 400-thousand Social Security recipients to drop below the poverty line.

According to Moynihan, Rostenkowki's five-year program would NOT accomplish its primary task of balancing the budget. Moreover, the New York senator says Rostenkowski's UNorthodox idea would eat into an average elderly couple's income by about 32-hundred dollars during the next five years.

Rostenkowski's plan calls for tax increases, spending cuts and a one-year freeze on annual cost-of-living adjustments to federal retirement programs.

Moynihan criticizes the Rostenkowski balanced budget idea because it attempts to use Social Security as a means of reducing federal spending. Moynihan says Social Security is a separately financed insurance plan with NO connection to general government spending.

(MARCH 17) UPI - South African President F-W de Klerk took another step in his campaign to integrate blacks in his country's political system.

Yesterday, de Klerk announced that he will meet with the African National Congress next month. The A-N-C confirmed the announcement, saying recently freed A-N-C leader Nelson Mandela will lead the delegation to Cape Town on April 11th.

De Klerk says the historic meeting with Mandela and other A-N-C senior officials will occur so the two sides can discuss obstacles which prevent formal power-sharing negotiations.

Notable UNmet requirements the A-N-C has asked the government to meet before formal talks begin include release of all political prisoners and an end to a 45-month-old state of emergency.

De Klerk says he'd like to end the state of emergency as quickly as possible. But he says present turmoil makes doing so now impossible.

In a matter which de Klerk says is NOT related to the upcoming talks, he unvieled plans to privatize state assets to help finance a one-point-one-BILLION-dollar black development fund.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 18) UPI - A growing chill between the United States and China has created a policy split between hardliners in the U.S. government and those who want to maintain a minimum level of civil relations with Beijing.

The division reflects two responses to an unprecedented series of antagonistic public statements from China about the United States and an unwillingness of the aging Beijing leadership to ease repression.

The different U.S. points of view became visible this week when a report - later denied by the Chinese government - emerged saying China had placed the United States at the head of an ''enemies list'' of unfriendly countries.

State Department officials now believe the ''enemies list'' report was a piece of disinformation from another government, most likely Taiwan.

State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said she could not confirm the existence of the Chinese ''enemies list,'' but added: ''If it exists, it's unfortunate, but we can understand it.''

One State Department official explained that the ''understanding'' phrase was inserted by the White House, which wants to maintain the public impression that the United States is being tough on Beijing, without actually taking any tougher actions.

The aim, said the official, is to ease the pressure on President Bush to take harsher measures against Beijing in retaliation for its crackdown on pro-democracy activists.

The public ''understanding'' response from the U.S. government was so unusual that it was described as ''goofy'' by one State Department official.

In testimony before a House subcommittee two weeks ago, Secretary of State James Baker conceded the administration's China strategy is ''not a popular policy.''

The unwillingness of the Chinese government to take any meaningful measures to ease restrictions and to improve the human rights situation is at the base of the policy differences within the administration.

Some State Department officials believe it is time to take stronger action against the Chinese and to respond publicly to a rising chorus of official public attacks from the Chinese government.

The latest Chinese campaign was triggered by a human rights report from the State Department, which used much harsher language about China than had ever been used by the White House.

It accused the Chinese of killing hundreds and possibly thousands of civilians in the crackdown on the pro-democracy movement last June and then lying about it. It also accused the Chinese of systematic and repeated suppression of Tibetans.

The Chinese government responded with an orchestrated series of articles, accusing the United States of trying to become ''the policeman of the world.''

It said the State Department's report was ''based on rumors and lies'' and was violating the sovereignty of China and other countries by trying to interfere in their internal affairs.

The Beijing Review, in one article, did what it had accused the U.S. government of doing: interfering in U.S. affairs by charging that the United States was guilty of serious human rights violations, including ''killing more than 500 Panamanians'' in the invasion of December 1989.

Other Chinese publications have accused the United States of other human rights violations, including ''high infant mortality rate, high unemployment rate,'' permitting millions of homeless people to live on the streets and tolerating the sale of one million children into prostitution.

In light of China's policies, some State Department officials are pushing for a tougher U.S. line, at least in terms of public statements.

But White House officials, following Bush's lead, continue to believe the softer line will work, although it is taking longer than anybody - especially the president, a former envoy to China - thought possible.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 17) UPI - Vice President Dan Quayle said Saturday the United States remained hopeful that Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev will not resort to violence in seeking to force Lithuania to abandon its declaration of independence.

"Chairman Gorbachev said he would not intervene militarily and that this would be resolved peacefully. And let's hope he sticks to that," Quayle said on the CNN "Newsmaker Saturday" program.

At the same time, the vice president said he had no doubt Gorbachev feared that the March 11 move for independence in Lithuania could prompt other Soviet states to similar action. "I'm sure that's on his mind. He probably sees Lithuania as perhaps a precedent of what could come down the road," Quayle said.

Gorbachev set a Monday deadline for Lithuania to accept a Moscow resolution branding as "null and void" the Lithuanian parliament's March 11 declaration of independence.

"Gorbachev has indicated the tanks are not going to roll," Quayle said. "Let's hope so. He said it. Let's take him at his word." But he acknowledged the United States "had to wait to see what happens." "We want it resolved peacefully but we want the Lithuanian people to make that determination," he said.

JERUSALEM (MARCH 17) UPI - Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said Saturday he would not give in to the dictates of rabbis or politicians but acknowledged in the wake of a no-confidence vote that brought down his government that "nothing is forever in politics."

In an interview with Israel Radio, Shamir said if he had been able to agree to a compromise proposal to avoid the no-confidence vote he would have done so earlier in the week during a meeting of Israel's inner Cabinet. The Cabinet debate centered on acceptance of a U.S. plan to help start Israeli-Palestinian talks.

Shamir laughed when asked if he would resign, but worded his reply carefully. "I'll continue my activities," said Shamir, facing mounting pressure to resign his Likud Party leadership to strengthen the party's position in negotiations to form Israel's new government. "I have no reason to stop any of this. I still have a lot of goals to achieve. I will act and struggle together with the Likud."

But Shamir said he had been in politics long enough not to be surprised and he would not be angry if the Likud decided to replace him. "Nothing is forever in politics," said the 74-year-old Shamir. "Today you are prime minister and tomorrow something else. But the principle thing is ... to act and fight for the truly important things."

President Chaim Herzog begins official consultations Sunday with political parties to determine which one he believes has the best chance of trying to form Israel's next government. Among his first meetings are discussions with Labor, Likud, Shas and the left-wing Citizens' Rights Movement.

Since Friday, there also have been discussions within the country's two major parties and contacts with smaller religious, left-wing and right-wing parties.

Shamir will continue those discussions Saturday night, said Shamir spokesman Yossi Achimeir. The Likud Parliament faction also met Saturday night, but Shamir did not attend, Israel Televispon reported.

Shamir's firing Tuesday of Labor leader Shimon Peres from the Cabinet prompted the resignations of the ten other Labor ministers, triggering the collapse of the coalition and setting the stage for the no-confidence vote Thursday that brought down Shamir's government.

The coalition government collapsed over disagreement between Likud and Labor on acceptance of the proposal by U.S. Secretary of State James Baker on how to begin Israeli-Palestinian talks. The primary disagreement is over the role of East Jerusalem Palestinians. Likud opposes their participation.

Rabbi Ovadia Yosef, spiritual leader of the ultra-Orthodox Shas Party, attempted to broker a last-minute compromise to re-establish the coalition within hours of Thursday's decisive vote. But his efforts failed when Shamir rejected the proposal that included acceptance of the Baker plan.

After Shamir's rejection, Yosef told five of the six Shas members of Israel's Parliament, the Knesset, to vote against the government. Those five votes swayed the no-confidence vote Thursday against Shamir - 60 to 55 - and in favor of Peres.

In defending his actions over the past week, Shamir told Israel Radio, "I don't surrender to ultimatums, not to rabbis, to (Cabinet) ministers and not to party members, also members of my own party."

"I need to be convinced. I need to believe that what I do is right," Shamir said. "If I have this belief being convinced I act. If I'm not convinced ... I can't be influenced by any ultimatums or any pressure before votes or after votes."

Despite the reports of attempts to oust Shamir as Likud leader, Israel Radio reported Foreign Minister Moshe Arens, named as a possible replacement for Shamir, was against removing the prime minister.

Likud and Labor formed the ruling coalition, or "national unity" government after the 1988 elections, but only after more than 45 days of negotiations, each working hard to woo the 13 crucial votes of the Knesset's ultra-Orthodox religious parties. The religious parties, whose delegates seek the agreement of their individual spiritual leaders before making political decisions, are expected to be key once again in this round of government formation.

MILWAUKEE (MARCH 18) UPI - A psychiatric examination to determine competency to stand trial will be performed on a mental patient charged with making threats on the life of President Bush, officials said.

John Bosdech, 31, of Green Bay, was arrested Friday at the Brown County Mental Health Center in Green Bay.

He repeatedly made threats against Bush to personnel at the center, where he was a resident, and a U.S. Secret Service agent, a criminal complaint filed Friday in Milwaukee said.

''He has indicated he hears voices in his head that tell him to do things '' said Bosdech's attorney, Richard J. Hart Jr.

Federal Magistrate Aaron Goodstein ordered Bosdech be detained and transferred to the Federal Medical Center in Rochester, Minn., for an examination to determine his competency to stand trial. It was not known when Bosdech would be transferred.

''We do feel there is a serious question about the defendant's competence to stand trial,'' Assistant U.S. Attorney Stephen Liccione said.

An affidavit filed by the Secret Service showed that Bosdech claimed he heeded the commands of voices in his head ''90 percent of the time.''

Bosdech told officials at the Green Bay center he wanted to be released because the voices told him to ''go to Texas and kill President George Bush,'' the affidavit said.

The affidavit indicated a criminal charge was needed because the man was a patient at the clinic only on a ''quasi-voluntary status'' and that the facility was not entirely secure.

A social worker at the clinic contacted the Secret Service office in Milwaukee after hearing the threats. Bosdech allegedly restated his threats during an interview with a Secret Service agent.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 18) UPI - District of Columbia Mayor Marion Barry, arrested earlier this year on cocaine charges, has vowed he will not ''sit on the sidelines'' of the next mayoral race whether or not he runs for a fourth term in office.

In an interview earlier this week with three of the city's black-owned newspapers, Barry acknowledged asking the city's only non-voting delegate to the House of Representatives, Walter Fauntroy, to postpone entering the mayor's race until Barry returned to Washington from substance abuse treatment in South Carolina.

Fauntroy did not heed Barry's request and announced March 3 that he will give up his Congressional seat to run for mayor.

Barry's interviews with the Afro-American, the Capital Spotlight and the Washington Informer, published by the mainstream press Saturday, were considerably more revealing than his interviews with other Washington media.

''Whether I run or don't run I am not going to sit on the sidelines and let the city just go without any advice from me,'' Barry told the three newspapers.

Barry also told reporters he may have been entrapped by federal authorities during a sting operation that resulted in his Jan. 18 arrest at a downtown hotel on a single cocaine possession charge, the newspapers reported.

The mayor said he had seen the videoptapes made by federal authorities during their sting operation at the Vista Hotel and said the government does not have much of a case.

The videotapes allegedly show Barry smoking crack cocaine through a pipe.

According to the Capitol Spotlight's published account, Barry said: ''In those tapes it's pretty obvious about who led who to do what.''

''It is the opinion of my lawyer that we have a good direction even if it (the tape) were doctored ... It is amazing when I look back at it myself '' one newspaper quotes Barry as saying.

Barry also said he was confident of victory in his June 4 trial on perjury and cocaine possession charges.

''We are confident without being overconfident,'' Barry said.

AMMAN, Jordan (MARCH 18) UPI - Former President Jimmy Carter urged Arab leaders Saturday to take another look at the 1978 Camp David accord as a framework for peace in the Middle East.

Carter, on a fact-finding Middle East tour which has already taken him to Egypt and Syria, also condemned Jewish migration from the Soviet Union to the Israeli-occupied territories as ''counterproductive'' and as an impediment to peace.

''If you go back now and re-examine the Camp David agreement, you will see that it provides a framework for peace,'' Carter told an informal gathering of members of Jordan's newly elected Parliament.

''I do not maintain that the Camp David accord is a perfect document, but it can be obviously a bonding one,'' he said.

Carter played a key mediating role in the accord, which led to the subsequent 1979 Egypt-Israel peace treaty. No other Arab state has signed a peace treaty with Israel.

At the time, he said, Israel's Parliament, the Knesset, approved the accord, which stipulates the recognition of all parties to U.N. Security Council Resolution 242. The resolution calls for the withdrawal of all Israeli troops from Arab territories captured during the 1967 Arab-Israeli war.

''This was the first time Israel ever approved Resolution 242,'' Carter said. The resolution also stipulates the right of all parties, including Israel, to live within secure borders.

Carter defended the Camp David agreement as the right course to have followed at that time, and said Arab states could now select ''the parts they want from the agreement, in the light of present-day circumstances.''

The Camp David accord was signed by then-Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Premier Menachem Begin, but Arab states opposed the plan and cut ties with Egypt. After more than a decade, those ties have been restored.

Turning to the issue of Jewish migration to the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip and to East Jerusalem, Carter said: ''I share this concern with you.''

Israel expects some 100,000 Soviet Jews to arrive this year, and as many as 800,000 over the next five to six years. The occupied territories are home to 1.75 million Palestinians, and Arabs fear a large Jewish influx might change the sensitive demographic balance of the region.

''To the extent that Israeli officials are using the Soviet Jewish migration issue to the occupied territories, this is indeed counterproductive, an impediment to peace, and an inexcusable exploitation of the Soviet Jews who deserve support, peaceful coexistence and an opportunity to be free,'' he said.

Carter said that in his last talks with Soviet officials, they had assured him of changes in Soviet law that would make it easier for Soviet Jews to enjoy more religious and cultural freedom at home ''to make the Soviet Union more attractive so they would stay there.''

Commenting on the fall of the Israeli coalition government, Carter said Israeli caretaker Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir has never been ready to sit and talk to the Palestinians.

He said the Israeli Labor party, on the other hand, was ''ready, in a narrow but very significant difference ... to begin talks with the Palestinians.''

That ''might not amount to much, we might be disappointed, but it opens the door - a crack at least - for Palestinians and Israelis to reach a common ground,'' he said.

Carter was scheduled to start his visit to Israel Sunday.

DHAKA, Bangladesh (MARCH 18) UPI - Hundreds of rampaging protesters Saturday set cars and government offices afire during a general strike that paralyzed Sylhet, a city of 500,000 people 170 miles east of Dhaka, police said.

The All Parties Action Committee called for an indefinite strike in Sylhet to protest incidents Friday when uniformed forces of the Bangladesh Rifles opened fire on a mob, injuring more than 100 persons, three of them seriously, residents said.

Police said the shooting began after a cigarette butt thrown from a bus hit a soldier near Akhaikhal. The soldiers ordered the bus to stop and they then began beating up passengers. Townspeople soon joined the passengers in attacking the soldiers who opened fire, police said.

Police however denied that three persons were killed in the firing, news of which enraged civilians.

Hundreds of barricades were put up in the city streets and a crowd of about 30,000 tried to block the entry of BDR chief Maj. Gen. Sadequr Rahman, witnesses said.

Another crowd of about 10,000 raided the official residence of the deputy commissioner.

The government ordered a judicial probe into Friday's shootings by the BDR.

MOSCOW (MARCH 18) UPI - Soviet army helicopters dropped thousands of leaflets over the Lithuanian capital of Vilnius Saturday, charging that voters do not support the Parliament's recent declaration of independence, witnesses and Swedish television said.

The leaflets, signed by a branch of the Lithuanian Communist Party, also urged residents to attend an anti-independence rally Sunday and said the ''fate of Lithuania will only be decided by a referendum.'' The Parliament was flooded with phone calls asking about the leaflets, a government worker said.

The incident came as President Vytautis Landsbergis informed parliament of Soviet troop movements in eastern and southern Lithuania, according to Romas Sakadolskis, a Voice of America radio correspondent who spoke with United Press International by phone from Vilnius.

''There are maneuvers of troops in southern Lithuania,'' Landsbergis told UPI by phone after the Parliament session. ''Soviet troops are also visible in the eastern part of Lithuania. And we have received reports of the transfer of paratroops from one region to another.''

Asked whether he thought Moscow might be preparing to use force against Lithuania, Landsbergis responded: ''Who knows.''

The reported troop movement could not be independently confirmed, and the reason for the reported maneuvers was unknown.

The activity came one day after Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev sent Landsbergis a message giving him until Monday to respond to a Moscow resolution branding the March 11 independence declaration ''null and void'' and declaring that Soviet laws still operate in Lithuania.

Soviet television said thousands of people in Vilnius rallied in support of their new government. The official Tass news agency said ''many thousands'' in the fellow Baltic republic of Latvia demonstrated in their capital of Riga to demand the election of nationalists Sunday in scheduled balloting.

Landsbergis, who was named president by Parliament two weeks after his Sajudis nationalist movement swept legislative elections, also said that military planes had dropped leaflets on Vilnius.

Swedish television in Stockholm showed footage of what it said were two army helicopters dropping thousands of leaflets on the Lithuanian capital, a city of 550,000 people. A government worker said Parliament was flooded by phone calls from Vilnius residents saying they had seen planes dropping leaflets.

Vilnius resident Yedvida Svabovskenya told UPI that she saw an army helicopter loosing torrents of leaflets over the capital at about noon and obtained one of them.

She said the leaflet was addressed to ''Vilnius voters'' and said:

''The (March 11 independence) decision by the Lithuanian Supreme Soviet is not yet the decision of the people of Lithuania. We call on everyone to participate in a rally at noon on March 18 at the Palace of Sports. The fate of the people of Lithuania - a dialogue of the entire people.

''The fate of Lithuania will be decided only by a referendum.''

She said the leaflet was signed by the city committee of the branch of the Lithuanian Communist Party. That branch remained loyal to Moscow after Dec. 20, when most of the republic's Communist leadership split off and formed an independent political organization.

The leaflet was apparently asking Vilnuis residents to participate in a rally reported earlier, scheduled for Sunday and organized by the Russian nationalist Edinstvo group, to protest Lithuania's break for freedom.

Also Saturday, the leader of Lithuania's defiant Communist Party joined the Sajudis government as deputy prime minister in a move that appeared to further widen the gap between Vilnius and Moscow.

The Lithuanian Parliament's selection of party boss Algirdas Brazauskas as deputy premier means the government is now headed by a coalition of Sajudis members and Communists in both its legislative and executive branches, with the Communists in the minority.

Brazauskis was part of a six-person delegation the Parliament appointed Saturday to hold negotiations with Moscow. But Soviet Politburo member Vadim Medvedev said Friday that ''we will not sit down at a table (with Lithuanians) the way we do with foreign representatives.''

BRANDON, VT (MARCH 18) UPI - A double-murder suspect fleeing police in a 140-mph chase Saturday was captured by officers who shot him in the face after he lost control of his sports car on a curve, authorities said.

Shawn Allain, 18, was in critical condition at Rutland Regional Medical Center, officials said. The suspect, carrying a 12-gauge shotgun, scampered out of the disabled car, and was shot in the face and hip by police, officials said.

The Winhall resident is a suspect in the slayings of Liza Novak and Gregg Peretz. Police in Bondville discovered the bodies of Novak, about 30, and Peretz, 31, at their home on a rural road around 6:30 a.m.

Peretz died of a shotgun blast to the neck and head, and Novak died from multiple stab wounds to the back and massive trauma to the head, state police Sgt. John Krupp said. Novak appeared to have been sexually assaulted, he said.

Peretz's 1989 Saab Turbo was spotted around 8 a.m. on Route 103 in Ludlow by local police, who gave chase. The driver, Allain, refused to stop and turned north onto Route 7, a two-lane highway in rural areas.

State police joined the chase as the car sped through Rutland and eluded police roadblocks, Krupp said.

''In portions of the chase our officers indicated he was traveling in excess of 135 mph,'' Krupp said. ''Our cruisers only go 125 (mph) and that was part of the problem.''

Police said they were reluctant to fire on the sports car because of other vehicles on the road.

''He always managed to hit the roadblocks when other people were there,'' Krupp said.

Allain was apprehended in Brandon, more than 40 miles north of Ludlow, at 8:43 a.m., when he lost control of the Saab on a sharp curve on Route 73 and blew two tires on the car, forcing him to leave the vehicle.

Allain, who was under police guard at the hospital, was charged with first- and second-degree murder, Krupp said.

MEXICO CITY (MARCH 18) UPI - Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney said Saturday he would not be surprised if a North American common market is established over the next decade.

Mulroney told reporters Mexican President Carlos Salinas de Gortari is modernizing the Mexican economy and developing new trading patterns.

''The policies of President Salinas lead me to conclude he is more and more interested in greater access to the North American market,'' Mulroney said.

''Whether this emerges into a more formal association with North America over the next decade I don't know, but I wouldn't be scandalized at the prospect,'' Mulroney added.

The Harvard-educated Salinas, who assumed office in December 1988, has pushed through wide-ranging economic reforms aimed at opening the country's economy to foreign goods and investment and privatization of state-owned industries.

Predicting that the Western Hemisphere is going to emerge as an economic giant, Mulroney stressed the importance of throwing open trade barriers.

''Brazil, Mexico, Venezuela are going to be giants in the next century - economic power houses, so it is to the advantage of the United States and Canada to build bridges,'' he said.

Mulroney said since Mexico is now a member of the General Agreement of Tariffs and Trade, any formal free trade agreement would have to comply with GATT rules. He said Canada would not allow itself to be negatively affected by any bilateral agreements between the United States and Mexico.

''We have no intention of being left out of anything,'' Mulroney said.

The subject of free trade between Mexico and Canada has not come up, ''except among certain members of the business community,'' Mulroney said.

''If the government of Mexico has interests along those lines these decisions will be taken by people in that government,'' he added.

Yet Mulroney said that, ''anything we can do to get rid of barriers is good for both Canada and Mexico.''

Mulroney also said that Mexico need not have any fear of entering into a free trade agreement with countries that are far bigger and more developed providing legal and dispute mechanisms are well arranged.

''It means you have to surrender a small amount of sovereignty, but the over-all benefits greatly outweigh the losses,'' he said.

Before briefing the press, Mulroney met with Eduardo Hay, one of two Mexican voting members of the International Olympic Games. He presented Hay with a package promoting Toronto's bid to host the 1996 Olympic Games.

Earlier Saturday, Mulroney called on Canadian and Mexican businessmen to enhance economic cooperation and increase investment.

''There is a vast unexploited potential between our two countries. Neither Canada nor Mexico, I believe, can afford to leave such potential untapped '' Mulroney told Mexican and Canadian businessmen at a breakfast meeting.

''The prosperity of Mexico and the prosperity of Canada comes directly from our capacity to achieve a greater share of the international trading situation.''

Drawing a parallel between Mexican and Canadian economic thinking, Mulroney lauded Salinas's economic route.

''This bold program of economic reforms and the prudent fiscal and monetary policies followed by the government of President Salinas put Mexico on the road to recovery,'' Mulroney said.

The promotion of Canadian investment and joint ventures comes in the wake of Friday's talks between Salinas and Mulroney and the signing of 10 bilateral agreements.

''The 10 agreements we signed yesterday have laid the basis for strengthened cooperation in areas that are of priority importance for our two countries,'' Mulroney said.

The agreements cover trade and investment consultation, the environment, drug trafficking, cooperation in criminal matters, extradition, tax information sharing, agriculture and forestry, customs and tourism.

(MARCH 17) UPI - Union leaders in West Virginia say the teachers strike there is over. The presidents of the state's two main teacher unions are urging their members to return to class on Monday. The labor chiefs say legislators have agreed to meet in special session to consider demands for better salaries and benefits. The unions must first draw up a list of requests. West Virginia Education Association President Kayetta Meadows called the strike a success.

Greyhound's chief negotiator in talks to end a strike by some nine-thousand employees say the union is being unreasonable in its demands. And he charged today- even as bargaining resumed in Tucson, Arizona- that the violence that has surrounded the walkout indicates to him that NO real progress can be expected in the bargaining.

East German voters expect that a conservative coalition and the Social Democrats to slug it out in tomorrow's national election. Analysts say the two groups are likely to join forces to govern. Berliners are excited just to have a choice. One 50-year-old organ grinder says the only choice on the ballot in 40 years of Communist rule was ''yes'' or ''NO.'' East Germans are expected to vote the Communists out of office and into an opposition role.

Warsaw Pact foreign ministers meeting in Prague, Czechoslovakia, failed to agree on security arrangements for a unified Germany. The East Bloc ministers at the one-day conference reached accord on the right of East and West Germany to reunite. But Czechoslovakia, Poland and Hungary favor a unified Germany to be a member of NATO. The Soviet Union leads the call for a neutral Germany.

(MARCH 17) UPI - Israeli Prime Minster Yitzhak Shamir laughed at the question of him stepping down... but acknowledges that- quote- ''nothing is forever in politics.'' Shamir told Israel Radio today that he won't give in to rabbis and politicians calling for his resignation following a NO-confidence vote against his government. President Chaim Herzog begins consultations tomorrow with Israel's political parties to determine which has the best chance of forming the next government.

Czechoslovak President Vaclav Havel met today with Solidarity leader Lech Walesa at the same border mountain pass where just months ago Havel had to Maryland state lawmakers who support a bill that would keep abortions widely available in Maryland are three votes shy of shutting down a filibuster by opponents of the legislation. The debate against the measure entered its third day today as opponents tried to talk the bill to death or force a compromise. Senators who favor the bill need a total of 32 votes to end the filibuster.

A published report says claims that an American discovered the AIDS virus before the French were inflated. The article says an internal report at the National Cancer Institute in Bethesda, Maryland, left out a number of facts in concluding that Dr. Robert Gallo was the first to identify the AIDS virus. (MARCH 17) UPI - Black South African leader Nelson Mandela is against a meeting to take place next week between South African President Frederik de Klerk and U-S Secretary of State Baker. Mandela says the meeting could send the wrong signal to the international community... suggesting that de Klerk has done something positive. Mandela says he will protest the meeting by NOT seeing Baker while the U-S official is in South Africa. He says he will meet with Baker in Namibia .

On the eve of a national election, several thousand East and West Berliners demonstrated in a West Berlin square under the slogan ''stop the nationalist frenzy.'' They called for the continuation of East German independence. In contrast, the East German news agency says 35-thousand people demonstrated in the the East German city of Plauen for unification, freedom and free elections. They will get the free elections tomorrow.

F-B-I officials are looking into an explosion that destroyed a Drug Enforcement Adminstration office in Fort Myers, Florida... trying to determine if it was caused by an incendiary device. (MARCH 17) UPI - Lithuania took another step toward forming its new government... and another one away from the grasp of the Soviet Union. The leader of the Baltic republic's defiant Communist Party joined the maverick Sajudis government today as deputy prime minister. The move came in the face of an ultimatum from Moscow calling for Lithuania to accept a resolution branding its independence ''null and void.''

A chemical used in fingernail polish remover spilled from a ship into Philadelphia's Delaware River today. The 125-gallon spill gave five workers nausea and headaches. The chemical could be fatal if inhaled in great quantities. 250 nearby residents were evacuated for three hours. The Coast Guard says the spill occurred because an indicator light showed a valve to be closed when it actually was slightly open.

Parts of the South are under water. A sundered levee today sent another surge into the already flooded town of Elba, Alabama, leaving the downtown covered by eight to 10 feet of water. Residential and business areas of Selma and Montgomery, Alabama, are flooded. Last night, six people were carried to their deaths when their car was swept from a washed-out bridge in Alabama's Covington County.

A major Protestant study has found that Christian education needs reform just as badly as its public counterpart. The three-and-a-half-year study analyzed education programs at 561 congregations in five so-called ''main line'' Protestant denominations and the Southern Baptist Convention. (MARCH 17) UPI - East Germans ready for their first free election... President Bush says he does NOT ''lament'' the fire that destroyed a Libyan chemical plant... Vice President Quayle says the U-S-backed rebels in Nicaragua will NOT lay down their weapons immediately, as he requested.

The day's top news... next, from U-P-I.

The eve of East Germany's first free elections saw rallies for two different positions on the nation's future.

Several thousand East and West Berliners today demonstrated for the nation's independence... while some 35-thousand others called for the East

Bloc country to reunite with West Germany.

Analysts predict a close race between the three-party conservative Alliance for Germany and the Social Democratic Party in tomorrow's elections... which could determine the pace of reunification.

The voting is virtually certain to end Communist rule in East Germany.

Warsaw Pact foreign ministers held a one-day conference in Prague , Czechoslovakia, today to decide their position on German reunification.

The leaders agreed that the Germanys should have the right to reunite... but the ministers split over the military status of the resulting nation.

Poland, Hungary and Czechoslovakia say the only way to control a united Germany is if it's a member of NATO.

The Soviet Union leads the other delegation that wants a neutral Germany.

President Bush says he doesn't- quoting now- ''lament what happened'' to a suspected chemical weapons factory in Libya.

Libya is blaming foreign intelligence agents for the fire that destroyed the Rabta plant... which it claims manufactured pharmaceuticals.

Libyan officials today did NOT directly accuse the United States in the incident... but suggested that the United States and Israel had the most to gain from the destruction of the plant.

Bush says he's still NOT sure if the fire was an accident or an act of sabotage... but he's certain the plant was used to make mustard and nerve gas.

The president also took steps to ''clarify'' comments by White House budget director Richard Darman, that led to speculation Bush was reneging on his pledge of NO new taxes.

Darman had voiced administration support for talks on a Democratic deficit-reduction plan that calls for a rejection of all tax-cut proposals.

Bush says Darman was really only discussing the administration's capital gains tax cut.

(MARCH 17) UPI - Vice President Quayle appeared on a news show today to voice his opinions on a range of topics... including the Nicaraguan Contras and the situation in Lithuania.

Quayle said the U-S-backed Nicaraguan rebels are NOT going to disarm immediately... despite his call for them to do so yesterday.

The vice president said the Contras told him that continuing Sandinista aggression prevents them from laying down their weapons. He says the rebels may wait until the new government... set to be sworn-in on April 25th... proves it- quote- ''can institute democracy.''

On the question of Lithuania, Quayle said he remains hopeful that Soviet President Gorbachev will keep his promise and NOT resort to violence. Moscow is seeking to force the Baltic republic to abandon its claim of independence.

The vice president says he's sure Gorbachev is thinking that Lithuania's action could spark similar moves by other Soviet states.

(MARCH 17) UPI - Lithuanian President Vytautis Landsbergis says Soviet troops are on the move in eastern and southern Lithuania.

He says paratroops are being transferred from region to region.

Reports say Soviet helicopters dropped leaflets on the capital of Vilnius, saying parliament's recent declaration of independence does NOT represent the will of the Lithuanian people.

The reported activity comes one day after Soviet President Gorbachev sent Landsbergis a message. It gave him until Monday to respond to a Moscow resolution branding the March 11th independence declaration ''null and void'' and declaring that Soviet laws still operate in Lithuania.

Soviet television reported that thousands of people in Vilnius rallied in support of their new government. The official Tass news agency said ''many thousands'' in the fellow Baltic republic of Latvia demonstrated in their capital of Riga to demand the election of nationalists in balloting tomorrow.

(MARCH 17) UPI - Secretary of State Baker is off for Africa tomorrow for talks with black and white leaders.

Baker's five-day trip is meant to show support for democratic and economic reforms sweeping Namibia, South Africa and Zaire.

The most dramatic meeting may be with in Namibia with black leader Nelson Mandela, who was freed last month after 27 years in prison.

Baker will go to Cape Town on Thursday to congratulate South African President Frederik de Klerk for freeing Mandela and making other reforms of the apartheid system, which denies blacks basic rights.

But the delicacy of the meetings was made clear today as Mandela said he would meet Baker in Namibia but NOT South Africa. He says the Baker-de Klerk meeting in South Africa could give the international community the wrong message.

Baker is travelling at a time of great violence among blacks in South Africa. Residents of a township near Johannesburg today buried 14 dead from fighting among taxi organizations. Mandela has attributed much of the violence to the pressures caused by apartheid.

Some residential areas of the South today are under 10 feet of water.

Floods that have carried six people to their deaths broke a levee and a dam today.

The dam on Kinchafoonee Creek, north of Preston, Georgia, burst this morning, driving up water levels downstream by 6 inches an hour.

The sundered levee on the Pea River sent another surge into the already flooded town of Elba, Alabama. The downtown is covered by up to 10 feet of water, and 300 or more people have been forced from their homes.

Alabama was socked by up to 17 inches of rain yesterday and Thursday. Selma and Montgomery have severe flooding in residential and business areas. The worst isn't over, with the National Weather Service forecasting that the Alabama River will crest on Monday 20 feet above flood stage.

Six people drowned in Alabama's southern Covington County last night after their car was swept from a washed-out bridge.

Tennessee, the Carolinas and Georgia also have dangerous flooding.

CAIRO (MARCH 18) - Italian Foreign Minister Gianni de Michelis suggested Sunday that the Mediterranean states should set up a mechanism akin to the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe (Csce) known as the Helsinki Conference.

Speaking to newsmen after talks with President Hosny Mubarak, Foreign Minister Esmat Abdel Meguid and Premier Atef Sidki, de Michelis said the time was ripe for such an initiative.

He said a solution of the most pressing problems in the region, such as the Palestinian problem, the Lebanese conflict and the Cyprus question, had come within grasp.

It was thus necessary that the Mediterranean states should find their way to peaceful cooperation and security in the region through a cooperation conference.

De Michelis said that Italy, which assumes the presidency of the European Community on July 1, will try to ensure that the process gets underway by the end of this year.

PARIS (MARCH 18) - The Parisian police, who for years have turned a blind eye to the ill-famed Rue Saint-Denis where prostitutes ply their trade, last week acted out of character and descended in strength on the street of sin.

Around 100 policemen raided the fleshpots in one of the city's central thoroughfares in a three-day offensive starting Thursday and arrested several suspected "godfathers" -- among them a police inspector in the vice-squad and a retired officer who was formerly the squad's deputy commissioner.

Inspector Andre Pommarede, 54, and Raymond Pasteau, 75, the vice squad's ex-deputy commissioner, were charged with "complicity in making premises available for prostitution", presumably a euphemism for taking a cut of the girls' earnings.

In an embarrassing reminder of the "Jobic affair" last year -- when police commissioner Yves Jobic was charged with living off immoral earnings -- the raid highlighted the temptations facing policemen on the red-light beat.

Mr. Pommarede, with some 25 years in the force, had the reputation of being "a model cop", reliable sources said. He has been freed on bail, but Mr. Pasteau is still behind bars.

The residents of the street, noted for the scantily-clad ladies seen standing in doorways, said they had rarely seen such a thorough-going police dragnet.

As suspected prostitutes and their protectors were carted off in police vans, cries of protest went up from the narrow street and the maze of nearby alleys, witnesses said.

In a three-day offensive, police achieved a "massive clean-up", one officer said.

The arrests of the two policemen confirmed rumours that senior police officers were involved in the lucrative but seamy underworld of the Rue Saint-Denis, one of the few streets in Paris where traffic jams are a nightly occurrence at 2.00 a.m.

A source close to the investigation said the raid was "a success, a real blow against the gangsters who have set up shop in the street, controlling the highly profitable rental of studios there".

As well as the two policemen, at least two other suspected leading lights in the Parisian brothel scene were also hauled in.

The investigations may lead to other arrests, the source said.

NICOSIA (MARCH 18) - Cypriot police have stepped up security at Larnaca airport on the Mediterranean island's south coast after a threat against Soviet Jews issued recently by an underground organisation in Lebanon, police sources said.

The island's main airport serves as a transit point for Soviet Jews arriving from Moscow aboard the Soviet carrier Aeroflot, who transfer to Cyprus Airways planes bound for Tel Aviv.

"Additional security measures have been taken since Thursday's threat, and these measures do not only apply to flights to Israel," a police official at the airport said.

Andreas Christofi, head of security at the airport, said an extra security cordon was deployed because the threat was being taken seriously, the Cyprus Mail newspaper reported.

The Islamic Jihad for the Liberation of Palestine, a group holding three U.S. hostages in Lebanon, last Thursday warned it would attack airports and airline companies used to transport Soviet Jews to Israel.

The group condemned the influx of Soviet Jews, who Arab states fear could be resettled in the occupied territories where Palestinian residents have since December 1987 staged an uprising against Israeli rule.

Cyprus Airways flies twice weekly to Tel Aviv and plans to add another two flights per week in coming months, whereas the Israeli carrier El Al does not fly to Larnaca.

Soviet Jews accounted for most of the 15,000 passengers who flew to Tel Aviv with Cyprus Airways last year. Some Soviet emigres travel by sea across the eastern Mediterranean to Israel.

MANAMA (MARCH 18) - Chinese Foreign Minister Qian Qichen arrived here Sunday to begin a two-day visit, the first to Bahrain by a senior Chinese official since the two countries established diplomatic ties last April.

Mr. Qian, according to the Gulf News Agency, will meet his Bahrain counterpart Mohammad ibn Mubarak al-Khalifa to examine moves to bolster relations between Bahrain and China.

A new Chinese embassy is to be inaugurated on Wednesday.

Mr. Qian arrived here from Abu Dhabi in the United Arab Emirates, where he discussed Soviet Jewish emigration to Israel with the UAE's minister of state for foreign affairs, Rashid Abdullah.

Arab leaders have repeatedly warned that the expected arrival in Israel this year of thousands of Soviet Jews would have a negative effect on Middle East peace efforts.

They have specifically condemned suggestions by Israeli Prime Minister Yitzkak Shamir that the emigres could be settled among Palestinians on the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Mr. Qian has already visited Iraq, North Yemen, South Yemen and Qatar on his current Gulf tour.

ISLAMABAD (MARCH 18) - Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto Sunday invited Islamic - but modern - solutions to Pakistan's political, social and economic problems.

''You cannot establish Islamic polity merely by islamising laws,'' she told the members of the Council of Islamic Ideology (Cii) which guides the Moslem state on Islamic matters.

Bhutto was referring indirectly to the Islamic laws decreed by the country's last military dictator, Mohammad Zia ul-Haq, who overthrew - and subsequently hanged - her father to rule in the name of Islam.

''Islam bars exploitation of man by man on any ground ... and assures equal rights to men and women,'' said the Moslem world's first woman prime minister to Cii, reconstituted recently.

New Cii chief, ex-justice Mohammad Haleem, agreed that Islam stresses social justice and fulfilling of the basic needs of the weak sections of the society.

Bhutto's main adversary and ruler of the powerful Punjab province, Nawaz Sharif, eulogised Zia as ''a dynamic, gallant and sagacious personality'' in Lahore the same day.

A leader like Zia was ''rare to find in recent history,'' Sharif said at the launching of a book titled Shaheed ul-Islam (Martyr of Islam) Mohammad Zia ul-Haq about his former patron.

NEW DELHI (MARCH 18) - Indian deputy prime minister Devi Lal withdrew his resignation Sunday, at least temporarily averting a crisis for the three-month-old government of Premier Vishwanath Pratap Singh.

Mr. Lal said that most of the issues over which he had submitted his resignation Friday had been resolved to his satisfaction and that he would not press his resignation.

The statement by the 76-year-old farmer-politician came after two tense days in the Indian capital during which leaders of the ruling National Front party flew in to try to talk Mr. Lal out of his resignation.

However observers warned that the underlying problem -- Mr. Lal's vehement defence of his chief minister son, Om Prakash Chauthala, who has been accused of election violence and vote rigging -- remained.

Their fears appeared to be borne out by the fact that no sooner had news of resolution of the crisis been made public than truck loads of hundreds of Chauthala supporters descended on Delhi to urge him to seek re-election.

Most of the nation's leading daily newspapers had urged the prime minister to drop Mr. Lal once and for all to preserve his main electoral platform -- that of hauling India out of a political system based on money and muscle and returning it to one based on values.

"Bad news for everyone," said one government supporter on learning that Mr. Lal was not to leave the government after all.

The chief minister of Gujurat state, Chimanbhai Patel, said Mr. Lal had backed down after receiving a letter from the prime minister lauding his role in forming and winning the Janata Dal Party, the mainstay of the minority National Front government.

The letter told Mr. Lal that "the mandate of the people was ... that we all work together and don't fall apart. The people will never forgive us if we fail them."

It also said that his resignation had not been accepted.

ISLAMABAD (MARCH 18) - A high-level delegation from the Pakistan-based Afghan rebel government has left here for Teheran for talks with Iran-based mujahedeen about an election formula for a grand assembly, rebel-run MIDIA news agency said Sunday.

The five-member delegation, which left here Saturday, is led by Pir Sayed Ahmed Gailani, leader of the pro-royalist National Islamic Front of Afghanistan, who is chief justice and in charge of the election commission in the Afghan Interim Government (AIG), it said.

The Iran-based rebels, who are Shiite Moslems, have abstained from participating in the one-year old AIG formed by the seven Pakistan-based Sunni parties, saying they lacked representation in the government.

Several exchange visits between the two sides have failed to achieve a reconciliation.

This is Mr. Gailani's second visit to Teheran in three weeks. During his first visit he was accompanied by Burhanuddin Rabbani, leader of the Jamiat-i-Islami guerrilla faction and the minister for reconstruction in the AIG.

Following the failure of the March 6 coup attempt in Kabul against President Najibullah, the AIG has intensified its efforts to hold elections in the areas of Afghanistan controlled by the mujahedeen.

The fundamentalist leader of Hezb-i-Islami, Gulbuddin Hekmatyar, who has split with the AIG, has opposed the election formula saying it was "not election but selection."

ISLAMABAD (MARCH 18) - More than 300 people have died of starvation in war-torn Afghanistan's Badghis province, the mujahedin news agency Midia reported Sunday.

It said the Murghab, Qadisi and Jond districts of the northern province were the worst affected by a long-predicted famine.

Most of the famine deaths were reported from Olabai, Alamnab, Kocha and Gorich villages of Jond district, situated just 60 kilometres from the provincial capital Qalainow, the agency quoted a resistance representative of the area, Molawi Jilani as reporting.

''If there is no quick response, the situation will become uncontrollable '' Jilani said in an appeal for relief sent to his superiors in Pakistan.

Afghan experts warned last December of a catastrophe if food was not sent to starving northern Afghanistan by the spring. They had recommended building up a stock of at least 40,000 tons of wheat by that time to avert disaster.

KIEV, Soviet Union (MARCH 18) - Ukrainian nationalists expressed optimism they would make significant gains, but accused local communist party officials of fraud, as voters went to the polls for a second round of elections in the republic Sunday.

Leaders of Rukh, main party among several forming the fledgling Democratic Bloc, said their members should win 30 per cent of the seats in the Ukrainian parliament after these latest elections.

They told Agence France-Presse they expected the communists to capture 40 per cent, but they hoped that the remaining 30 per cent of new legislators, likely to be independents from rural regions, would rally to Rukh.

Ukraine, Belorussia and the Russian Federation are holding a second round of elections for neighbourhoood and municipal councils, and republican parliaments.

Meanwhile voters in the Baltic republics of Estonia and Latvia, where nationalists have been campaigning for independence from the Soviet Union, are going to the polls for a first round of voting.

Figures on voter turnout in the Ukraine were not available as elections opened under sunny skies. But an AFP reporter who visited several polling stations said voters were only trickling in and appeared unenthusiastic.

Rukh accused the Ukrainian electoral commission of "irregularities", saying independent observers due to monitor voting in some regions had failed to turn up.

Loopholes in electoral law, Rukh added, meant soldiers on maneuvers could vote in several places at the same time.

Commission chairman Vitali Boiko had sent telegrams to polling stations throughout the republic, they said, barring observers from the Democratic Bloc from being present to monitor voting and counting of ballots.

Independent observers were allowed into most stations after a member of the federal Soviet parliament, Sergei Riabchenko, complained.

EAST BERLIN (MARCH 18) - West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl said the first free elections in East Germany marked a ''happy moment'' for Germany and for the future of unity.

''The voters have given their decision,'' said a smiling Kohl after projections showed the Alliance for Germany had emerged with an overwhelming vote of confidence. ''They have decided against extremism of every kind.''

Kohl expressly thanked ''our friends in the Western alliance, and especially the United States, for their support for us''. He also thanked Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev's perestroika reforms ''which paved the way for free elections''.

He said, ''The voters have shown that the path into the the future is not the path of socialism, but rather it is the path with the Federal Republic toward a unified Germany.''

The vote also indicated, he said, that East Germans ''want a free market economic system, and they want it quickly''.

West German Spd standard-bearer Oskar Lafontaine called the conservative win ''a painful defeat'' for his party. He said East Germans decided according to the motto ''if we vote (West German Chancellor) Kohl, the money will flow''.

PHILADELPHIA (MARCH 18) UPI - A toxic chemical leaked onto the deck of a Norwegian tanker Saturday and spilled into the Delaware River, forcing the evacuation of 250 nearby residents and making five dockworkers ill, officials said.

Nearly 13,000 gallons of cumene - a solvent used in fingernail polish remover - leaked, said the Coast Guard in a dramatic revision of initial spill estimates.

Cumene is potentially volatile and can be fatal if too much is inhaled.

Authorities first thought only about 125 gallons had leaked from the ship's tanks while the vessel was being unloaded at a pier. But further checks of ship gauges indicated 12,843 gallons were missing, Lt. Cmdr. Raymond Blowitski said.

Five dockworkers were sickened by fumes and 250 people were evacuated for three hours from a five-block area in the city's Port Richmond section. The five workers were treated and released at a hospital.

An open valve has been blamed for the spill on the tank ship Jo Rogn, which was carrying approximately 3 million gallons of three chemicals, Coast Guard officials said.

''The indicator lights on the bridge of the ship showed the valve was closed when in fact it was open just a crack,'' said Petty Officer Richard Minnick. ''That was the cause of the spill.''

Blowitski said the spilled chemical was being contained in a slip by a boom, and that vacuum trucks were sucking the substance from the water late Saturday. He said some of the spilled chemical was pumped into a ''slop tank'' aboard the ship.

''They'll be working through the night,'' Blowitski said. ''There's a smell in the area but the EPA has been monitoring it and it's not in the hazardous stage.''

The five workers who inhaled some of the solvent were taken to area hospitals for treatment of nausea and headaches, Philadelphia fire authorities said. They later were released.

The portion of the area near the dock was evacuated because of ''a possible breathing hazard as well as fire hazard,'' Minnick said.

Deputy Fire Chief Robert Dobson said cumene - which could be fatal if inhaled in great quantities - can ''cause an explosion risk if it comes into contact with an ignition source.''

Fire authorities had initially feared some of the cumene could have leaked into the city sewer system, but later determined little, if any, did so.

The incident forced the closure of the nearby Betsy Ross Bridge from Philadelphia to New Jersey and all traffic on Interstate 95 was briefly halted.

Minnick said the cumene was being transferred from the ship to the Unitank Co. on the pier when the leak occurred. Environmental officials were at the scene evaluating the impact of the spill.

FORT MYERS, FL (MARCH 18) UPI - A fiery explosion destroyed a Drug Enforcement Administration office before dawn Saturday, and agents were investigating whether the blast was caused by a firebomb.

No injuries were reported in the explosion just after 2 a.m. at the DEA office, which had been unoccupied at the time of the blast.

''The resulting fire virtually destroyed the 6,000-square-foot building and its contents, causing an estimated $4 million in damages,'' Al McCreight, FBI agent in charge of nearby Tampa, told an afternoon news conference.

The explosion came two hours after a blast outside a nearby home that also caused no injuries, authorities said.

The FBI dispatched a team of forensic investigators from Washington to determine whether the DEA explosion was caused by a ''possible incendiary device,'' FBI spokesman Brian Kensel said.

''It is clearly some type of device, but the forensics team spent the day combing through the rubble and they had to stop because of night. When they finish they will go back to the laboratory and do an analysis,'' he said. ''Until then it would be premature to say what kind of device it was.''

The probe was suspended Saturday night and was to resume Sunday.

Authorities declined to say whether they think the explosion was related to recent federal drug indictments returned in Fort Myers.

''I don't have any comment on that at this moment,'' Lee County sheriff's spokeswoman Jerri Martin said. ''They are looking at anyone who has been previously arrested by the Fort Myers DEA office as a suspect.''

A man indicted on drug charges earlier in the week had threatened to blow up the building, authorities said. But they would give no further details or say whether he was a suspect. They said they were seeking to apprehend him on an arrest warrant that was issued before the blast.

Martin said the explosion came 2 1/2 hours after a blast outside a nearby home in a south Fort Myers residential area. The first blast also caused no injuries, authorities said.

Kensel said authorities had not determined whether the two explosions were related.

''We're certainly looking into that possibility, particularly because there were two explosions in Fort Myers within the same area on the same night,'' he said.

The attack marked the first time that a DEA office in the United States had been destroyed in such a fashion, said Tom Cash, DEA agent in charge of the agency's Miami district.

Federal authorities said the blast would not slow their drug enforcement efforts on Florida's Gulf Coast, and that the DEA would not leave Fort Myers because of the attack.

''I think that obviously we have been targeted,'' Cash said. ''That's rather plain and rather clear. (But) those kinds of threats are not going to intimidate us.

''We're going back into business here as usual with some shortcomings caused by fire and some inconvenience, but we're not folding up the tent '' he said.

Authorities from the FBI, the DEA, the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, the U.S. Attorney's Office in Fort Myers, as well as local and state police, are investigating the explosions.

Of the DEA office blast, Cash said, ''That doesn't necessarily bode disaffective and disastrous for us. We're going to stay here.''

Duplicates of the records destroyed in the explosion were stored elsewhere authorities said.

NEW YORK (MARCH 18) UPI - The Players Association rejected management's latest proposal Saturday, but scheduled new talks amid hints the sides may have struck some dialogue on aspects of the arbitration issue.

Neither side would comment on what union chief Don Fehr called a bid to bridge the gap on arbitration, but there are hints that the parties are racing to save a 162-game season, even if it can't start on time.

''The clubs have evidenced more of an interest than they have in the past '' Fehr said when asked if he felt management wanted a deal. Talks are scheduled to continue Sunday at 10 a.m. in Commissioner Fay Vincent's office.

Owners negotiator Chuck O'Connor said his side was interested in addressing the ''manipulation'' issue, in which clubs can regulate a player's service time by sending him to the minors.

''It relates to fairness,'' O'Connor said. ''That is, the fairness to players to become eligible under the current salary arbitration system. There's been a complaint from the union that certain players are arbitrarily held down so they are in effect required to wait a longer period than the contract provides for salary arbitration.''

''It is competitive from our standpoint,'' O'Connor said. ''We want the best 24 players on the field.''

In the absence of an agreement, the status of Opening Day still appears in doubt, though no official announcement has come from the commissioner and league presidents.

An agreement some time this weekend might cancel such an announcement, but both sides in the dispute took care to avoid raising premature hopes.

''I've said before it's a slow, dripping process,'' O'Connor said. ''I didn't think it would be this slow or involve this many drips.''

''I do not suggest that I see an end to the discussions but at least they are taking place,'' said Fehr.

Fehr said he raised the possibility of taking the arbitration issue to binding arbitration, but O'Connor said owners oppose the idea because it might upset the economic balance of their position and because it might be a no-win issue for them.

So the bargaining continues.

''We do know for a fact in the last few days there has been some movement but it took about nine days to respond to something we had put on the table and they are still not quite there yet,'' said New York Yankee outfielder Dave Winfield. ''So there's been improvement, but it's still not there.''

Earlier in the day, Marvin Miller, the former union chief who won economic clout for major league players, addressed the executive board and said the union is solid. Miller said he attended at Fehr's invitation.

''I'm glad I was there,'' said Miller, who preceded Fehr as executive director and helped build the Players Association into one of the nation's strongest labor unions. ''A lot of people are under the impression that the salary arbitration issue either started this year or five years ago. Of course, it's been an important subject in every negotiation since 1973.''

Miller said he spoke for about 15 minutes, mostly about historical questions. He said he also took questions. He categorized the group of players in attendance as ''a good group. They are alert, they know what they're doing, no cracks.

''Among other things they're totaling up the impact of the stoppage. There's no panic there at all.''

Miller said he had not taken part in negotiations on Day 31 of the spring training lockout. He added that he could offer little help on the issues, but provide perspective.

When asked if some of the younger players were unaware of baseball's labor history, Miller said: ''I think you've hit it right on the head. It's not just saying this is the way salary arbitration began and what date. (It is) a lot more. What it was like in the old days, as it were. Age has its advantages. I'm about the only one around from the old days.''

Milwaukee infielder Paul Molitor addressed the charge that he and Brewers owner Bud Selig have communicated outside ''normal channels.''

LAS VEGAS, NV (MARCH 18) UPI - Unbeaten Julio Cesar Chavez, trailing on two of three scorecards, stopped previously undefeated Meldrick Taylor at 2:58 of the final round Saturday night to retain his World Boxing Council 140-pound title and gain Taylor's International Boxing Federation crown.

Chavez, trailing by six points on one card and five on another, floored Taylor with a right in a neutral corner late in the round. Taylor was up at referee Richard Steele's count of five, but Steele took a look at Taylor's eyes and waved the bout off as Taylor's handlers screamed and shook their fists.

The Mexican champion improved to 69-0 with his 56th knockout. Taylor, who had gotten the best of many inner exchanges, fell to 24-1-1. He trailed by one point on the other judge's card.

Juan Coggi of Argentina is the World Boxing Association titleholder.

Chavez maintained a defensive posture in the first round, then split Taylor's lip in the second when he landed a strong right early and two rights and a left before the bell.

Taylor's quick footwork slowed in the third round and Chavez nailed him with a left hook to the belly and short right to the jaw. Chavez appeared even more confident in the fourth when he came forward and got the best of a mid-ring exchange to the body.

The infighting continued in the fifth, but Taylor got off first and scoredmore frequently despite a left eye that appeared to be closing. After an uneventful sixth round, Taylor connected on the more effective punches in the seventh.

Chavez was backpedaling in the eighth, but Taylor did not seem to have a strong enough punch to do much damage. Chavez went back to sharpshooting in the ninth and landed clean blows.

The two went to war in what should become a memorable 10th round when Taylor connected with a stinging three-punch combination in the first half-minute, but Chavez rallied with beautiful flurries of his own.

Taylor looked like his gas tank was empty in the 11th, but Chavez was no more energetic. Chavez was winning the 12th round when he caught Taylor with the right.

The matchup, which had been eagerly anticipated by the sport's purists, pitted Chavez's power and body attack against Taylor's speed and younger legs. Chavez was a slight favorite.

In what had become a pre-fight ritual, Chavez openly complained about his earnings. The Mexican, who weighed 139 1-2, made a career-high $1.4 million, but that figure was low when taken into account that Home Box Office says it paid promoter Don King nearly $12 million for a six-fight package that ends with Chavez-Taylor.

Taylor, a Philadelphia fighter who is promoted by Main Events, earned his biggest check - $1.1 million. He weighed 139 3-4.

#90077u0083 03/18/1990 ~United Press International
TUCSON, AZ (MARCH 18) UPI - Greyhound officials and representatives for striking employees met for about nine hours with the help of a federal mediator Saturday, but no progress was reported and each side blamed the other for strike-related violence.

Representatives for Greyhound and Amalgamated Council of Greyhound Locals held face-to-face talks, meetings with the mediator and caucuses throughout the day and, following a dinner break, decided to recess until 9:30 a.m. Sunday.

''At this point, I would say we are not making progress,'' said P. Anthony Lannie, Greyhound executive vice president and chief negotiator, at the end of the day's negotiations. Union bargainer Edward Strait agreed and said the talks were going ''very slow.''

Lannie said violence accompanying the two-week strike was not discussed at in the negotiations, but it was an underlying theme.

''The union is going to have to control the violence,'' said the company official. ''Violence is not discussed at the table. Other than that, the company has strongly expressed its sense of indignation and concern for innocent bystanders that have been harmed, as well as for drivers who are working for the company and do not deserve this treatment.''

''I believe they are using this violence as a tactic to influence the negotiations,'' Lannie said.

Strait rejected the company spokesman's assertion.

''Right now, as far as I know, no union member has committed any act of violence,'' he said. ''If we do any violence, we're hurting ourselves.''

''I think the Greyhound public image is being hurt because they are the ones that are hitting people on the picket lines. They are the ones running over people. They're the ones killing people,'' said Strait, referring to a picket struck and killed in an accident early in the walkout.

Strait said he was no more responsible for the violence than Lannie.

Asked who was responsible for the various shootings at buses and other violent acts, Strait said, ''Well, it could be a bunch of crazies out there.''

Lannie's Greyhound bargaining team and union negotiators, led by Strait, convened first in separate meeting rooms Saturday morning, with federal mediator Bernard DeLury going back and forth between the two groups.

During the morning talks, the union presented its promised ''counter-proposal,'' which the company first studied during a three-hour midday break.

Before the talks convened, Strait was optimistic that the discussions, the first since the strike began March 2, might end in a settlement. He would not elaborate on the union's new offer, other than to say it was developed by the union without the mediator.

Before talks began, the two sides also differed on the major roadblocks to a new contract.

''The only issue is money - pure and simple,'' Greyhound's Lannie said.

Strait, however, contended that the union is most concerned about other issues, primarily work rules and grievance procedure arbitration.

Union spokesman Nick Nichols said union bargainers suggested that accountants or ''number crunchers'' from each side take a look at the proposals.

Nichols said the union's proposal was worth about $40 million over three years and included a modest 4-5 percent pay increase. He said Greyhound's proposal that company officials said would cost $63 million was ''blue smoke'' because it was contingent on increased profitability and ridership.

Earlier contract talks broke off, triggering the bitter walkout by many of the company's 6,300 union drivers and some 3,000 baggage handlers, mechanics, ticket agents and reservation clerks.

Greyhound has hired about 1,000 permanent replacement drivers in an attempt to remedy schedule disruptions, angering some union members and spawning gunfire and other violence.

A company spokesman reported two new strike-related confrontations.

In Mobile, Ala., two striking drivers were arrested for harassment when they pulled open the engine-cover doors on a bus pulling into the terminal spokesman Bill Kula said.

(MARCH 18) UPI - The Atlantic Coast Conference, which was slighted by the tournament selection committee heading into the NCAA tournament, is having the last laugh.

Sure, all the ''Big'' conferences are doing well, but the ACC placed three teams in the tournament's Final 16 with victories Saturday, leaving the conference with a perfect 8-0 record.

The Big Eight, the Big East, and the Big Ten received most of the headlines this year, but the ACC, a perennial conference power is outshining them all.

North Carolina, Clemson and Georgia Tech each had impressive victories and the ACC could have all five of their tournament entries in the Final 16 when Duke and Virginia play Sunday.

The tournament committee gave no ACC team higher than a No. 3 seed (Duke), seeded tournament conferece champion Georgia Tech fifth and bypassed Maryland altogether.

The committee apparently felt that the conference wasn't as strong as in years past.

So much for that notion.

North Carolina, which struggled earlier this year, advanced to the Sweet 16 for the 10th straight time, with a dramatic 79-77 victory over No. 1 Oklahoma in the Midwest Region.

Rick Fox banked in a driving shot with one second remaining to give the Tar Heels their dramatic victory over the top-ranked Sooners in a memorable matchup.

''It was a very special win to this coaching staff,'' said Carolina Coach Dean Smith. ''This is a special team for me to coach and to overcome a very good Oklahoma team like we did, well, I like that a lot.''

The victory moved the Tar Heels, 21-12, into the Midwest Region semifinals Thursday night against the eighth-ranked Arkansas Razorbacks - who survived a scare for the second straight game before eliminating the Dayton Flyers, 86-84.

With the victory, North Carolina became the winningest school in college basketball history, producing its 1,479th win to pass Kentucky.

''The hardest way to get to the Sweet 16 is to beat the No. 1 team,'' Smith said. ''We knew it would be difficut, but we played with poise and confidence. I know it was difficult for Oklahoma to lose because they must feel they played well. We played our best game.''

''Despite the loss, I'm proud of this team,'' said Oklahoma Coach Billy Tubbs. ''We just didn't make the right plays at the right time. Fox was the logical choice for them to go to. We didn't stop penetration all game long.''

The Sooners, who vaulted to the No. 1 spot in the polls with impressive late-season victories finish 27-5.

--- IN OTHER TOURNY ACTION ---

Midwest Regional At Austin, Texas
Arkansas 86, Dayton 84

Todd Day grabbed his own rebound and scored on a layup with four seconds to play, allowing the fourth-ranked Razorbacks to survive a Dayton upset bid and down the Flyers. Arkansas fell behind by 11 points early, and regained the lead only to see it slip away down the stretch. Negele Knight's three-pointer tied the score 84-84, setting up Day's heroics. Day who paced the Razorbacks with 25, lofted a jumper from just left of the free-throw line, grabbed his own miss and layed it in to give Arkansas the win.

Southeast Regional At Knoxville, Tenn.
Georgia Tech 94, LSU 91

Dennis Scott scored 30 points, including two free throws with seven seconds left Saturday, giving Georgia Tech the victory over Louisiana State, in what turned out to be All-America guard Chris Jackson's final collegiate game. Kenny Anderson, who scored 26 points, put the Yellow Jackets up 92-91 on a short jumper with 1:36 left, then Scott sealed it after LSU's Maurice Williamson's driving shot rolled off the rim with eight seconds to go. Georgia Tech, 26-6, will play the region's top seed, Michigan State, in the round of 16 next Friday night in New Orleans. Jackson, who announced after the game that he would enter June's NBA draft had only 13 points before fouling out with 2:42 left.

Michigan State 62, Cal-Santa Barbara 58

Steve Smith scored 21 points, and Michigan State used its stingy defense to stifle California-Santa Barbara and advance to the semifinals of the Southeast Regional. The Spartans, top seed in the Southeast, won their 12th straight by holding the Gauchos to 33 percent shooting. Cal-Santa Barbara improved its final percentage and the score by outscoring the Spartans 18-7 over the last two minutes. Michigan State, 28-5, moves into the round of 16 and will play Friday night in New Orleans against the winner of the Georgia Tech-Louisiana State game. Cal-Santa Barbara, which knocked off Houston in the opening round, finishes 21-9.

Eastern Regional At Hartford, Conn.
Clemson 79, La Salle 75

Dale Davis scored 26 points and grabbed 17 rebounds and No. 17 Clemson recovered from a 19-point deficit, ending No. 13 La Salle's 22-game winning streak and setting up a meeting with No. 3 Connecticut in the NCAA tournament's round of 16. Sean Tyson added 17 points and 11 rebounds for the Tigers, 26-8, who held a 55-36 rebounding advantage. They shot 64 percent in the second half, hitting 18 of 28, after shooting only 32 percent before halftime.

Connecticut 74, California 54

Chris Smith scored 24 points and No. 3 Connecticut's pressing defense forced 28 turnovers by California and the Huskies rolled into the Sweet 16 with an easy victory. The Huskies, 30-5, forced eight turnovers in the first 4:14 as they built a 17-2 lead while allowing the Golden Bears just two shots from the floor. Connecticut, winner of 10 of its last 11 games, plays Thursday at The Meadowlands in East Rutherford, N.J. against No. 17 Clemson.

Western Regional At Salt Lake City
UNLV 76, Ohio St. 65

Larry Johnson scored 23 points and pulled down 16 rebounds and Greg Anthony scored all 14 of his points in the second half to lead No. 2 Nevada-Las Vegas to a 76-65 victory over the Ohio State Buckeyes. The Rebels, the region's top seed, will meet Ball State in the regional semifinal March 22 at Oakland, Calif. With the score tied 43-43 3:19 into the second half, UNLV took control on a 14-1 run. The Buckeyes were able to cut the Rebels' lead down to five on three occassions. But Ohio State could not get any closer. Ohio State, 17-13, was led by Perry Carter's 15 points.

Ball St. 62, Louisville 60

Chandler Thompson and Bill Butts scored 15 each and Ball State's defense held Louisville to just 38 percent shooting as the upstart Ball State Cardinals downed Louisville. Ball State, seeded 12th in the West, led No.

4 seed Louisville all the way and led by as many as 17 points, 46-29, on a Thompson dunk with 13:54 left. Louisville had a chance to win the game, but Jerry Sullivan's 3-point attempt at the buzzer was off the mark.

NEW YORK (MARCH 18) UPI - Yankees owner George Steinbrenner secretly paid $40,000 to a Bronx gambler who provided him with information about slugger Dave Winfield and who is under investigation by the FBI, a published report said Sunday.

Steinbrenner wrote two checks totaling $40,000 to Howard Spira on Jan. 8 after Spira agreed never to reveal the transaction, the Daily News reported.

Spira was involved in last year's controversy between Steinbrenner and Winfield and Steinbrenner said he paid the money to help Spira straighten his life out.

Spira has since barraged Steinbrenner with threats he would reveal the payment and go to the media with tape-recorded conversations between them unless he was paid another $110,000 and given a job at Steinbrenner's American Shipbuilding Co. in Tampa, Fla.

Steinbrenner said in an interview with the News on Saturday he regretted the payment and accused Spira, who was arrested in 1984 for coercion and pleaded guilty to a lesser charge, of extortion.

''If it was stupidity on my part, then it was,'' Steinbrenner said. ''But I honest to God felt that I could try to help this young man get his life straight.''

After being rebuffed by Steinbrenner, Spira offered to sell the tapes and his story to newspapers and television stations for $50,000 but all refused. He then decided to tell his story to the News for no money or promises, the newspaper said.

The story began in 1981 when Winfield signed a 10-year, $20 million deal with the Yankees. At the same time, Spira, then 21, associated himself with Winfield's agent and soon was working for the Winfield Foundation in a non-paying public relations job.

Several years later, both Spira and Steinbrenner became angry at Winfield and, based on information from Spira, Steinbrenner charged Winfield's agent with faking a death threat against Winfield during the 1981 World Series to provide an alibi for the slugger's slump, the News said.

Steinbrenner also admitted Spira gave him information about the Winfield Foundation that ''helped substantiate what we found.'' Steinbrenner filed a lawsuit against the foundation that has since been settled.

In a crucial conversation on March 2, Spira pleaded for more money and Steinbrenner accused him of extortion.

Six days after the conversation, FBI agents raided the Riverdale apartment where Spira, 30, lives with his parents, seeking all tapes, diaries, logs and correspondence between Spira, Steinbrenner and his associates.

They seized 11 tapes, telephone records, correspondence and legal documents, but did not get the tapes and papers Spira gave to the News.

The search warrant was signed by a federal magistrate in Manhattan, but sources said the probe has been transferred to Tampa.

EAST BERLIN (MARCH 18) UPI - Voters began casting their ballots early Sunday in East Germany's first free elections, which are expected to confirm the end of communist domination and set the country firmly on the road to reunification with West Germany.

The electoral contest was expected to be a neck-and-neck race between the three-party, conservative Alliance for Germany and the Social Democratic Party, both of which are backed by the main West German political parties.

The main contestants favor German reunification, but the SPD has warned against the rushed process it says the conservatives are seeking.

Only a trickle of voters gathered at the polling stations when they opened at 7 a.m., but analysts predicted a huge turnout during the day - a bright sunny Sunday during which temperatures were expected to soar to about 77 degrees.

Some surveys showed the Social Democrats would beat the conservative alliance by a thin margin, but a poll by the respected West German Allensbach Institute showed Saturday that the conservatives could get a majority.

No one doubts that the nation's first free elections will end the 40-year, iron-fisted rule of the Communist Party. The best the Communists can expect is to become a strong opposition party despite efforts to clean up their image since the ouster of the country's leadership.

East Germany's 12.2 million eligible voters were to choose among 24 political parties and alliances, not individual candidates. The parties will then send delegates to the new 400-member national Parliament, which will then elect a prime minister.

For many East Germans, the real outcome of the vote will be seen in the long run, the reunification of the two Germanys. Results of the elections could play an important role in negotiations for German reunification.

On the eve of the polls, several thousand East and West Berliners demonstrated in a downtown West Berlin square under the slogan ''stop the nationalist frenzy'' and called for the continuation of East German independence.

In contrast, the East German news agency ADN said 35,000 people demonstrated in the the East German city of Plauen for unification, freedom and free elections. Hundreds waved West German flags.

Electoral campaigning has been punctuated by chants ''Germany, Germany,'' ''Unity now,'' as well as pleas to voters not to allow powerful West Germany to simply swallow up the smaller state.

''This is something completely new,'' 50-year-old Lydia Klupsch said Saturday as she played an organ-grinder in downtown East Berlin. ''It's exciting, we have a real choice, not just yes or no for a single list of candidates as in the past.''

At a rally in the small town of Velten, conservative politician Lothar de Maiziere called for swift currency, economic and social unity with East Germany, urging East Germany to simply make use of a clause in the West German constitution that allows it to join West Germany's Federal Republic.

The official electoral commission urged political parties not to canvas Saturday so that East Germans could have a day to make up their minds, but many parties ignored the request and tried to sway undecided voters at last-minute rallies.

West German backing of the main opposition parties has been evident at many electoral rallies.

Political heavyweights from Bonn, including West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl, dominated the electoral platform, often overshadowing the East German campaigners.

Campaigning was marked by Western-style speeches and propaganda, with even the Communist Party displaying a campaign video to the tune of the rock anthem ''Born to be Wild.'' One conservative party was referred to as the ''Banana party'' because it distributed fruit brought in from the West at its rallies.

Minor clashes were reported during the campaign period, another first in East Germany where previous elections were run with Prussian efficiency and Stalinist rigidity. But none of the incidents were serious.

European Parliament officials, who observed the elections, expressed confidence the exercise would be carried out in a democratic manner.

NEW YORK (MARCH 18) UPI - For the second straight year diplomats from the Soviet Union accumulated more city parking violations than representatives from any other country, piling up 7,612 tickets for an estimated $352,720 in fines, a report said Sunday.

Altogether, police issued 53,341 tickets with fines totaling $2 billion to cars registered to the city's 246 consulates and United Nations' missions, the Daily News reported in its fourth annual survey.

Of course the city will never see one penny of the money because the scofflaws invoke diplomatic immunity and the fines are never paid.

The dollar figure was based on an average fine of $40 and the figures were obtained through the Freedom of Information Act.

If the Soviets actually paid their tickets, the Department of Transportation could repave Fifth Avenue to 125th Street, fill 360,000 potholes, put up 7,000 street signs or repaint the Willis Avenue bridge, the newspaper said.

For the first time in the survey's history, the Soviets returned a reporter's phone call, providing evidence that glasnost has reached New York.

''The number of spaces is ridiculous,'' said an aide to Soviet spokesman Vladimir Bakhurov, sounding like a native New Yorker.

The Soviet Union, with 160 vehicles registered in the city led the list and was followed by Nigeria with 46 cars and 2,187 violations; the Ivory Coast with 20 cars and 1,161 tickets; Greece with 31 cars and 1,095 violations; and Brazil with 43 cars and 1,089 violations.

Diplomats from the Ivory Coast accumulated more than 58 tickets per vehicle last year for the highest rate per car.

City traffic officials say the tickets are issued in the hope diplomats will break the illegal parking habit. They add the number of violations by diplomatic cars dropped dramatically since 1978, when 153,784 tickets were issued.

Rounding out the top ten were: France with 50 cars and 1,080 summonses; Indonesia with 85 cars and 1,076 tickets; Zaire with 25 cars and 923 violations; Yugolavia with 28 vehicles and 824 tickets; and Qatar with 18 cars and 761 violations.

ANNAPOLIS, MD (MARCH 18) UPI - Senators bent on defeating pro-abortion legislation took a break in the fourth day of their filibuster Sunday, but pledged to continue the marathon debate later in the day.

The senators remained undaunted despite the introduction of hourly quorum calls Saturday designed to test the support for the filibuster.

By requiring the entire 47-member Senate to check in each hour beginning at noon for a quorum call, Senate President Thomas V. ''Mike'' Miller, a Democrat, turned what one senator had called a ''limousine filibuster'' into a far more uncomfortable experience for legislators on both sides of the issue.

Miller recessed the Senate at about 4:00 a.m. EST Sunday, ordering senators to resume debate at 1 p.m.

Since the Senate's minority of anti-abortion members began ''extended debate'' Thursday in an effort to weaken or kill the abortion bill, the leadership had spread out required appearances in the Senate chamber and allowed senators to leave the State House to sleep or take care of other business.

The hourly quorum calls Saturday forced senators to loiter nearby the chamber, raising the pressure for a settlement allowing the senators to go home.

It would require 32 votes, or two-thirds of the Senate membership, to invoke cloture, end the debate and allow passage of the bill on majority vote. Abortion rights senators had 29 votes by Saturday, but acknowledged the next three would be the hardest to get.

''The plan is the appeal of 'Let's get the other business of the Senate going. ... You've made your point,''' said Sen. Barbara Hoffman of Baltimore, a leader among pro-abortion rights senators.

The debate, which had recessed early Saturday after an all-evening session Friday, resumed at about 10 a.m. Saturday and the first quorum call was held at noon.

''The longer it goes on, the more likely something will happen,'' said Sen. Howard Denis, a Republican from suburban Washington who was among the senators switching sides Friday and voting to end debate. ''There's a lot of psychological forces at work.''

The bill under debate was introduced after Maryland's attorney general determined that a 1968 state law restricting abortions would become enforceable if the U.S. Supreme Court ever overturned its landmark Roe vs. Wade decision, which created a constitutional right to abortion.

Senators conducting the filibuster - usually addressing a near-empty chamber - have read aloud from books, constituent letters and legal briefs in their extended attempt to obstruct the bill and preserve the 1968 law.

Other legislators spent the time between quorum calls reading or relaxing in the Senate lounge, where an almost continuous game of cards was in progress. Somer members used a 1-inch portable television to keep up with the latest NCAA college basketball scores.

Supporters of the legislation, meanwhile, worked to swing more senators to their side and choke off the filibuster.

At least one senator still supporting the filibuster said he could be swayed if more protections were put into the legislation for fetuses developed enough to live outside the womb.

Sen. William Amoss, a Democrat from largely rural Harford County, said it is unacceptable to him that the bill provides that a fetus of any age could be aborted based soley on the threat it poses to the mental health of the mother.

The provision appeared to be taking on a central role in the negotiations. Abortion opponents say allowing abortions late in a pregnancy based on psycological considerations is tantamount to having no restrictions on abortion at all.

''It is a matter of giving some more protective measures to the viable unborn,'' Amoss said.

The 1968 law, which became unenforceable after Roe vs. Wade, allowed abortions during the first three months of pregnancy and only in cases of rape, incest, or where the mother's life was in danger. It also provided that abortions must be performed in accredited hospitals and approved by a medical board.

After Senate passage, the bill would go to the House of Delegates for review, where it faces another tough test, though House rules prevent a filibuster.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 18) UPI - President Bush will accept cuts of up to $11 billion in the 1991 defense budget, tripling an earlier proposal and coming close to figures being proposed in Congress, a published report said Sunday.

But Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady denied The New York Times report, saying in an interview with CBS's ''Face the Nation'' Sunday, ''That's not accurate.''

''As far as I know, I've sat in all of these discussions and there has been no talk about a $10 billion cut,'' Brady said, adding that the administration would stand by its proposal of a $3 billion cut in defense spending.

The White House had no immediate comment on the Times report.

The Times, quoting unnamed senior government officials, said Bush was willing to accept cuts of $10 billion or $11 billion, about three times the $3.2 billion he proposed in January.

Bush's acceptance of larger cuts would be a critical development in the unfolding debate over how the government will deal with the virtual collapse of the Warsaw Pact as a military entity.

Such cuts would put the fiscal year 1991 budget at about $296 billion, unchanged from 1990, and force the Pentagon to swallow about $10 billion in cost increases attributable to inflation, the Times said.

For the coming year, congressional Democrats and some Republicans have proposed cuts of up to $13 billion. The savings was expected to go toward meeting the deficit reduction target set by the Gramm-Rudman law.

Senior officials told the Times the administration was ready to acquiesce to a reduction equal to that proposed by lawmakers because it would have to greatly modify its offer to win congressional approval.

''The adminstration is behind the curve,'' said Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz. ''The fact is that we all know, beyond any possible doubt, that the Soviet Union isn't about to launch an attack.

''But their budget doesn't reflect that. If they don't move, Congress will define the issue,'' said McCain, a member of the Armed Services Committee.

A senior adminstration official who refused to be identified said the cuts were made possible by the ''irreversibility'' of change in the Soviet Union.

''It's not perestroika or (Soviet leader Mikhail) Gorbachev that has changed our needs,'' the official said, ''but the fact that the Soviets aren't going to plow through countries that are unfriendly to them in order to get at Europe.

''Where we had enemies, we now have a big fat buffer in Poland and Czechoslovakia,'' the official told the newspaper.

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney told the Times that he opposed the cuts as large as those advocated in Congress and predicted they would create havoc with personnel and training, leaving the armed forces unprepared.

''If the cuts are at that level, and it looks as if they are going to be '' Cheney said, ''then there's going to be real trouble. You can't lop off $10 billion without cutting back on personnel or on readiness.

''You'll end up hollowing out the forces making them undermanned, undertrained, ineffective, which is what everyone says they want to avoid '' he said.

TOKYO (MARCH 18) UPI - Fire roared through the upper two floors of a five-story department store filled with weekend shoppers in an Osaka suburb Sunday, killing 15 people and seriously injuring six others, police and fire officials said.

One 12-year-old boy survived a miraculous jump from a fourth-story window to escape the inferno, they said.

Authorities said the dead - 12 store employees and three young boys - were overcome by smoke as they ate lunch in the employees' dining room or played video games in an adjacent area on the top floor. The ''Big Off'' Nagaskiya discount department store is in Amagasaki city just north of Japan's second largest city of Osaka.

Fire officials said the blaze, of unknown origin, erupted just after noon on the fourth floor of the discount store, which featured bedding, draperies and linen.

A shopper who first spotted the fire notified an employee, who immediately sounded the fire alarm.

Although employees safely evacuated some 14 people shopping on the fourth floor and scores of others on the floors below, the fire quickly shot to the top floor, engulfing the employees' cafeteria and nearby arcade center in heavy smoke and flames.

Police and fire officials said the bodies of all 15 victims were found on the upper floor. They said the three boys who died - believed aged from 10 to 12 - may have succumbed as they played video games.

Police said the dead workers - 10 women and two men - were all found in the dining area.

The smoke engulfed the area so quickly it appeared they had little chance to escape, they said.

Five people were taken to a hospital with smoke inhalation, officials said.

A total of 57 engine companies battled the fire for nearly four hours before bringing it under control, confining most of the damage to the upper two floors. More than 300 rescue personnel aided in evacuating the building, the Osaka fire department said.

Fire officials said an investigation was launched into the cause of the fire - Japan's deadliest department store fire since Nov. 29, 1973, when 104 people were killed in a blaze at the Tokyu department store in Kanagawa near Tokyo. A blaze at the Sennichi Department store in Osaka on May 13, 1972, killed 118 people.

ATHENS, Greece (MARCH 18) UPI - A natural gas pipeline explosion and fire Sunday in western Tehran killed or injured scores of people and wrecked a large number of cars and houses, the official Islamic Republic News Agency said.

In a dispatch monitored in Athens, IRNA said the blast occurred on Jamalzadeh Avenue in Western Tehran at 11:30 a.m.

''The explosion of a city gas pipeline in western part of the capital killed a number of people and injured scores,'' IRNA said. At least 10 cars were completely wrecked and 15 houses badly damaged in the blast, which was followed by a fire, the news agency said.

The cause of the explosion was not reported.

IRNA said the site of the blast was still ablaze when last reports came in two hours later.

ATHENS, Greece (MARCH 18) UPI - An Iranian deputy foreign minister said he believed the Western hostages held in Lebanon would be freed gradually within the next 10 months and blamed Israel for holding up their release, the official Islamic Republic News Agency said Sunday.

First Deputy Foreign Minister Ali Mohammad Besharati said Iran almost succeeded twice in the past two years in having the hostages freed, but Israeli military operations against Lebanese Shiites torpedoed both effort.

IRNA quoted Besharati as saying in an interview with the Tehran Times: ''I think that in the circumstances I experienced I can say that all the hostages may be released by next January.''

Pro-Iranian Shiite groups in Lebanon are holding 18 Western citizens hostages, including eight Americans. Terry Anderson, the Beirut bureau chief of The Associated Press news agency, began his sixth year in captivity on Friday.

The Tehran Times quoted Besharati as saying he did not believe all the hostages would be released at once but that the release would come gradually.

Besharati said Iran ''had no direct or indirect role in the matter,'' but ''many countries believe that we in Iran have spiritual influence in Lebanon. They also believe that we can use the spiritual influence for the freedom of the hsotages.''

He said: ''Twice in the past (two years) we were on the verge of getting the hostages released but certain regional countries and certain groups torpoedoed our efforts and the hostages remained in custody.''

The Iranian official said this happened the first time two years ago when ''all the grounds had been prepared for their release,'' but the effort collapsed when Israeli forces launched an attack on Shiite Moslems in southern Lebanon.

The second occasion was in July last year, when Israeli forces kidnapped pro-Iranian Hezbollah leader Sheikh Abdul Karim Obeid, he said. ''The matter remained in cold storage again,'' Besharati said.

If these two incidents had not occurred, the Iranian deputy foreign minister said, ''by now the hostages would have reached their homes.''

Besharati, who recently made several trips to Lebanon said: ''Nothing is secret in Lebanon,'' and ''chances of the hostages being freed are brighter than at any time before.''

In Paris Friday the Iranian embassy issued a statement saying Iran was ready to help set free all the hostages held in Lebanon. The statement also ''strongly condemned any action which may endanger lives of innocent individuals,'' IRNA said.

The embassy categorically denied that Iran was involved in hostage-taking, and ''stressed that the Islamic Republic continued its efforts to secure freedom of hosages, the French hostages in particular,'' IRNA said.

''Obviously, the Islamic Repoblic of Iran will spare no effort which may lead to freedom of the hostages,'' the embassy statement said.

(MARCH 18) UPI - Five dockworkers were overcome by toxic fumes Saturday when a chemical solvent escaped from a Norwegian tanker into the Delaware River in Philadelphia. The Coast Guard says nearly 13-thousand gallons of cumene, a toxic chemical used in nailpolish remover, seeped into the river. 250 people were evacuated from the neighboring area.

Federal investigators are searching for clues to Saturday morning's explosion at a Drug Enforcement Administration building in Fort Myers, Florida. Authorities are trying to figure out if an incendiary device caused the blast. The building was UNoccupied at the time of the explosion and there were NO injuries.

In Brandon, Vermont, an 18-year-old suspect in a double murder is hospitalized in critical condition. He was shot in the face by police after he led them on a high-speed chase. Officials say Shawn Allain was shot Saturday after he lost control of his sports car and scrambled out of the disabled vehicle carrying a shot-gun.

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir says he's been in politics long enough NOT to be suprised if the Likud Party decides to replace him. (MARCH 18) UPI - Lebanese police report fighting between rival Christian forces left six people dead and nine others wounded Saturday. Police say the civilian victims died when a stray bombshell crashed on a fuel reservoir and set off a huge blaze. The violence occurred in east Beirut and broke a fragile cease-fire instituted two weeks ago.

A Lebanese magazine reports negotiations are under way between a Swiss delegation and the captors of two Swiss Red Cross workers. The magazine has good contacts among Islamic fundamentalists and first broke the story of the Iran-Contra scandal. The two men were kidnapped last October near a Palestinian refugee camp.

These are NOT good times for Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservative Party. A national popular opinion poll reports Thatcher's party trails the opposition Labor Party by 18 percent. The survey also shows the Conservatives are losing traditional support among homeowners.

OPEC ministers wrapped up a two-day conference in Vienna Saturday. The ministers won a committment from Kuwait and the United Arab Emirates to cut back on excessive oil production that has helped trigger a slide in world oil prices. The meeting was viewed as a dress rehearsal for a full ministerial conference in May.

TAIPEI, Taiwan (MARCH 18) UPI - Some 20,000 people gathered Sunday to demand the dissolution of the electoral college and a popular presidential vote in the largest political demonstration in recent years in Taiwan, witnesses and political sources said.

Supporters of the opposition Democratic Progressive Party (DPP), students and civic groups joined at the Chiang Kai-shek Memorial Hall in Taipei for the peaceful rally. Many of the attendants came from southern and central Taiwan with their families to sit and listen to speeches by DPP leaders in the wide, open plaza in front of the hall.

The opposition argues the electoral college, called the National Assembly, is no longer representative of the people of Taiwan, as 668 of its 752 members have held their seats since they were elected in China in 1947.

The Kuomintang government kept the members in office after losing a civil war to the communists in 1949, thus justifying its claim that it is the sole, legitimate ruler of all China.

The National Assembly will elect Taiwan's president and vice president on March 21 and 22. The election of President Lee Teng-hui to his first full term in office is seen as a foregone conclusion, as he is running unopposed.

Many Taiwanese are also angered by moves by the assembly to consolidate power through its right to amend the constitution. The assembly has presented in the last week several controversial measures, including one which quadruples its attendance pay for this election session to $8,500, and which would allow it to meet annually instead of every six years. The Legislative Yuan is the country's highest legislative body.

More than 400 college students from all over the island Sunday continued a third day of sit-ins at the front gate of the white and blue memorial hall which has become a rallying point for protesters in the last few days.

Students napped in sleeping bags under make-shift shelters after spending two nights at what some of Taiwan's usually uninvolved students are calling ''Taiwan's Tian-an Gate,'' after Beijing's Tiananmen Square where at least hundreds of student demonstrators were killed last year.

Protesters had spray-painted slogans such as ''Dissolve the National Assembly, introduce popular elections'' on the white gates and walls of the memorial to Taiwan's late president.

''Our purpose is to show the ruling Kuomintang that many people are deeply dissatisfied,'' said legislator Lu Hsiu-yi of the DPP. ''It is no longer just a party affair - it includes students, civilian groups and everyday people.''

Yao Chia-wen, former chairman of the DPP, said, ''Nothing has come out of negotiations (with the ruling Kuomintang over reforms). No one knows what will happen tomorrow.''

President Lee, who was officially announced a week ago as the presidential candidate by the National Assembly, called for calm and vowed to accelerate reforms in a televised statement Saturday evening.

But critics said Lee failed to present a timetable for implementing democratic changes.

The DPP said it plans to continue the protest overnight before deciding on further action, while the college students vowed to camp out until March 21, the first day of the election.

Lee's running mate, Secretary-General Li Yuan-zu, who is also running unopposed, is expected to be officially named the vice presidential candidate Monday.

JERUSALEM (MARCH 18) UPI - Former President Jimmy Carter, who crafted the Israeli-Egyptian peace accords 12 years ago, arrived in Israel Sunday and said Christians must work to bridge the gaps between enemies.

Carter's visit is part of a private fact-finding mission through the Middle East that has included stops in Egypt, Syria and Jordan. During his three-day stay, Carter is scheduled to meet Palestinian and Israeli leaders.

At the start of his visit, Carter met with Jerusalem Mayor Teddy Kollek and then attended services at St. George's Anglican Cathedral, where much of the service revolved around the issue of peace and the role of the church in resolving conflicts.

''It is very important for us to realize that now not only the Moslems and Jews and the Christians must live in harmony, but the Christian Church in order to be strong and forceful and exemplify the teachings of our savior, Jesus Christ, must also be in harmony,'' Carter told the congregation.

Carter played a key mediating role in the 1978 Camp David Accords, bringing together Israel's Menachem Begin and Egypt's Anwar Sadat. They signed the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty.

In recent years, the 65-year-old former president has kept busy with his roles as election monitor in Panama and Nicaragua and his charitable work, most prominantly with ''Habitat for Humanity,'' which builds housing for the poor. He also has helped mediate the war between the Marxist Ethiopian government and Eritran rebels.

On Saturday while in Jordan, Carter urged Arab leaders to use the Camp David accords as a framework for peace in the Middle East. Commenting on last week's collapse of the Israeli coalition government, Carter said Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir has never been ready to talk with Palestinians.

Israel's Labor Party, however, was ''ready, in a narrow but very significant difference ... to begin talks with the Palestinians,'' Carter said.

The peace process and which direction the Israeli government should take triggered the collapse of the ruling Likud-Labor coalition and prompted the no-confidence vote that brought down Shamir's government. The primary issues over which the two sides could not agree on were a U.S. plan to begin Israeli-Palestinian talks and the role of East Jerusalem Arabs.

During his 40-minute meeting Sunday with Kollek, Carter said Begin and Sadat agreed that Jerusalem should not be divided and there should be ''cooperative management of its affairs.''

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (MARCH 18) UPI - The first shipment of relief aid this year left the Red Sea port of Assab for famine-stricken territory controlled by the Ethiopian government, the official Ethiopian News agency reported Sunday.

But a western relief official in Addis Ababa warned that negotiations between the government, church groups and Ethiopian rebels would have to be completed before any food could be sent to rebel-held territory, where about 4.5 million people face possible death by starvation this year.

The agency reported a chartered Hercules aircraft left Assab Saturday for the the Eritrean capital of Asmara, a government-held outpost cut off last month by rebels of the Eritrean People's Liberation Front.

A separate convoy of trucks left for Dessie, 250 miles southwest of the port. Rebels in Eritrea, a region that streches between the Ethiopian capital of Addis Ababa and the Red Sea, have been fighting for autonomy from Ethiopia for almost 30 years, but the Ethiopian government is reluctant to lose its only access to the sea.

The bitter fighting has prevented aid from reaching millions of Ethiopians suffering from a widespread famine and both sides have accused the other of using starvation as a tactic of war.

The famine, which reached a critical stage in the mid-1980's, is expected to flare again this year because harvests last year failed.

Government plans to ship relief aid to the worst areas were halted in early February when rebels captured Massawa, Ethiopia's only other port, 470 miles north of Addis Ababa.

Without Massawa, the government has no direct access to Eritrea or Tigre, another province where rebels are fighting against Ethiopian authority. The Tigre People's Liberation Front has controlled all roads into Tigre since last year and church groups have been negotiating for safe passage of famine relief convoys for several months.

John Wiater, a representative of the U.S.-based Catholic Relief Services, part of the interdenominational Joint Relief Program, said in Addis Ababa it appeared the rebels would give the convoys permission to enter Tigre.

Wiater said in a telephone interview that there were tentative plans to send an expiremental convoy north from Dessie, which is controlled by the Ethiopian government. He said he was hopeful the government would give the agency permission to conduct the convoy ''in the next few days.''

The relief organization has only four trucks in Dessie, according to relief officials, but Wiater said the first convoy would be more symbolic than practical.

''A few trucks don't make a relief operation,'' he said. ''But the signs are encouraging.''

WASHINGTON (MARCH 18) UPI - In one 12 1/2-hour period this week, the Census Bureau will try - for the first time in the nation's history - to get a handle on the number of people living in homeless shelters, abandoned buildings and on the streets of America.

But the effort, its methods and its ultimate use, has spurred intense debate among providers of care for the homeless. Many are actively helping the Census Bureau, while others vehemently denounce the count, which they claim will understate the scope of the homeless problem and could be used to justify cutting federal funds.

The Census Bureau acknowledges that, while it can count the number of people in shelters and try to count those in certain locations on city streets and abandoned buildings, its $2.7 million venture is limited.

''We aren't going to be producing the definitive answer on what the homeless population is in the United States,'' said Cynthia Taeuber, who is coordinating the Census Bureau's effort. ''The street count will certainly be very conservative.''

Mitch Snyder, head of the Community for Creative Non-Violence, said the Census Bureau may understand its limitations, but he does not trust what politicians will do with the data.

A 1984 federal estimate put the homeless population at 250,000 to 350,000. Snyder and some others who work with the homeless believe the actual figure could be 3 million or more.

He led a drive to persuade homeless shelters nationwide to burn census forms and not allow census takers access to their facilities March 20. The latter action is an apparent violation of federal law.

''On one level, if you were dealing with an honest government, all this would make sense,'' said Snyder, who runs the largest shelter in the nation's capital. ''You do a count. You do the best with the resources at your disposal, and you would offer the product and you would say, 'Here's the reservations attached to it.'

''(But) the politicians who will get this data, some of them at least, will use it in very dishonest ways, and will do it in ways that are intended to manipulate and control public opinion and drive pressure down on them to do something about this problem,'' he said.

''At a minimum, we want to make sure that, by the morning of March 21, everybody in America understands the deficiencies of what's happened so that politicians can't pull the wool over people's eyes and can't manipulate that data,'' Snyder said.

But most of those who work with the homeless are cooperating with the Census Bureau, and some pointedly disagree with Snyder.

''I think that some of the (homeless advocates) ought to be somewhat afraid of the count, because I think some of them have inflated figures in order for self-support,'' said Del Maxfield, executive director of the Denver Rescue Mission, which operates a 110-bed shelter for men. ''But I think, all in all, those agencies that are truly doing the work they (claim) they are ... will not be hurt by the count.''

Trying to get an accurate count of those on the street, where staying hidden is sometimes a matter of survival, is impossible, admits Taeuber. She also said the ''absolute number'' the Census Bureau finds will not be as important as relative differences in regions.

Taeuber has briefed federal government officials about limitations of the count, which has been planned for more than three years. In past census years, those in homeless shelters were counted, but only for overall population purposes.

The Census Bureau, using 15,000 full-time and temporary employees - some of them homeless themselves - will count the number of people sleeping in homeless shelters across the nation Tuesday from 6 p.m. until midnight.

From 2 a.m. to 4 a.m. Wednesday, workers will try to count the number of homeless people sleeping in the open ''on the streets;'' and from 4 a.m. to 6:30 a.m., they will count the number of people leaving abandoned buildings targeted as likely havens for the homeless.

Other problems aside, the timing of the count, to some, is ludicrous.

Goldstein co-authored a pair of reports on the number of homeless people using shelters in Pennsylvania and Philadelphia. Both were based on a similar ''snapshot'' one-day type census counts, and the results have been used by the state and federal governments.

But Goldstein points out the shelter counts were conducted in Pennsylvania on Jan. 28, 1988 - the second coldest night of that year - as opposed to March 20, the first day of spring.

OTTAWA (MARCH 18) UPI - Their first view of Canada is the tiny, wind-swept island of Newfoundland where job opportunities are almost non-existent.

But that hasn't stopped record numbers of Bulgarians and Poles from landing at the Gander International airport and claiming refugee status, in hopes of experiencing Canadian-style democracy rather than waiting for political and economic reforms at home.

''What they are telling us is that they are facing political persecution and the changes in Eastern Europe have not affected them,'' Paul Green, the airport's immigration manager, said in a telephone interview.

In the first 68 days of 1990, a record 1,357 people claiming refugee status - more than 1,000 of them from Bulgaria and nearly 200 from Poland - had taken advantage of stopovers in Gander to disembark and claim refugee status. That compares with 499 in 1989 and only a handful in 1988.

Virtually all Cubana and Aeroflot flights use Gander for refueling because of its size and facilities, said airport manager Laurence Lachappelle. At the same time, he said, Gander also has drawn the most aliens entering Canada who claim refugee status.

Many of those claiming refugee status are put up in temporary shelters in Gander until their cases are heard by immigration authorities.

At first glance, Gander, in the central part of Newfoundland, is not much more prosperous than the country the East Europeans fled.

The community of 15,000 people is bleak in mid-winter, experiences bone-chilling temperatures, and is swept by winds from the Atlantic.

According to Green, most of the claimants have return tickets to Moscow or other points in Europe or are on their way to Cuba, all a charade for what is really a flight to Western democracy.

Bulgarians and Poles by the dozens file off any of the 45 international flights a week that stop over in Gander. They and the handful of Latin Americans wanting refugee status enter the airport's transit lounge where they identify themselves to the Royal Canadian Mounted Police or customs authority, and ask to remain in Canada.

Most of the refugee claimants, Green said, are middle-aged and single. Some are skilled teachers, nurses or doctors, apparently financially well-off, while others carry only their belongings.

The processing of the applications involves a preliminary hearing before two immigration officials and a final hearing before a two-person refugee board. This alll can take months, although claimants are free to travel and find work once they clear the first hearing.

So far, only 103 claims have been finalized and of those 12 cases resulted in deportation orders. Those who are rejected, however, can appeal the decision to a federal court judge, thus delaying any departure by several months.

Philip Field, the federal government's director of immigration for Newfoundland, said refugee claimants tell different stories at the preliminary hearing.

Some say ''Canada provides a better, freer way of life. Others see Canada as a place they can get better employment. Some tell us they are being persecuted because of political beliefs,'' he said.

In Canada, refugees are those who fear persecution because of race, religion, nationality, political beliefs or involvement in social groups.

According to some immigration officials, the current problem with determining whether to grant refugee status is the rapidly changing political situation in Eastern Europe.

''To be certain, conditions are changing. But just because there's been a sudden turnover in a regime, say in Poland, that doesn't automatically render everything different and OK in terms of freedom,'' said a spokesman for Canada's refugee board in Ottawa who requested anonymity. ''Changes may be decided at the top that don't filter down to the village level.''

Although immigration is a responsibility of the federal government, it is the provinces that must bear the cost of looking after claimants until their cases have been settled.

The influx of refugees has placed a nearly intolerable burden on the province of Newfoundland, where the government must pay to house refugee claimants in hotels, motels and apartments in Gander and the provincial capital of St. John's. Social Services Minister John Efford estimated the province is paying more than $1 million a month to care for the refugees, compared to $200,000 in 1988.

CHARLESTON, W.VA (MARCH 18) UPI - A state Supreme Court hearing scheduled Tuesday will determine whether a county judge had the authority to issue an injunction that helped send striking teachers back to work following an 11-day walkout.

Kanawha County Circuit Judge John Hey on Friday ordered the state's 21,653 teachers across the state to return to work, ending the strike that disrupted school for 340,000 students in 46 counties.

But Bob Brown, executive director of the West Virginia Federation of Teachers, criticized Hey's interference, saying that allowing judges to enter the field of labor negotiations ''is dangerous.''

Brown said his organization will seek to have Hey's order struck down at the hearing at 10 a.m. Tuesday.

''It's our estimation at this hour that we likely will go to seek to dissolve the statewide injunction,'' Brown said. ''We are still talking with our attorneys. We have said all along that when the judicial system gets involved with labor management disputes there is always the danger of precedents.''

The federation and the West Virginia Education Association announced a settlement in the strike Saturday afternoon. Both groups said they would urge striking members to return to the classroom but cautioned the agreement would have to be accepted on a county-by-county basis.

''We have sent the recommendation out to the various county organizations, and they will have to make that decision,'' Brown said.

The teachers strike, which caused state officials to shut down the education system for a two-day cooling off period, was declared illegal by state Atttorney General Roger Thompkins.

Several counties had issued letters warning teachers to return to work or risk losing their jobs. Other counties, including Jackson and Greenbrier, had settled the strike on the local level, with teachers prepared to return to work Monday.

The settlement, negotiated with the aid of House Speaker Chuck Chambers and Senate President Keith Burdette, calls for lawmakers and educators to begin work immediately on a long-term plan for improving teacher pay and benefits.

Chambers and Burdette pledged to recommend a special legislative session once the package was complete.

The strike began after the WVEA accused Gov. Gaston Caperton of reneging on a plan to provide $35 million for a 5 percent pay raise and an extra $6.5 million for health insurance.

State Education Department figures showed 14,746 of the state's 21,653 public school teachers had honored picket lines at some point during the strike. Some 238,000 of the state's 340,000 students were not reporting to school.

Chambers said negotiations continued with teachers for several days before the settlement was announced but that talks speeded up after Friday's court proceedings.

''I suspect that when the court actions came, I think leaders of both unions felt they were about to barrel over a cliff with their members,'' Chambers said.

''We felt it was just a matter of everybody being unwilling to make that final plunge. And frankly, I think the decision of the courts made the WVEA and others realize there is a lot at risk in continuing the strike.''

TUCSON, AZ (MARCH 18) UPI - Talks between the Greyhound bus line and its striking employees' union broke down Sunday, about an hour into the second bargaining session since the walkout began more than two weeks ago.

Greyhound's executive vice president, P. Anthony Lannie, said company negotiators were leaving Tucson and returning to their Dallas headquarters.

Lannie said Greyhound blamed strike-related violence for the breakdown in the negotiations.

The two side had met for about nine hours Saturday, the first talks since about 9,000 bus drivers and other unionized employees of the nation's largest intercity bus line walked off the job March 2.

When Saturday's session ended, neither side reported any progress and each blamed the other for the shooting incidents and other violence that has characterized the bitter strike.

Greyhound has hired about 1,000 permanent replacement drivers in an attempt to return operations to a near-normal timetable, angering some union members and apparently prompting incidents of shooting at buses and other violence.

Talks resumed at a Tucson hotel Sunday morning, again under the supervision of a federal mediator, but ended after about an hour.

No new talks were scheduled, Lannie said.

''It's broken off totally,'' he said. ''There is no plan to get back together.''

In a statement, Lannie accused the union of ''stonewalling.''

''They had nothing new for us today or yesterday, while stepping up the violence,'' he said.

Lannie charged that an incident Saturday in Fayetteville, N.C. involved an officer of the union, who he identified as Fred Ingram, who punched a replacement driver in the mouth.

''There is no way to reach an agreement with people who are trying to break down the company through intimidation, violence and terrorism,'' Lannie said.

Union representatives responded that the company returned to the table only to avoid the filing of an unfair labor practice charge by the union. They also called the Fayetteville incident a ''rumor.''

''The story about an alleged incident involving an officer of this union is, at this point, as far as people at the table are concerned, purely a matter of rumor,'' union spokesman Nick Nichols said.

Paul F. Stuckenschneider, one of two federal mediators assigned to the talks, said he would be contacting both sides soon to try and reopen talks.

''The issues remaining are serious and they are many,'' the mediator said. ''And it's not unusual at this stage of negotiators for both sides to remain firm in their positions. We're not discouraged that it's over for now.''

Before the talks convened Saturday, union president Edward Strait was optimistic that the discussions might end in a settlement. The union had presented a new offer, apparently studied at the table.

Strait contended that the union is most concerned about issues other than money, primarily work rules and grievance procedure arbitration.

But Lannie said the union's proposal was too expensive.

''This union is simply trying to get something that they aboslutely cannot get,because the company cannot afford to pay it,'' he said.

Dallas-based Greyhound carried 22 million passengers last year, primarly low-income travelers living in smaller communities.

Late last year, Greyhound offered the union a new, three-year contract that included a 6.9 percent increase in wages and benefits in the first year. Union members, citing a 22-percent pay cut they took when the company was sold in 1987, rejected the offer.

NAIROBI, Kenya (MARCH 18) UPI - A giant lizard foiled the escape of a would-be rapist in the Kenyan capital of Nairobi, the Sunday Nation newspaper said Sunday.

The man, who was not identified, had taken flight from a hostile mob at the city's Dandora housing estate after he attacked a woman planting vegetables on a plot of land, the newspaper said.

Alerted by the woman's screams, a crowd armed with rocks, sticks and machettes gave chase before the man could rape his victim.

Fleeing the mob, the attacker ducked out of sight down the bank of the narrow Nairobi River and jumped across. But on the other side of the bank he came face to face with a monitor lizard.

Monitor lizards are among the largest reptiles in the world. Resembling south-east Asia's Komodo Dragons, they grow up to 10 feet long. Feeding on carrion and small mammals, they are normally harmless to man but look fearsome.

The lizard charged the would-be rapist, freezing him to the spot and enabling his pursuers to catch up with him on the far bank. The mob warned the suspect the lizard was on the verge of attack.

Deciding between the lessor of two terrors, the suspect recrossed the river and gave himself up to the mob, which beat him and dragged him off to the nearest police station, the newspaper said.

The Canadian leader adds Salinas could be interested in greater access to the North American market.

Striking West Virginia teachers may be back in school Monday. The West Virginia Legislature has agreed to hold a special session to address teachers' demands. The state's two major teacher unions responded by calling off an 11-day strike. It will be up to the teachers in each county to decide whether to return to work.

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (MARCH 18) UPI - A group of masked men broke into a convent early Sunday morning and attacked at least six nuns with machetes in a continuing wave of violence that has threatened Haiti's week-old government.

The men, believed to be members of Haiti's dreaded Ton Ton Macoute secret force, broke into the Sainte Rose Delima convent in downtown Port-au-Prince at 2 o'clock in the morning and demanded money, one of the nuns at the convent said.

She said the men attacked the sisters with machetes and sticks, seriously injuring at least six of the women, who were taken to a local hospital to undergo emergency surgery. Their condition was not immediately known.

Serge Villard, representative for the private sector on Haiti's newly formed State Council, said at the convent Sunday morning that the fledgling interim government of President Ertha Pascal-Trouillot would work to combat the violence that has flared in Haiti since Gen. Prosper Avril was forced out of the troubled Caribbean nation last week.

''People linked to the Avril regime want to destablize the government in any way they can,'' he said. ''We'll do our best to fight against the actions of the military. Finding solutions for violence and insecurity will be a top priority of the government.''

Pascal-Trouillot, a member of the Supreme Court who assumed the presidency when Avril fled to Florida last Monday, was to announce later Sunday the members of her new interim Cabinet, which is expected to rule until democratic elections can be held at a later date.

Avril, who had taken control of Haiti in a military coup in September 1988 was forced out of office after days of increasingly violent popular demonstrations throughout the country against his regime.

In recent days, armed gangs and members of the military have killed several Haitians. A businessman was killed Friday night when a group of armed men robbed him and shot him in his house in Port-au-Prince, local radio reported.

Officials in the new government charge soldiers still loyal to the ousted Avril and members of the Ton Ton Macoute are attempting to create a climate of fear in the capital as a way to destabilize the new civilian government.

The Ton Ton Macoute, created by the late Haitian dictator Francois ''Papa Doc'' Duvalier as a private band of henchmen, have managed to remain as a loose, underground organization even though Duvalier's son Jean-Claude ''Baby Doc'' Duvalier was ousted from Haiti in February 1986.

Political leaders, including Marc Bazin and Hubert Deronceray, urged Haitians Sunday to mobilize against what they called terrorism and to work toward creating democracy in Haiti, an impoverished country that shares the island of Hispanola with the Dominican Republic.

French nuns and French Ambassador Jean Raphael Dufour, who was instrumental in negotiating the departure of Avril last week, visited the Sainte Rose Delima convent Sunday morning to offer support and condolences to the approximately 50 Haitian nuns who live there.

A crowd of hundreds of Haitians stood in a silent vigil at the convent gates.

Roman Catholicism is the official religion of Haiti and an estimated 90 percent of the population is Catholic.

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (MARCH 18) UPI - A Tan-Sahsa airlines DC-3 attempting to land at a Honduran resort island was picked up in a gust of wind and flipped into the sea, injuring seven of the 32 passengers and crew aboard, an airline spokesmansaid.

Six passengers and a flight steward were reported injured in the accident, but none of them seriously. Airline executive Marco Antonio Briceno said the 29 passengers and crew of three were ''all safe.''

Briceno said he did not know the nationalities of the passengers but assumed they were mostly American tourists. The airport at Roatan Island, some 150 miles north of Tegucigalpa in the Caribbean Sea, was closed until weather conditions improve, Briceno said.

The DC-3 was attempting to land at Roatan Island at 6:20 a.m. when strong winds caused the pilot to lose control of the aircraft, Briceno said.

Briceno said 25 of the 29 passengers aboard were to catch a connecting flight to Miami from the northern Honduran city of San Pedro Sula, the Tan-Sahsa flight's final destination.

An airline employee on the island said in a Honduran Radio America interview that the plane had just touched down when it was picked up in a gust of wind and flipped into the sea.

The flight originated from Guanaja Island, one of three Honduran islands in the Caribbean that draw a number of tourists, many of whom come to scuba dive.

EAST BERLIN (MARCH 18) UPI - The conservative Alliance for Germany took an early lead Sunday in East Germany's first free election after four decades of Communist rule, West German television reported.

Based on computer projections of early returns, the second channel television network predicted a sweeping victory for the alliance of three conservative parties backed by West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl.

The network gave the conservative alliance 53 percent of the vote to 21 percent for the Social Democrats and 13 percent for the Communists. The network predicted the Liberals would receive 5 percent of the vote.

Election officials released early returns to the West German television stations but they were not available to other news media.

If the projections are confirmed by final official results, it will be considered a sweeping endorsement of Kohl's blueprint for speedy unification of East and West Germany.

The electoral contest had been expected to be a neck-and-neck race between the three-party conservative alliance and the Social Democratic Party, both of which are backed by the main West German political parties.

Surveys had indicated the SPD and the Alliance for Germany would each get about one-third of the vote, not enough to form a new government unless they entered into a coalition.

The Communist Party was expected to lose the election, despite efforts to clean up its image since the ouster of the country's leadership last fall.

East German Prime Minister Hans Modrow told reporters at his polling station he expected the election would give his Communist Party in the new Parliament a chance to provide ''a strong and active opposition.''

The SDP and the conservatives are both in favor of German reunification, but the SPD has warned against the rushed process it says the conservatives are seeking.

Only a trickle of voters gathered at the polling stations when they opened at 7 a.m. but analysts predicted a huge turnout during the day. The polls closed at 6 p.m.

East Germany's 12.2 million eligible voters chose among 24 political parties and alliances, not individual candidates. The parties will then send delegates to the new 400-member national Parliament, which will then elect a prime minister.

Many voters interviewed at polling stations said they were excited that for the first time in their lives they had a real electoral choice.

''This is a first step in the right direction, we hope it will bring some stability,'' said Galinde Guelzow, an engineer in her late 30s.

But one Berliner, 36-year-old janitor Ralf Jeschke, said he was not very enthusiastic about what the elections will bring.

''In the past we were ruled by pigs, now we will be ruled by money,'' he said.

Foreign observers said the poll appeared to be a free and fair democratic exercise.

''Our impression is good, our impression is the votes are free and running in accordance with electoral rules,'' said one of the observers, Polish Sen. Walerian Piotrowski.

On the eve of the polls, several thousand East and West Berliners demonstrated in a downtown West Berlin square under the slogan ''stop the nationalist frenzy'' and called for the continuation of East German independence.

In contrast, the East German news agency ADN said 35,000 people demonstrated in the the East German city of Plauen for unification, freedom and free elections. Hundreds waved West German flags.

CAPE CANAVERAL, FL (MARCH 18) UPI - A potential problem with the shuttle Discovery's nose landing gear has been resolved, keeping the ship on track for blastoff April 12 to ferry the $1.5 billion Hubble Space Telescope into orbit, the mission commander said Sunday.

Discovery's five-member, all-veteran crew flew to the Kennedy Space Center from Houston Sunday to review emergency procedures and to participate in a dress-rehearsal countdown Monday and Tuesday, a traditional milestone in a shuttle's launch processing.

Commander Loren Shriver, 45, co-pilot Charles Bolden, 43, Steven Hawley, 38, Bruce McCandless, 52, and Kathryn Sullivan, 38, plan to strap in aboard Discovery Tuesday for the final hours of the mock countdown.

Discovery is scheduled to blast off at 9:21 a.m. EST on Thursday, April 12 to kick off the year's third shuttle flight, a showcase mission to ferry the Hubble Space Telescope - HST - into orbit, a flight delayed seven years by technical problems and the Challenger disaster.

The boxcar-sized telescope, equipped with the most perfect mirror ever made, is the most powerful astronomical instrument ever built to operate above Earth's hazy atmosphere.

''This is a tremendous milestone for the HST project,'' said Hawley, who holds a doctorate in astronomy. ''This is the closest we've ever gotten to flight and there aren't too many wickets left to go through before the telescope is in orbit, hopefully functioning as a state-of-the-art observational facility for many years to come.''

Discovery was hauled to launch pad 39B Friday despite questions about a 6-inch nut that holds bearings in place around the ship's nose landing gear axle.

The issue came up last week when engineers discovered similar nuts on the shuttles Columbia and Atlantis appeared to be cross-threaded. Technicians assume the same problem exists with Discovery's nose gear.

But the only way to inspect the nut and make repairs, if necessary, would be to remove Discovery from its external tank and lower it to a horizontal position - a complex, time-consuming task that would require a roll back to the Vehicle Assembly Building and delay launch a week or more.

NASA managers decided they had nothing to lose by proceeding in the meantime with roll out and routine preparations for launch, a decision that paid off Saturday, Shriver said, when an analysis of Columbia's axle system showed Discovery's was safe to fly as is.

''The word we had as of (Saturday) night was (that) after a lot of consulation with the contractor and the engineers, they feel they know what the landing gear axle problem on Columbia was,'' Shriver told reporters Sunday.

''Discovery and Atlantis both have been cleared for flight so there's no longer any worry about our nose wheel and it looks good for pressing on toward April 12.''

A NASA engineer said the analysis showed that as the shuttle's nose gear hits the runway, the axle flexes, or bends, slightly, which can cause a few threads on the axle bearing nut to ''disengage.'' But the axle bearings, he said, ''were never compromised.''

While the engineering community apparently is satisfied Discovery's axle system is safe to fly, shuttle program director Robert Crippen's position on the issue was not immediately known.

Shriver and company spent the day Sunday reviewing emergency launch pad escape procedures with the start of the practice countdown scheduled for Monday. If all goes well, the countdown will end Tuesday at 11 a.m. with the simulated ignition and shut down of Discovery's three main engines.

NASA managers are scheduled to hold a formal flight readiness review March 30 and 31 to assess the progress of launch processing. If all goes well, the ship's countdown will begin Monday, April 9, leading to a launch attempt three days later.

EAST BERLIN (MARCH 18) UPI - When historians get down to writing the story of the 1990 East German elections, much ink will be devoted to the role played by leading West German politicians.

Sunday's election was the first free and secret balloting held in the country's 40-year history and was preceeded by an old-fashioned democratic-style campaign of rallies, speeches and parades.

West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl was one of the most active campaigners, stumping East Germany on behalf of an alliance of three conservative parties that he backs. He was shown on television news programs addressing vast crowds at rallies organized by the alliance.

The cries of ''Helmut, Helmut'' and ''Unity, Unity'' were no doubt sweet music to the ears of the West German chancellor, who wants to reunite East and West Germany.

But not all East Germans were pleased by his presence. Baerbel Bohley, one of the founders of the New Forum citizen's movement, accused him and other Bonn politicians early on of ''hijacking the campaign.''

The West German election matadors at times seemed to swamp the scene. Bonn's foreign minister, Hans-Dietrich Genscher, spoke at 24 East German liberal rallies.

In the past week alone, the former West German chancellor and honorary chairman of the Social Democrats, Willi Brandt, addressed seven meetings, his last just 12 hours before the polling booths opened Sunday morning.

Hans-Werner Oertel, a political commentator for the East German ADN news agency, said the wealthy West German government channeled $12 million to parties in the East as ''democracy assistance funds.''

West Germany trucked in state-of-the-art computers, data-processing units, satellite dishes and other high-tech paraphernalia to help the fledgling East German parties mount their campaigns and to assist with vote counting.

''This is not our show at all,'' an East German politician said bitterly. ''The West has taken us over. I guess it's a taste of things to come.''

A poll released Sunday indicated that 91 percent of East Germans want to reunify with West Germany and only 5 percent opposed the combination of the two countries, which have been separated since the end of World War II.

West Germany's Mannheimer Research Institute, which conducted the poll, reported that 82 percent of the people in West Germany want reunification.

Many of East Germany's 12 million eligible voters said Sunday they were delighted with the campaign, reveling in the secret balloting that allowed them to choose candidates from among the 24 parties and alliances contesting the 400 seats in parliament.

It was nothing short of a revolution in East German electoral procedure, given that in past elections voters could only choose an uncontested candidate of the Communist-dominated National Front.

''In past elections, we would go to the ballot box with the electoral list and we would just put it in,'' said Helen Winkler, an East German electoral observer in Leipzig. ''But now the difference is that we take a list and go in the cabin and vote. It is secret.''

''There were cabins before, but nobody went there, because if they did the others were surprised and gave them funny looks,'' she said.

PANAMA CITY, Panama (MARCH 18) UPI - Police investigating a group that claimed it was responsible for a terrorist nightclub bombing early this month found a weapons cache in western Panama, authorities said Sunday.

The Ministry of the Interior and Justice said the National Police, backed by U.S. troops, captured weapons in Las Vaquitas and Quebrada la Victoria del Corregimiento del Progreso, some 330 miles west of Panama City.

The ministry said police found 26 Soviet-made AK-47 rifles and 150 ammunition cartridges.

The raid followed the arrest Friday of a man identified as Samudio Bonagas in the city of David, who allegedly was distributing leaflets claiming the 20th of December Movement, or M-20, was responsible for the March 2 bombing of the My Place nightclub in Panama City that killed a U.S. soldier and injured 15 U.S. servicemen and 17 Panamanians.

The group, unknown until recently, is presumably named for the Dec. 20 U.S. invasion of Panama that ousted military strongman Manuel Antonio Noriega.

A spokesman for the U.S. Southern Command said he had no knowledge of any group called M-20, and declined to comment further on the matter.

The communist People's Party has denied any links with the group, which has issued statements threatening to kill President Guillermo Endara and U.S. troops in Panama.

Some 12,000 U.S. troops have left Panama since the invasion, and the U.S. military presence is at pre-invasion levels, with 13,000 troops remaining in the country.

(MARCH 18) UPI - Balloting is under way in East Germany. The country's 12-point-two Million eligible voters will choose from among 24 parties, rather than casting votes for individual candidates. Political analysts predict today's election will be a close contest between the three-party, conservative Alliance for Germany and the Social Democratic Party. Observers agree voters will officially sweep communists from power.

A raging blaze at a five-story department store in the western Japanese city of Amagasaki today killed at least 16 people and injured another 11. Officials say the fire broke out on the store's fourth floor. 13 of those killed in the blaze died on the fifth floor while three others died one floor below. More than 300 rescue personnel fought the fire for more than three hours before containing it.

The F-B-I has sent a team of forensic investigators to investigate yesterday's explosion at a Drug Enforcement Administration office in Fort Myers, Florida. NO one was injured in the pre-dawn blast, which virtually wiped out the six-thousand-square-foot building and caused an estimated four-Million dollars in damages. Authorities refuse to speculate on the cause of the blast.

The two sides in the 17-day-old Greyhound bus strike are slated to resume talks today in Tucson. Company officials and union leaders representing nine-thousand striking employees met for about nine hours yesterday. Both sides admit negotiations are proceeding slowly in an effort to end the violence-marred labor dispute.

(MARCH 18) UPI - Environmental officials in Philadelphia are evaluating the impact of a toxic chemical leak into the Delaware River. The Coast Guard says nearly 13-thousand gallons of cumene spilled into the river yesterday. Officials say they've contained the chemical- a solvent used in fingernail polish remover. But they're concerned about the chemical's noxious aroma, which can be fatal if inhaled in large amounts.

Former President Carter is scheduled to arrive in Israel today as he continues his Middle East fact-finding tour. (MARCH 18) UPI - A report indicates President Bush will accept defense budget cuts that are more than three times the three-point-two BILLION-dollar amount he proposed to Congress in January. UNnamed administration sources say Bush will tolerate cutting the 1991 Pentagon budget by as much as 11-BILLION dollars. Capitol Hill Democrats have proposed slashing the defense budget by 13-BILLION dollars.

Maryland lawmakers have failed to resolve a four-day-old filibuster staged by anti-abortion state senators. The head of the 47-member upper chamber ended debate this morning, but ordered a resumption of debate later today. Pro-choice legislators are three votes shy of reaching the two-thirds majority needed for cloture on the issue of keeping abortion available in Maryland.

Japanese fire officials are UNsure of the cause a tragic fire today in a discount department store just north of Osaka. The deadly blaze erupted on the fourth floor of the five-story building, and killed 15 people and seriously injured six others. A 12-year-old boy escaped the inferno by leaping from a fourth-story window. Most victims were overcome by smoke as they ate in an employee dining room.

Political analysts are divided as to who will fare better as East Germans go to the polls today. But most observers agree that the first free election in the country's 40-year history will result in a firm rejection of the Communist Party. East Germany's 12-point-two-Million voters will choose from among 24 parties. Victorious parties then will select 400 parliamentary delegates, who in turn will choose the nation's prime minister.

Among the African leaders Baker is expected to speak with are Nelson Mandela, Egyptian President Mubarak and South African President de Klerk.

Talks are set to resume today in Tucson between the two sides involved in the Greyhound labor dispue. Company officials and union leaders representing some nine-thousand striking workers spent nine hours yesterday trying to resolve the two and one-half week walkout. Employees are trying to regain some of the 22-percent pay cut they took three years ago when the company was sold.

West Virginia's two teachers unions have asked their 21-thousand members to return to class tomorrow. The move may end a strike that started March seventh after educators accused Governor Gaston Caperton of NOT living up to a promise he had made to raise their pay levels. Union leaders say they decided to end the strike after state legislative leaders agreed to call a special session to deal with teacher pay and benefits.

(MARCH 18) UPI - Iran's government-run news agency quotes a senior government official as saying he thinks the 18 Western hostages held in Lebanon will be released gradually within the next 10 months. The official says Iran almost succeeded twice in the past two years having the hostages released. But he says Israeli military operations against Lebanese Shiites torpedoed each effort.

East German election officials say it may be Friday before they can confirm results from today's balloting. The nation's nearly 12-Million eligible voters are going to the polls today in the country's first free election. They are casting ballots for any one of 24 parties. Analysts predict the big winners from today's polling will be the conservative Alliance for Germany and the Social Democratic Party.

(MARCH 18) UPI - More hope for the hostages in Lebanon. Iran's news agency quotes the first deputy foreign minister as saying the hostages could be released gradually within the next 10 months. Pro-Iranian Shiite groups are holding 18 Westerners in Lebanon, including journalist Terry Anderson, who began his sixth year in captivity Friday.

A published report says President Bush is prepared to accept up to 11-BILLION dollars in budget cuts for the Pentagon in the 1991 budget. The cuts mentioned in the report, which quotes unidentifed government officials, are about three times the three-point-two-BILLION figure Bush proposed in January. An 11-BILLION-dollar cut would put 1991 defense spending at 296-BILLION dollars, the same as in fiscal 1990, and the Pentagon would have to swallow about 10-BILLION dollars attributed to inflation.

(MARCH 18) UPI - At least 13 people are dead and many others injured in a natural gas pipeline explosion and fire in western Tehran. Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency says the casualty toll is expected to go up as workers sift through the debris. The news agency blames the blast on a gas leak. It says the explosion consumed a large number of cars and houses.

An Iranian deputy foreign minister says the 18 Western hostages in Lebanon may be freed gradually within the next 10 months. Iran's official Islamic News Agency quotes the official as saying Israel is to blame for holding up the release of the hostages. He says twice in two years Iran nearly succeeded in freeing the hostages, but Israeli military action in Lebanon upset both efforts.

RALEIGH, NC (MARCH 19) UPI - A fire broke out in the fourth floor of the Wake County Courthouse Sunday, forcing the evacuation of 134 prisoners and showering shards of broken glass on the downtown streets below. No injuries were reported.

The blaze, reported about 3:45 p.m., was confined to a fourth floor courtroom, just one floor below the Wake County Jail, officials said. The fire was controlled at 5:11 p.m.

Heat from the fire apparently caused windows to explode and the blaze left streaks of smoke and soot on the building.

''They are still investigating, we do not know the cause,'' said Charlene Bassett, a public information official for the county. ''A total of 117 men and 17 women inmates were evacuated from the jail.''

The men and women were moved to separate state prison facilities in Raleigh, authorities said.

Police roped-off a one-block area around the courthouse as members of Police Department's SWAT team moved in around the building while the prisoners were evacuated.

The cause of the fire was under investigation. ''They have some ideas,'' said Colon Willoughby, Wake County district attorney. ''It's too early to speculate what the cause is.''

The fourth floor contains two Superior courts for felony cases, four District courts and two courtrooms for civil matters.

Willoughby said he did not know which trial was scheduled for the courtroom where the fire was. ''It wouldn't be feasible to speculate which trial, if any, had anything to do with it,'' he said.

Officials said Monday's court session was postponed until at least Tuesday but county office workers were to report for work as usual.

Bassett said a decision to return the prisoners would not be made until Monday.

(MARCH 18) UPI - Bargaining broke down after about an hour today between Greyhound and representatives for its nine-thousand striking employees. It was the second day the two sides have huddled with a federal mediator at a Tucson, Arizona, hotel in a bid to end the bitter two-week walkout. Greyhound says strike-related violence is the cause for the collapse in negotiations... with each blaming the other.

Many East German voters say they're excited that for the first time in their lives they have a real electoral choice. More than 12-Million voters are casting ballots in East Germany's first democratic elections in 40 years. Foreign observers say the polling appears to be a free and fair democratic exercise. The best the Communist Party can expect in today's election is to become a strong opposition party despite efforts to clean up its image.

Former President Carter arrived in Israel today on a private fact-finding mission. Carter played a key mediating role in the 1978 Camp David Accords bringing together Israel's and Egypt's leaders. (MARCH 18) UPI - Iran's Islamic Republic News Agency says the death toll from a natural gas pipeline explosion in western Tehran this morning is expected to rise as workers comb through the debris. The agency reports at least 13 people killed and many others injured in the blast and resulting fire.

A dozen workers at a Japanese department store and three young boys were killed today when a fire turned the upper two floors of the five-story building into a raging inferno. Police say six other people were seriously injured in the blaze at the suburban Osaka store.

(MARCH 18) UPI - Voters in the Soviet republics of Estonia and Latvia are expected to send independence-minded candidates to parliament in elections today. And the new legislators could follow Lithuania's lead in declaring independence from Moscow.

But UNlike Lithuania, the Baltic republics of Estonia and Latvia have large minorities of ethnic Russians who may vote in enough pro-Moscow candidates to block a drive for independence. Ethnic Russians began moving into the Baltic republics after they were forcibly annexed to the Soviet Union in 1940.

Soviet voters in Russia, Byelorussia, and the Ukraine returned to the polls today to vote in run-off elections for republican parliaments.

Soviet President Gorbachev... voting in Russia today... called Lithuania's declaration of independence ''illegal.'' He has given Lithuania's leadership until tomorrow to respond to a Soviet ruling that the declaration is ''null and void.''

In the war of nerves with Lithuania, Soviet army helicopters dropped thousands of leaflets yesterday in Lithuania's capital and the Lithuanian president reports increased Soviet troop movements.

Officials in Lithuania and Estonia say Gorbachev has summoned leaders of the two republics to Moscow tomorrow.

A natural gas pipeline explosion in the Iranian capital of Tehran has killed at least 13 people.

The official Islamic Republic News Agency... monitored in Athens... says at least 10 cars and 15 houses were damaged and the death toll is expected to rise as workers sift through the rubble.

Firefighters are still trying to put out the blaze caused by the explosion in an underground distribution center this morning.

The dispatch says many people were wounded in the blast... some critically.

In Japan today, fire engulfed the top two floors of a five-story department store in suburban Osaka... killing 15 people and seriously injuring six others.

Authorities say 12 store employees and three young boys were overcome by smoke as they ate lunch in the employees' dining room or played video games in an adjacent area on the top floor.

(MARCH 18) UPI - Negotiators in the Greyhound bus strike walked out of a bargaining session in Tucson, Arizona, this morning only one hour after the meeting had started.

Greyhound executive vice president Anthony Lannie blamed union ''stonewalling'' and strike-related violence for the breakdown in negotiations. He said company negotiators were leaving Tucson and returning to their Dallas headquarters.

But union representatives say the company returned to the bargaining table only to prevent the union from filing an UNfair labor practice charge.

The two sides met for nine hours yesterday in the first talks since nine-thousand bus drivers and other employees walked off the job two weeks ago. Yesterday's talks produced NO progress.

Today's talks in a Tucson hotel ended after only an hour.

Federal negotiators say they're NOT discouraged that talks are ''over for now'' and they'll be trying to get the two sides back together.

The White House had NO immediate comment, but Treasury Secretary Brady denies a newspaper report that says President Bush is ready to triple his cuts in the 1991 defense budget.

Brady said in an interview today that the article claiming Bush is willing to accept up to 11-BILLION dollars in defense cuts is- quote- ''NOT accurate.''

Brady added that he sat in on all such budget talks and there was NO mention of increasing Pentagon cuts to that level.

The newspaper article based its claim on quotes from UNnamed senior government officials.

These officials say the White House is ready to accept larger cuts because it would have to greatly modify its offer to win congressional approval.

One senior administration official says the cuts are being made possible by the ''irreversibility'' of change in the Soviet Union.

(MARCH 18) UPI - A Newark, New Jersey, newspaper says the Bush administration made major changes to Transportation Secretary Samuel Skinner's transportation plan.

The report says the Office of Management and Budget softened or cut out key provisions of Skinner's plan before the president released his own national transportation policy.

According to the report, a public sector analyst who tracked the revisions said in a memo to his superiors that the critical edge of Skinner's proposal had been removed and the most challenging recommendations watered down.

It says the revisions were made to minimize costs to the federal government.

The newspaper says a comparison of Skinner's confidential final draft of his policy statement and the version released by the president March 8th revealed wide-ranging changes.

The changes were made in proposals for aid to mass transit, Amtrak subsidies and the spending of federal gas-tax money.

The mission commander for the April 12th launch of the shuttle Discovery says a potential problem with the spaceplane's nose landing gear has been resolved.

Commander Loren Shriver says that with the problem out of the way, Discovery is now on track for blastoff to put the one-and-one-half-BILLION-dollar Hubble Space Telescope into orbit.

The shuttle was moved to its launch pad yesterday, despite fears that a six-inch nut that holds bearings in place around the ship's nose landing gear was cross-threaded.

But an inspection of a similar nut on the shuttle Columbia showed that Discovery was safe to fly.

If the problem had existed, it would have required the shuttle be removed from its external tank and lowered into a horizontal position to fix the nut. That would have delayed the launch by a week or more.

Shriver and the rest of Discovery's crew flew to Cape Canaveral today to review emergency procedures and hold a dress-rehearsal countdown tomorrow and Tuesday.

(MARCH 18) UPI - The London-based Observer newspaper quotes UNnamed British government sources as confirming that executed journalist Farzad Bazoft was NOT a spy.

Iraqi officials hanged the Iranian-born journalist Thursday despite strong appeals for clemency by Britain and other countries.

The official said it was crucial they confirmed Bazoft was NOT a spy before they ''went to bat'' for him.

Bazoft visited a military facility near Baghdad without authorization in pursuit of a story about a massive blast reported to have killed hundreds of people last September. West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl has scored a victory in East Germany. The conservative Alliance for Germany... the East German sister party of Kohl's conservative Christian Democratic Union... has taken a commanding lead in East Germany's first free elections.

The Alliance campaigned for speedy reunification of East and West Germany while the opposition Social Democrats campaigned for a slower, cautious approach to the creation of a single German state... making the election campaign a referendum on the case of German reunification.

Earlier polls predicted a neck-and-neck race between the alliance and the Social Democrats. But four hours after the polls had closed... the Social Democrats conceded defeat.

West German television computer projections... based on incomplete returns released by election officials... show the Alliance taking about 50 percent of the vote, the Social Democrats about 20 percent, and the communists with only 13 percent of the vote.

Kohl is praising the results and telling East Germans to stay in their country as the two countries move swiftly to unify.

(MARCH 18) UPI - Voters in several parts of the Soviet Union were casting ballots today in elections that could lead to increased freedoms in several areas and a battle for independence in two Baltic republics.

There was a marginal turnout at the polls in the Baltic republics of Estonia and Latvia, where residents elected new parliaments.

Nearly 400 candidates are contesting the seats in the 105-member Estonian parliament. Just over 300 candidates are vying for the 201 spots in the Latvian ruling body.

Early returns are beginning to trickle in, but NO firm results are expected until sometime tomorrow. The Communist Party is expected to suffer large losses in both regions... and may even lose control in Estonia.

Voters in the nation's three Slavic republics... the Russian Federation, the Ukraine and Byelorussia... also went to the polls today to decide several run-off contests.

Parliaments in those republics are expected to wield greater power in a decentralized economic and political system promised by Moscow.

Weary negotiators in Maryland's state Senate agreed today to work on a compromise that could end a marathon debate on an abortion bill that dragged into its fourth day today.

The lawmakers reconvened this afternoon after a 10-hour break for sleep and opponents to the abortion legislation immediately resumed their filibuster aimed at killing the bill.

The measure is designed to guarantee that abortions remain widely available in Maryland even if the U-S Supreme Court eventually overturns the landmark Roe versus Wade decision legalizing abortion.

$1.54 million order for its DATAMARK ticketing terminals from the Swedish racing organization, AB Trav och Galopp (ATG).

The order calls for additional wagering terminals to be used at on- and off-track betting locations around Sweden. ATG has been purchasing terminals and software services from ITS since 1980 and has built one of the most sophisticated parimutuel racing operations in the world. ITS said it expects to deliver all of the terminals in the sale during 1990.

Commenting on the order, James T. Walters, ITS president and chief executive officer, said: ''I am very pleased to announce yet another in a long series of ATG repeat orders for our equipment. Since becoming our first customer in 1980, ATG has demonstrated its strong commitment to ITS products and to enhancing its wagering operation throughout Sweden.

''We look forward to continuing this impressive business partnership with ATG and our other customers.

''Our financial condition at this point in the year looks very good, having started 1990 with a $21 million backlog and, so far this year, booked a total of nearly $2 million additional orders from three customers. All products and services under the terms of these orders will be delivered during 1990.''

ITS designs, manufactures and markets computerized ticketing systems and terminals for use in ticket-processing applications worldwide.

BEAVERTON, OR (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - NIKE Inc. chairman Philip H. Knight Monday reported revenues and earnings for the company's third quarter ended Feb. 28, 1990.

Net income for the three month period was $63,105,000, or $1.67 per share, compared to $48,828,000, or $1.30 per share, for the same period last year an increase of 29 percent.

Revenues for the three months increased 24 percent to $577,869,000 from $464,663,000 in the prior year. Revenues from domestic footwear operations increased 21 percent, domestic apparel revenues grew 21 percent and foreign revenues increased 43 percent.

Consolidated gross margin for the third quarter was 38.1 percent compared to 37.0 percent in the same period last year. Sound inventory management and strong demand in all product categories accounted for the improvement in gross margin. Selling and administrative expenses were 19.9 percent of revenues in the third quarter compared to 18.9 percent a year ago.

''Futures'' orders for footwear scheduled for delivery in the United States during the period March through July 1990 are 30 percent higher in units and 47 percent higher in dollars compared to the same period last year.

Knight commented: ''In February, at the industry's major trade show in Atlanta, NIKE demonstrated its continued commitment to product innovation and customer service. Retailers responded very favorably as evidenced by the strong futures orders placed for the crucial back-to-school period. In addition, our international operations are showing strong growth.

''Over the past several years we have established a solid foundation with a wide range of products in a variety of categories. From this foundation, we feel very optimistic about our ability to continue capitalizing on the many opportunities available in the domestic and international markets.''

SACRAMENTO, CA (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - The California Glass Recycling Corp. (CGRC) Monday challenged the legal authority of the Department of Conservation's Division of Recycling to impose a processing fee on glass beverage containers.

CGRC predicted that, if allowed, the announced fee would cause "serious injury" to recycling efforts in the state and would have "a serious negative effect" on the California Glass beverage container industry and its 6,000 skilled workers.

CGRC, which represents the state's glass packaging industry, has been a strong supporter of AB 2020, the California Beverage Container Recycling and Litter Reduction Law - despite economic disincentives arbitrarily imposed by the state related to the mandated cost of recycled materials.

Its member companies have spent $22 million to comply with the law, and have purchased over 350,000 tons of cullet for recycling (ground glass used in the glass manufacturing process) since the act was enacted. The recycled content rate for glass containers manufactured in the state is over 30 percent.

In a letter to Department Director Randell Ward, CGRC President Lee H. Weigandt hoped to "avoid any adversarial process" and the "threat of potential litigation" but noted that "CGRC will take those steps necessary to protect its members' rights."

CGRC believes that the Public Resources Code 1474 (b)(1) prohibits a processing fee from being implemented prior to Oct. 1, 1991. CGRC also maintains that even if implementation of a processing fee were not expressly prohibited prior to that date, certain statutory and regulatory prerequisites must be satisfied before a processing fee can become effective. Weigandt's letter requests that proof of those prerequisites' completion be demonstrated.

Weigandt attributed the imposition of the processing fee on glass containers to recent media attention given to the landfilling of 7,000 tons of contaminated, unusable cullet. This unusable material falls well below the five percent rejection rate allowed under AB 2020.

"Since the inception of AB 2020," he wrote, the Division of Recycling has demonstrated "a continuing failure to understand that the California glass container manufacturing industry can only make new bottles out of old bottles that are color sorted and free of contaminants, such as ceramics, metals and other damaging debris. We can not make glass bottles and jars from garbage."

SCOTTS VALLEY, CA (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Plessey Semiconductors Monday announced that Haskell T. Waddle has been named president of Plessey Semiconductors, North America. Waddle will report to Doug Dunn, managing director of Plessey Semiconductors Ltd., Swindon, United Kingdom.

Waddle, 48, will be responsible for Plessey Semiconductors businesses in North America. Plessey Semiconductors has worldwide sales of approximately $250M, including North American sales of some $80M. Plessey's five-year plan projects worldwide sales to nearly double by 1992. Growth in North America is projected at an even higher rate.

"Mr. Waddle's years of experience in the electronics and semiconductor industries will be instrumental in meeting the challenges we face as we continue to grow," said Dunn. "We are particularly excited at our prospects for 1990, since we will be introducing a number of advanced products to meet market needs."

Waddle was with the Monsanto Co. for over 25 years in various management capacities, most recently as vice-president, Commercial Products, for Monsanto Electronic Materials Co., responsible for the U.S. silicon wafer business.

Other principle assignments with Monsanto included director of marketing for Monsanto's worldwide silicon business, director of the optoelectronic business group for Monsanto's Electronics Division and director, results management, for Monsanto's Commercial Products Co.

Based in Swindon, and with North American offices based in Scotts Valley, Plessey Semiconductors has developed a comprehensive range of standard parts and CMOS and bipolar arrays serving the industrial and consumer application market sectors.

BELLEVUE, WA (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Renaissance GRX Inc. (NASDAQ: RENX), a leader in the design, development and marketing of microcomputer graphics systems, has introduced Graphics Vision 1280, a Texas Instruments 34020 processor-based graphics controller.

Graphics Vision 1280 features a 1280x1024 resolution and a maximum configuration of 1Meg VRAM and 2Meg DRAM. Graphics Vision 1280 will provide 16 or 256 colors from a palette of 16.7 million colors. VGA support is available through the VGA pass-through circuitry.

''Moving into the 90s, PC users will demand higher resolutions beyond VGA 1024x768,'' stated Lynn Luukinen, vice president of marketing.

The 34020 processor is a super set of the 34010, offering an overall performance increase of up to two to three times. It is upwardly compatible with the 34010, allowing software written for the 34010 to run on the 34020 without change or modification.

When the optional TMS34082 floating-point processor is used in tandem with the 34020 processor, computation-intensive operations up to 100 times faster than current PC processors are possible. Together, the 34020 and TMS34082 Floating-Point processor provide the power required to perform floating-point operations in high-end workstation applications such as 3-D CAD systems and array processing systems.

''Until recently, graphics processors like the 34010 were only used for specialty applications, particularly PC CAD and desktop publishing. But, the falling cost of hardware and availability of graphical user interfaces (GUIs) are bringing the TMS340 graphics processor into mainstream usage,'' said Dennis Sullivan, director of marketing, communications.

Grant Wells, the Graphics Vision 1280 product manager, added: ''Texas Instruments has developed a standard software interface for TMS340 processors which will help make the TMS340 architecture the standard. Called TIGA (Texas Instruments Graphics Architecture), the interface enables TIGA-compatible 34010-based PC boards like Graphics Vision 1280 to run applications using a single TIGA driver.''

Bob Butchko, president of Renaissance, said, ''The greatest benefit of TIGA is that the interface preserves the user's software investment -- it will work with future hardware just as the DOS operating system has served several generations of host CPUs.''

''We're trying to provide the user with something they can use now and tomorrow,'' explained Sullivan. ''There is so much new technology being thrown at the user that they never get a chance to get the most out of what they already have. That's why we see Graphics Vision 1280 as making a lot of sense.''

Renaissance GRX Inc. is a microcomputer graphics systems company which designs, develops and markets both hardware and software aimed at improving the speed and quality of graphics on IBM PC-compatible personal computers. The company markets its products through specialized CAD dealers and direct to the OEM and system integrator markets.

CONCORD, CA (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - ACS Network Systems announced it has sold its apparel systems division.

ACS Network Systems will continue to focus on the Electronic Data Interchange (EDI) marketplace, as it has since it was formed in 1986. Its apparel division, Apparel Computer Systems Inc., has been purchased by Kurt Salmon Associates of Atlanta, Ga., and Microdynamics Inc. of Dallas, Texas, and will continue as ACS Software Products Group.

This formal splitting of the two divisions will allow ACS Network Systems to continue as the largest vendor of EDI communications and translation software for IBM System/3X and AS/400 computers. (EDI is the direct electronic transmission of standard business documents over a third party public or private network between participating companies). The company has over 700 customers around the world.

According to Randall King, president of ACS Network Systems: ''Because of the growth of the EDI marketplace, and our success within that market, we decided to put our corporate focus entirely on EDI. For that reason we've sold our apparel division and will continue our emphasis on providing the best software products to the EDI marketplace.''

Officers of ACS Network Systems are: Lew Jenkins, chairman; Randall King, president; Michael D. Nelson, vice president of sales and marketing; Jeni Kandel, vice president of technical services; Geoff Miller, vice president of finance and operations.

All of these officers previously held their positions except for Michael Nelson, who was director of sales and marketing.

The company continues to be located at 1485 Enea Court, Suite 1200, Concord, Calif. 94520, Telephone 1 800/426-3836.

Apparel Computer Systems, now ACS Software Products Group, will continue selling software to the apparel industry. Kurt Salmon Associates is the largest international consulting organization that specializes in the apparel industry.

BAKERSFIELD, CA (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Nahama & Weagant Energy Co. (NASDAQ:NAWE) announced its net proved oil and gas reserves increased by 189 percent, from approximately 3.4 billion equivalent cubic feet of gas (BECFG) at March 15, 1989, to approximately 9.9 BECFG at March 15, 1990.

It said the increase resulted primarily from gas discoveries at South Putah Sink and Tracy, both located near Sacramento, and an oil discovery at North Rosedale Ranch in Kern County, during its fourth fiscal quarter ending Jan. 31, 1990.

The company said it expects to begin selling by next week approximately 4.5 million cubic feet of gas per day from the initial well in its South Putah Sink gas field discovery at approximately $2.20 per thousand cubic feet. Combined gas sales of 3 million to 4 million cubic feet per day from the two wells in its discovery near Tracy are expected to commence by May 1990.

The company also said its North Rosedale Ranch oilfield is currently producing over 550 barrels per day from four wells, and an additional well is expected to be drilled this month. The company owns approximately 38 percent, 51 percent and 51 percent of the three discoveries, respectively.

SUNNYVALE, CA (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - SuperMac Technology introduced a new video board Monday that advances its growing Macintosh graphics product line.

The Monochrome Display Card, a 1-bit graphics card for 19'' and 21'' WYSIWYG displays, will be priced at $499. The new card is part of a larger product launch, including two new displays.

SuperMac has earned its reputation as the high value graphics company. Their products have always stressed compatibility, flexibility, high-performance and protection of the buyer's investment. The firm's new graphics card, along with the two new displays, extends this reputation by providing unrivaled mix-and-max flexibility.

The Monochrome Display Card works with displays from SuperMac, Apple and other vendors, and the new displays work with cards from Apple as well as SuperMac, so customers with existing graphics equipment can upgrade without abandoning previous investments. And because graphics technology changes rapidly, SuperMac offers the industry's best upgrade and trade-in policy.

''SuperMac has always focused on meeting the real needs of our customers by introducing the right products at the right time,'' said Michael McConnell, SuperMac's president. ''This new video card fits perfectly into our existing product line because it offers the best value, or price for performance, in black and white displays today.''

SuperMac's new Monochrome Card is the answer for desktop publishers who want high-end graphics at a low price. It delivers up to 1,152 x 870 pixel resolution at a flicker-free refresh rate of 75Hz.

In addition to SuperMac's Two Page Platinum and 19'' Platinum displays, the card supports other standard displays up to two pages in size which means that big-screen, WYSIWYG monochrome graphics systems are now available for less than $2,000.

Together with several other graphics display products SuperMac introduced simultaneously, the Monochrome Display Card represents the market responsiveness and high value that SuperMac has become known for. It broadens SuperMac's reputation for performance, compatibility and long-term value in products that solve real problems for a wide spectrum of users.

SuperMac Technology develops, manufactures and markets color and grayscale/monochrome graphics systems, which today include displays, graphics cards, software and applications support products. These graphics systems extend the capability of personal computers into new vertical markets and their application in the traditional office automation and business market.

Hallman, president of Boeing Computer Services, will join Microsoft on April 2 to ensure a smooth transition. Hallman will also become a member of the board of directors.

As president of Boeing Computer Services since November 1987, Hallman was responsible for all Boeing computing and communications systems. He managed a Boeing staff of 13,000 people and a computing equipment inventory valued at $1.3 billion including 43,000 personal computers. He also ran Boeing's external computer services profit center, which currently has sales of $360 million.

Hallman, 44, is a Seattle resident, and holds both bachelor's and master's degrees in business from the University of Michigan. He has more than 23 years of computer experience. He brings extensive experience in corporate software and service support to his position at Microsoft.

Before joining Boeing, Hallman spent 20 years at IBM, where he held a variety of executive positions. His last position with IBM was vice president of field operations, responsible for all sales and marketing support for the company's southwest marketing division. In this capacity he also managed IBM's national federal marketing organization, which was responsible for direct marketing to the federal government.

Prior to that, he was vice president of sales operations, responsible for sales, systems engineering and technical marketing support in the western half of the country for IBM's national marketing division.

Hallman also served as vice president of product marketing, where he was responsible for developing product requirements and marketing strategies, managing new product introductions, and implementing marketing and technical support plans for all products.

Shirley will continue to play a role in the management of the company, both as a member of the board of directors and as a consultant for strategic projects.

MOUNTAIN VIEW, CA (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - KnowledgeSet Corp., a leading developer of software systems for information management, Monday introduced SuperKRS, an indexing and retrieval product for Silicon Beach Software's SuperCard projects.

According to the company, the powerful search capabilities of SuperKRS increase the scope of uses for SuperCard by providing full-text retrieval to SuperCard projects.

Priced at $195 and available in May, SuperKRS works with SuperCard projects and stand-alone applications built with SuperCard. The SuperKRS package consists of two products: SuperIndexer, a full-word indexing program, and SuperKRS, a text search and retrieval engine that searches the entire project instantly, significantly reducing the time needed to find data. The products are provided as external commands (XCMDs) and external functions (XFNCs) and work equally well for information stored on either magnetic media or CD-ROM.

SuperIndexer builds an index of every word in a project. ''Locators'' identify the exact location of each word and allow SuperKRS to rapidly search through project text to find matches to the user's search request. In addition, a title index is created that allows SuperKRS to return a ''hit'' list so all the matches that meet the search request are immediately accessible to the user.

SuperKRS is used on an indexed project and provides several features for building a search and viewing data. The program's search methods include And, Or, But Not, Exact Order, Wildcard, Proximity and Field Specific searching.

SuperKRS returns a title or ''hit'' list that indicates the total number of cards that meet the search request and the total number of hits within those cards. In addition, the number of hits per card is displayed so the user can gauge the relevancy of each hit.

Once in a card, the user can easily view the next/previous match within the card or next/previous card from the ''hit'' list. For fast implementation, SuperKRS includes search cards that can be used as is, modified, or replaced as desired.

Based in Mountain View, KnowledgeSet Corp. designs, develops and markets productivity tools for information management. Applications for KnowledgeSet products include technical and reference manuals, engineering plans, catalogs, encyclopedias, legal and medical documents and other research materials that can be readily adapted to optical disc technology. The company's licensees include American Airlines, Apple Computer, British Airways, Ernst & Young, IBM, Information Handling Services, Siemens and Sony.

SAN FRANCISCO (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - BRE Properties Inc. (NYSE:BRE) Monday announced that it may repurchase in the open market up to $5 million of its outstanding 9-1/2 percent convertible subordinated debentures due 2008, an increase from the $2.5 million previously announced.

BRE noted that, because the debentures recently have traded at prices below par, repurchase represents a favorable use of short-term funds and offers the company an opportunity to fulfill at a discount a $2.5 million annual sinking fund provision which begins in 1994.

The company said that $2,189,000 of debentures, out of the original $50 million issue, had been repurchased at prices below par since the program was announced in December 1989.

BRE Properties is a real estate investment trust, founded in 1970, which invests in apartments, shopping centers, hotels, light industrial and office buildings in the Western United States.

SUNNYVALE, CA (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - SuperMac Technology Monday introduced 21'' color and monochrome/grayscale displays that offer two-page WYSIWYG graphics, a major breakthrough for desktop publishers.

The Color Two Page display and the Platinum Two Page display incorporate several advanced features that provide unparalleled ergonomic benefits and increase users' productivity. The new displays will ship by the end of March.

The mix and match capability of SuperMac cards and displays surpasses every other graphic systems maker in the Macintosh market. SuperMac's commitment to flexible product mixing extends beyond its own product line to include all other boards and monitors that conform to Apple-standard timing.

Customers with existing graphics equipment can upgrade without abandoning previous investments. And because graphics technology changes rapidly, SuperMac offers the industry's most liberal upgrade and trade-in policy so customers can have the best in color graphics, even if they're changing from another brand.

While other display vendors require proprietary timing, SuperMac is fully committed to Apple standards, thus their users are free to use multi-vendor solutions.

SuperMac's new 21'' displays incorporate several advanced features which provide unparalleled ergonomic benefits that increase users' productivity. SuperMac's high-efficiency phosphor delivers whiter, more natural whites and better simulates the printed page.

One feature now found on all SuperMac displays, an anti-glare panel, dramatically reduces glare without sacrificing focus or resolution, thus widening the discernible spectrum of gray values and easing eyestrain. In addition, all the new monitors feature a 75Hz fresh rate for flicker-free viewing. Attention to visual comfort is one example of SuperMac's focus on users' needs.

The new SuperMac Color Two Page Display is the highest quality two-page color display available for the Macintosh II family. Its 21'' diagonal screen offers a two-page display at 1,152 x 870 pixels and 77 dpi, so desktop publishers and other users can view two color layout pages at the same size as they appear when printed.

SuperMac Technology develops, manufactures and markets color and grayscale/monochrome graphics systems, which today include displays, graphics cards, software and applications support products. These graphic systems extend the capability of personal computers into new vertical markets and their application in the traditional office automation and business market.

DARIEN, CT (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - EXECUTONE Information Systems Inc. (NASDAQ:XTON) Monday announced earnings for the year and quarter ended Dec. 31, 1989.

Results for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989 were revenues of $287 million, operating income of $13.8 million and income before taxes from continuing operations of $1.1 million.

Even though the company will only pay alternative minimum taxes due to the availability of tax loss carryforwards, the company records an income tax provision since these income tax benefits relate to periods prior to the formation of the company.

Additionally, the tax rate for financial reporting purposes is greater than the statutory tax rate due to the amortization of intangible assets which is not deductible for income tax purposes. Therefore, for financial reporting purposes, the company is required to provide a tax provision of $1.7 million which results in a reported loss of $617,000 from continuing operations or 2 cents per share.

The company is in the process of selling its payphone division and has provided for an expected loss on that transaction as of Dec. 31, 1989. In 1989, the payphone division is accounted for as a discontinued operation with a net loss of $3.6 million. With the loss on the discontinued operation, the net loss for the year is $4.2 million or 15 cents per share.

The company reported revenues of $150 million, operating income of $4.6 million, a loss of $1.1 million from continuing operations and a net loss of $1.1 million or 4 cents per share for the six-month period ended Dec.

31, 1989, which was the first six months of the company's operations since its formation.

The company previously announced on Dec. 15, 1989 that it expected a loss for the fourth quarter of 1989. The company experienced production delays by one of its suppliers, reduced orders from independent distributors, some of which resulted from the production delays, and delayed installations from the NYNEX labor strike.

The loss is due primarily to a reduction in gross profit which was caused by higher costs to move and install available products and a shift in revenue to lower margin products. Management believes that the production delays caused by its supplier will be resolved by the second quarter of 1990, although partial relief has already been realized.

Management does not expect these factors to negatively impact earnings over the long term. The company reported a loss from continuing operations of $2.1 million or 7 cents per share on revenues of $68.1 million for the quarter ended Dec. 31, 1989.

Due to the discontinuance of its payphone division in the quarter ended Dec. 31, 1989, the net loss for the quarter was $5.3 million or 19 cents per share. The company reported net income of $158,000 or 1 cent per share on revenues of $75.4 million for the fourth quarter of 1988. The previously reported 1988 amounts have been restated to reflect the discontinuance of its payphone division in the fourth quarter of 1989.

Alan Kessman, president and chief executive officer, stated, ''The company is disappointed with its fourth quarter performance. As a result of the production delays, the company has accelerated its efforts to secure additional sources of supply.''

Kessman further stated, ''The consolidation of our company which began in 1988 is now complete. Due to the consolidation and the anti-dumping issue 1989 was a difficult year.

''In addition to increases in the company's product costs as a result of anti-dumping duties assessed in 1989, we expended substantial resources on this issue in the form of management time and professional fees. This resulted from a petition filed in December 1988 by AT&T against foreign manufacturers.

''Our marketplace remains extremely competitive, and at this point we have seen no evidence that prices will increase due to anti-dumping duties. Our plan is to put more emphasis on differentiating EXECUTONE's products and services from those of our competition and evolving into more than just a supplier of telephone products.''

EXECUTONE Information Systems Inc. designs, manufactures, sells, installs and services voice and data communications equipment for businesses with under 300 desktops and is the leading supplier of specialized hospital communications equipment.

Products are sold under the EXECUTONE, ISOETEC, and INFOSTAR brand names through a nationwide network of direct and independent distributors.

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Shephard Insurance Group Ltd. (VcSE:SHR) announced that the company Monday signed the definitive agreements for the purchase of the Herriot group of companies (''Herriot'').

Herriot is a general insurance broker established in 1933 and based in Surrey, England. This acquisition is now only subject to obtaining Vancouver Stock Exchange approval. Herriot's business is comprised of 63 percent general property and casualty and 37 percent life and pensions.

Gross commission income is currently approximately $1.3 million Cdn with pre-tax profits of approximately $180,000 Cdn. Tangible net worth of Herriot is approximately $260,000 Cdn.

Shephard has entered into new employment agreements with John Devanney, the managing director of Herriot, and all other key management have entered into new employment contracts and non-compete agreements.

This well-established company with proven management and long profit history is being acquired for an initial cash consideration of approximately $900,000 Cdn and a further cash payment in April 1992 depending on a formula of the average after-tax earnings of Herriot for the three-year period ending Nov. 30, 1991.

The total consideration is expected to represent approximately one times gross commission.

This acquisition will be funded from the company's existing credit line and working capital facilities. This acquisition will increase gross commission from the company's U.K. operations from $2.5 million Cdn approximately to $4.1 million Cdn approximately.

MILPITAS, CA (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Will Kauffman, an executive with 20 years of operations, process manufacturing and quality control experience in the semiconductor industry, including 15 years at Intel Corp., has been named senior vice president and chief operations officer at Komag, Inc. (NASDAQ:KMAG), the industry's leading supplier of ceramic-coated, thin-film media for data storage applications.

As chief operations officer, a new position, Kauffman, 54, will be in charge of Komag's manufacturing operations, replacing Phil Gahr, who is leaving the area, but who will continue to work with Komag on a consulting basis.

Komag's Milpitas and San Jose, Calif., manufacturing operations will report directly to Kauffman, as will all company automation engineering and MIS functions. Komag's Santa Rosa, Calif.,-based KMT subsidiary, a joint venture formed in May 1989 to manufacture disk substrates, will also report to Kauffman.

''As Komag has continued to grow over the past few years, the need to integrate all operations activities under one experienced manager has become very apparent to us,'' Johnson said. ''We are now the largest independent supplier of thin-film disks in the data storage industry and we're continuing to grow.

''At the same time we are integrating vertically to ensure that our high production levels can be maintained without interruption. Will Kauffman brings to our company the experience and abilities needed to manage the various elements that make up Komag, and to integrate them as the company continues to expand.''

Prior to joining Komag, Kauffman was executive vice president and chief operations officer at Vitelic Semiconductor for two years. During his time at Vitelic, the company grew from a loss position to $38 million in revenues and 25 percent after- tax profit.

During his 15 years at Intel, Kauffman served in a number of positions, leaving the company as vice president of component quality and reliability. In this position he was responsible for bringing up quality levels in all Intel component products including microprocessors.

He also served as vice president in charge of coordinating various projects throughout the components group, as vice president and director of component production for nine years, and for two years, manager of Intel's wafer fabrication plant. He joined the company in 1971 as an engineering manager in the wafer fab plant.

SAN JOSE, CA (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Storage Dimensions Monday announced that its MacinStor line of high-performance, high-capacity storage subsystems is fully compatible with Apple's new Macintosh IIfx product family.

Apple announced the Mac IIfx yesterday at a press conference and Storage Dimensions was the only vendor to have high-capacity hard disk, as well as erasable optical storage subsystems on display and in use. MacinStor products were used to help store the wide variety of software available for the Mac IIfx.

''Apple's new Macintosh IIfx is now their premier product and we are the first company to offer a complete line of internal and external high-capacity, high-performance subsystems to IIfx users,'' said Greg Brashier, Storage Dimensions' manager of product marketing for Macintosh products.

''Since the Mac IIfx is designed for data-intensive applications, Storage Dimensions' high-end storage products will help users to really get the most from the new Mac IIfx,'' Brashier said.

The MacinStor line of mass storage subsystems offers capacities ranging from 40 MB to 1 GB for the Mac Plus, SE and II families. External optical disk subsystems (including write-once and erasable optical) and hard disk subsystems in both internal and external configurations are available.

Founded in 1985, Storage Dimensions is a leading supplier of hard disk and optical subsystems over 100 MB for personal/desktop computers and microcomputer-based networks. Storage Dimensions is a wholly owned subsidiary of Maxtor Corp. (NASDAQ:MXTR). Maxtor, founded in 1982, is a leading supplier of high-capacity data storage products.

SAN FRANCISCO (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - URS Corp. (NYSE:URS), formerly Thortec International Inc., Monday reported revenues of $21.3 million and a net loss of $3.7 million, or 42 cents per share, for its first fiscal quarter ending Jan. 31.

In the like 1989 period, URS Corp. had revenues of $26.1 million and a net loss of $2.5 million, or 36 cents per share. The compnay completed a financial restructuring in February of this year which will affect results in the second and subsequent quarters.

The increased loss for the fist quarter of fiscal year 1990 as compared with the like period in the prior year is primarily attributable to losses experienced by the company's Mitchell Management Systems (MMS) subsidiary.

The attributed the drop in revenues principally to the reduction in the third quarter of 1989 of its 65 percent equity interest in URS International, an independent international consulting engineering business which contributed revenues of $2.6 million in the 1989 first quarter.

The remainder of the revenue decrease was due about equally to a decline in consulting assignments at the company's MMS subsidiary and a reduction of subcontractor pass-through costs on current contracts at URS Consultants, its principal operating subsidiary.

As a result of the financial restructuring, which was completed on Feb. 21 the company's total outstanding indebtedness was reduced from approximately $73 million to approximately $37 million. New working capital was generated through the sale of common stock, new loans to the company, and a revised bank line of credit.

At the same time the company announced a 1-for-10 reverse stock split and changed the name of the publicly held company from Thortec International Inc. back to URS Corp., the name under which the company operated for more than 20 years.

URS Corp. operates through two subsidiaries -- URS Consultants and Mitchell Management Systems (MMS). URS Consultants is a multi-disciplinary engineering, architecture, planning and consulting firm which provides a diverse range of professional services to solve complex hazardous material, environmental, seismic, transportation and water treatment problems.

MMS develops and implements computerized project management control systems for governmental agencies, major industrial corporations and the architecture, engineering and consulting fields. MMS markets its project management software primarily through IBM; it carries the IBM logo and is installed in their mainframe computers.

MENLO PARK, CA (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Informix Software Inc. (NASDAQ:IFMX) Monday extended its integration of desktop computers and Informix SQL databases by announcing its DataLink technology for SmartWareII, Informix's integrated suite of office automation software.

With SmartWareII-DataLink, non-SQL literate users on character-based platforms can access vital corporate data through simple menu selections, and developers can create custom interfaces for accessing and manipulating data stored in Informix databases.

DataLink is an essential component of Informix's strategy to deliver solutions for enterprise-wide computing from the database to the desktop. DataLink for SmartWareII complements the introduction earlier this year of DataLink for Wingz, Informix's leading graphic spreadsheet.

Wingz-DataLink gives users the ability to access Informix databases from the variety of graphical platforms Wingz supports. With the introduction of SmartWareII-DataLink, Informix now extends its solution for easy data access to a wide range of character-based desktop platforms.

With SmartWareII-DataLink, users can create a database query using a simple ''less than, greater than or equal to'' methodology. Users call up the DataLink interface box by selecting the DataLink menu option in SmartWareII.

After they have selected their data requirements, DataLink constructs the SQL statement and sends it to the database engine on a local or remote database server. The results of the query are then returned and displayed in the SmartWareII spreadsheet or in a custom Executive Information System application.

Data imported into the spreadsheet can be charted and graphed using SmartWareII's graphic capabilities, or shared with any other SmartWareII module.

SmartWareII is one of the leading DOS-based integrated office automation software packages in the United States, Europe and Canada. DataLink is currently scheduled to be available for SmartWareII on DOS in the third quarter of 1990.

Informix Software Inc. is a leading supplier of information management software providing solutions from the database through the desktop.

MOUNTAIN VIEW, CA (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Adobe Systems Inc. (NASDAQ:ADBE) announced the acquisition of Emerald City Software, a privately held company engaged in the development and publishing of PostScript language based typographic products and development tools.

Terms of the acquisition were not disclosed.

The addition of Emerald City's products will enhance Adobe's strong product line with new typographic applications which include: TypeAlign, the award-winning type styling program, Smart Art, a collection of four volumes of PostScript typographic and graphic effects and several PostScript development products which include Displaytalk, NeXT, Lasertalk Mac and Lasertalk PC.

Emerald City's Mountain View operation will be integrated into Adobe's Application Products division, and Emerald City's 15 employees will assume positions within Adobe. Randy Adams, president and founder of Emerald City, will become director of engineering for the Application Products division, and Russ McCann, vice president of marketing and sales, will become director of accessory products for the Application Products division.

''Emerald City's products are a perfect complement to our line of application products,'' said Dave Pratt, vice president and general manager of Adobe's Application Products division. ''We're pleased the Emerald City employees will be joining us and contributing to our success in the Macintosh, IBM and NeXT computing environments.''

Emerald City was founded in 1987 and released its first product, Lasertalk in 1988. In 1989, Emerald City Software introduced six new application products for the Macintosh, IBM personal computer and NeXT platforms. The company received venture fundings in 1989 from the venture capital firm of Thompson Clive.

Adobe Systems Inc., founded in 1982 by Dr. John Warnock, and Dr. Charles Geschke, is headquartered in Mountain View. Adobe is the developer of PostScript, the industry standard page-description language for the electronic printing and publishing fields, and Display PostScript, a device-independent graphics imaging model that drives screen display.

In addition, the company develops and markets a complete line of application software programs, including the award-winning Adobe Illustrator 88 and Adobe Type Manager, the Adobe Type Library and Adobe Photoshop. Revenues for fiscal 1989 were over $121 million.

SAN JOSE, CA (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - The first in a number of expansion announcements scheduled in 1990, BT Tymnet Inc., provider of the international value-added network TYMNET, announced plans Monday to upgrade 200 access locations with 2400 bps (bits per second) service.

This brings the total number of 2400 bps access locations in the United States to 450. The upgrade, scheduled to be completed by July 1, 1990, is in direct response to customer demand for more 2400 bps access to the TYMNET Network.

This announcement represents the single largest upgrade and expansion of any access service in the history of BT Tymnet and comes on the heels of the recent acquisition of Tymnet by British Telecom.

The expansion will provide 2400 bps users more convenient access to the TYMNET Network via a local telephone call. The result is a significant reduction in the time it takes to send data and execute file transfers thereby reducing customer connect time charges.

''This expansion of our 2400 bps service is due entirely to our commitment to customer service,'' said Mark de la Vega, product manager of access services for BT Tymnet. ''Our goal is to provide users with the widest geographic coverage and fastest possible speeds by which users can access the TYMNET Network, based on their needs. This expansion is just one example of our customer commitment.''

The new 2400 bps access cities will support Microcom Networking Protocol

(MNP) - a local loop error-correcting protocol (levels 2-4) - and BT Tymnet's Outdial Service, which provides users a cost-effective means to connect to unattended remote devices from inside the TYMNET Network while taking advantage of off-peak traffic rates.

BT Tymnet is the market leader in providing network access to customers with 533 ''unique'' access locations. (The most accurate comparison of local access is an actual count of the individual dial-up locations. These are described as ''unique access locations'' because the analysis does not count any local phone number twice.

If the same number is listed for more than one city, that number is counted only once. The TYMNET Network is currently accessible, via a local phone call, from over 850 cities in the United States from over 23,050 local exchanges.

BT Tymnet Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of British Telecom plc, is an international value-added network supplier and one of the world's largest providers of public, private and hybrid network solutions. The company owns and operates the TYMNET Network, which offers protocol conversion, error-protection, enhanced security features, electronic data interchange (EDI), card services and electronic messaging.

The TYMNET Network is accessible from most countries throughout the world.

SAN JOSE, CA (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Concurrent with the introduction of the Macintosh FX series by Apple Computer Inc. here Monday, ExperTelligence Inc. announced that the Action! interactive, symbolic, object-oriented application development system is available immediately to purchasers of the new machine.

Considered to be the most powerful CASE applications development environment available for production model desktop computers, the Action! environment incorporates graphical interface development technology originally developed for the Texas Instruments microExplorer Lisp environment with two other development tools: ExperTellignece's own Macintosh Toolbox Interface (TBI), and Procyon Research Limited's Procyon Common Lisp with CLOS (the Common Lisp Object System).

''The Action! environment on the Macintosh FX represents the most cost-effective advanced applications programming development system available today,'' said Denison Bollay, president and chief executive officer. ''Integration of these individual tools produces a set of programming tools that is not even duplicated on extremely expensive, traditional Lisp machines and workstations. It is the only development system available for any microcomputer that is able to make full use of the international CLOS standard.''

Added Executive Vice President Dr. John E. Forge: ''The synergy resulting from the integration of these tools is difficult even to imagine. Applications that typically have taken several man-years to create are now being developed routinely in a few months, and some in just a few weeks. Moreover, the Action! system is making it possible to find easy-to-use, bug-free solutions to programming problems that have been considered insoluble using conventional programming methods.''

The Action! development system requires a minimum of 5 megabytes of memory, with 8 megabytes recommended. Introductory price for the full development system is $3,000, for which users receive a six binder set of documentation; 25 diskettes containing all of the programs and over 100 illustrative examples; a free subscription to the user newsletter, 'Action! Tech Notes'; free hotline telephone support; and free access to Experline, a proprietary electronic technical support network. Additonal training and consulting are available on request.

Based in Goleta (north of Los Angeles), ExperTelligence has thousands of users worldwide. ExperTelligence is a public company, with its stock traded over the counter.

GREENWICH, CT (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Stolt Tankers and Terminals (Holdings) S.A., (NASDAQ: STLTF) and Sumitomo Corp. on behalf of the Fukuoka Shipbuilding Co. Ltd. of Fukuoka, Japan, have announced the contract for the construction of two 5,000 deadweight ton parcel tankers.

The ships will be delivered March and June 1992, for operation by the Stolt-Nielsen Inter Europe Service (S.N.I.E.S.), which serves Europe, including North Sea, United Kingdom and Mediterranean ports.

These new parcel tankers are among the most technically advanced ships to be built especially for the European market and to service the particular needs of Stolt-Nielsen's customers there.

They will have 16 stainless steel cargo tanks, served by individual deepwell pumps. The stainless steel will be of the highest grade and will be suitable for the full range of bulk liquid cargoes which the company's Inter European customers anticipate carrying. The ships will have double bottom and double skin throughout the cargo section for maximum safety and environmental protection.

This newbuilding order is the second recent move by Stolt-Nielsen to enhance its presence in the European regional distribution trade. In December, the company announced the time-charter of a series of 3,300 deadweight ton newbuildings. These new orders and new charters will enable Stolt-Nielsen to continue to provide the highest quality ships for this important trade, and at the same time phase out older tonnage.

The Stolt-Nielsen Inter Europe Service is commercially managed by Stolt-Nielsen UK Ltd. of Romford, U.K. The service was established last year with the purchase of the Interchem fleet of ten coastal parcel tankers, and was merged with small tankers which Stolt-Nielsen already operated in Northwest Europe.

Fukuoka Shipbuilding Co. Ltd. has over many years developed a high degree of expertise in building chemical tankers, and a variety of specialized ships of this size.

Stolt Tankers and Terminals (Holdings) S.A. is an international transportation company specializing in the distribution of bulk liquids both by land and sea. The company operates worldwide with 21 offices in 12 countries. Stolt-Nielsen provides total distribution services with its combination of more than 55 transoceanic and 30 coastal parcel tankers, totalling about 1.7 million deadweight tons; 2,500 intermodal tank containers in door-to-door service; five regional storage and distribution tank terminals in the United States, Northwest Europe and Brazil; as well as barges, railcars and tank trucks.

SAN JOSE, CA (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Macintosh personal computing reached higher levels of power, breadth and usability Monday as Apple Computer Inc. unveiled a collection of new, high-performance Macintosh products.

The announcements include the following: MacintoshIIfx, the fastest and most responsive Macintosh yet developed; A/UX 2.0, a ground-breaking version of Apple's implementation of the UNIX operating system; and a new family of powerful display cards that set new standards of image quality and performance.

''Today's announcements add power and accessibility to the Macintosh product family,'' said John Sculley, chairman and chief executive officer of Apple.

''Current Macintosh applications will become even more responsive, more brilliant, and more enabling. But, to us,'' Sculley added, ''the real power of these new products resides in how they will extend the boundaries of what people can do with Macintosh.

''We expect today's announcements to inspire new kinds of applications, attract new kinds of customers, and ultimately enable new ways of using personal computers in the coming decade.''

The Macintosh IIfx is the fastest Macintosh yet developed. It runs up to twice as fast as the 25MHz Macintosh IIci. This increase in performance derives from the careful integration of powerful new technologies, including the following:

- A faster processor/memory subsystem: The Macintosh IIfx incorporates a 40 MHz 68030 processor/68882 coprocessor combination, a built-in, 32K Static RAM Cache and a new design called ''latched writes''

- An intelligent input/output subsystem: The new system employs dedicated input/output processors and a Small Computer System Interface/Direct Memory Access Controller

- Richer expansion capabilities: The Macintosh IIfx includes an expansion slot tied directly to the processor in addition to its six industry-standard NuBus slots.

SAN JOSE, CA (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Monday, Apple Computer Inc. raised the standard of what people can do with graphics on a personal computer by announcing a new family of powerful display cards for the Macintosh.

The Macintosh Display Card 4.8 is a basic video card that supports a wide range of graphics capabilities on all modular Macintosh computers. The Macintosh Display Card 8.24 is an extended version of the 4.8 card and offers even greater graphics capabilities, including photo-quality color.

The Macintosh Display Card 8.24 GC is a high-performance, graphics coprocessor and video card that accelerates (up to 30 times faster) the responsiveness of all Macintosh applications -- especially graphics-intensive ones.

Taken together, these three new display cards give Macintosh users a broader and higher range of graphics capabilities: easier access to high-resolution color, improved image quality and performance, and greater graphics extensibility.

''With the introduction of this family of display cards, we've opened up exciting new possibilities for graphics on the Macintosh,'' said Randy Battat, vice president of Apple Worldwide Product Marketing.

The Macintosh Display Card 4.8, Macintosh Display Card 8.24 and Macintosh

Display Card 8.24 GC all adhere to a common set of design features. They are all standard NuBus cards that work transparently with all modular Macintosh computers (II, IIx, IIcx, IIci and IIfx).

They support all Apple monitors. Each card is self-configuring and automatically works with any Apple monitor attached to the system. They are all compatible with interlaced devices such as televisions and video recorders. All three cards support thousands of Macintosh applications.

This consistency across the card family makes it simpler for people to choose the card that best fits their needs, regardless of system or monitor configuration. It also makes it easier for people to upgrade their graphics capabilities as their needs change. Macintosh Display Card 4.8

of $13.3 million, or $1.48 per share, after charges of $.23 per share for litigation and store closing expenses.

Earnings per share without these one-time charges would have been $1.71 for the year, compared to $1.50 per share for the prior year. For the fourth quarter, net income increased to $10.1 million and earnings per share rose from last year's $.91 to a record $1.12 per share.

The fiscal year and fourth fiscal quarter ended February 3, 1990 were 53 and 14 week periods, respectively, as compared to 52 and 13 week periods in the prior year. For the comparable 52 and 13 week periods, sales increased 11 and 10 percent, respectively, over the prior year periods and comparable store sales increased 3 percent and 7 percent.

Gross profit as a percentage of sales showed an overall increase for the year and was slightly lower in the fourth quarter. SG&A expenses as a percentage of sales fell in the quarter as a result of greater productivity at store level, but were slightly higher on a year-to-date basis.

Interest expense rose in both the quarter and year-to-date periods due to long term financing and capital lease obligations added as a result of an expansion to the distribution center facility.

Company officials also noted that its three year revolving credit facilities were increased from $20 million to $40 million and that the size of the distribution center facility in Albany, New York was doubled to improve efficiency and to support the Company's growth plans. The Company has pursued an expansion strategy for several years that has resulted in the opening or acquisition of 103 stores in 1987, 137 stores in 1988 and 67 stores 1989.

Trans World Music is one of the largest specialty retailers of prerecorded music and video products, operating 442 stores under several distinct store formats throughout the eastern half of the United States. The Company operates retail stores under several names, including Record Town, Tape World, Coconuts, Great American Music, Good Vibrations, and Saturday Matinee, and may be found in large regional malls, free standing/strip center locations and in certain department stores.

CUPERTINO, CA (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Concluding its evaluation of many excellent and highly competitive proposals from community colleges around the nation, Apple Computer Inc. announced its selection of ten colleges as charter members of the Apple National Community College Alliance.

The Alliance will develop and encourage the use of Macintosh computer technology in two-year colleges and is a joint project of Apple and the League for Innovation in the Community College. The ten charter Alliance members are among the most accomplished community colleges using Macintosh technology for instructional and administrative applications in the United States.

They are geographically distributed to serve as convenient regional resource centers for community colleges throughout the country.

Members of the Apple National Community College Alliance are: Atlantic Community College, Mays Landing, N.J.; Central Piedmont Community College, Charlotte, N.C.; Chemeketa Community College, Salem, Ore.; Jackson Community College, Jackson, Mich.; Johnson County Community College, Overland Park, Kan.; Long Beach City College, Long Beach, Calif.; Monroe Community College, Rochester, N.Y.; Paradise Valley Community College (one of the Maricopa Community Colleges), Phoenix, Ariz.; St. Petersburg Junior College, St. Petersburg, Fla.; and San Joaquin Delta College, Stockton, Calif.

When first announced in October, the Alliance was planned to include four to six community colleges in the first year. Apple extended the number in response to the numerous excellent proposals received from community colleges around the nation. University of California, Berkeley.

The Apple National Community College Alliance represents a nearly $2 million investment by Apple. The company is providing support to each Alliance college based on the plans outlined in its proposal. In general, however, support from Apple will consist of a major equipment grant as well as technical and support services.

In return, each college in the Alliance will serve as a model demonstration, training and support center for faculty, staff and students conducting workshops and seminars in its region and participating in the League's annual conference on computing.

CUPERTINO, CA (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Apple Computer Inc. Monday announced several new training programs for customers and authorized Apple Computer resellers.

The new customer-focused programs expand the locations and content of customer training. The new program for resellers provides self-paced instructional materials for resellers to train their staff.

Apple customers now have the option of obtaining training from many more authorized training providers. As a result of a new authorization program, the number of Apple authorized training providers in the United States has increased from 27 to 135 since the beginning of the year.

Customers are ensured of the highest standards for training staffs, facilities and computer equipment because all training providers meet rigorous Apple qualifications. Authorized training providers include Apple authorized resellers and third-party training companies.

New Apple-developed customer courses, available only through authorized Apple training providers, include Introduction to the Macintosh personal computer, Microsoft Word 4.0, Microsoft Excel, Microsoft PowerPoint, Claris FileMaker II, Aldus PageMaker 3.0, Silicon Beach Software SuperPaint, Acius 4th Dimension, and Adobe Illustrator '88.

The courseware is designed to help customers learn the Macintosh system and Macintosh applications from a basic to an intermediate level, and then use these skills to develop solutions for their own needs.

Resellers can now purchase a set of self-paced materials for training their sales and support staff. Known as the Macintosh Learning Station Curriculum, the training employs computer-based and interactive video courses such as Macintosh Fundamentals and Introduction to Desktop Publishing and Presentations.

The package includes video disks, printed student materials, a Compact Disc and installation information. Third-party and Apple equipment required to use these training materials is a system in the Macintosh II family, AppleCD SC, videodisc player, monitor, audio mixer, headphones and cables.

Authorized Apple training providers are located throughout the United States. Classes are held at their locations, or conducted at a customer's site.

CUPERTINO, CA (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Apple Computer Inc. announced Monday price decreases of up to 50 percent on its Macintosh memory expansion kits.

Prices were reduced on memory kits for almost all Macintosh systems as well as LaserWriter NTX printers.

''This widespread price reduction on memory benefits not only our installed base of customers but new users as well,'' said David Hancock, senior vice president marketing, Apple USA.

''Additional memory allows users to better utilize powerful products like MultiFinder and HyperCard today. And, they'll be in a position to take full advantage of our System Software 7.0 which will ship later this year.''

Apple has seen some improvement in the cost of key components of its Macintosh systems.

''We are experiencing some lower memory component costs and are now in a position to pass those savings on to our customers in the form of less expensive memory kits and savings on Macintosh computers with lots of standard memory,'' said Hancock.

The company announced corresponding price decreases on selected highly configured versions of the Macintosh IIx, IIcx and IIci. These systems feature large amounts of standard memory (4MB) and large capacity hard disks (either 80MB or 160MB).

In addition, Apple lowered the price on its Apple Hard Disk 20SC by more than 20 percent. The 20SC is a 20MB hard disk drive popular with customers of floppy disk-based systems such as the Macintosh Plus and SE.

The new U.S. pricing structure is effective immediately. Current and previous suggested retail prices are attached.

IRVINE, CA (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Residents of New Jersey can now be assured that power failures will not delay their tax refunds.

The state's new Internal Revenue Service facility has installed a powerful new uninterruptible power supply (UPS) system that will keep the facility's power running strong, even during power surges or blackouts.

The system is a 400 kVA model from the Ultra Power Series 6000, manufactured by Atlas Energy Systems.

According to Jim LoGudice, vice president of Atlas Energy Systems, ''The IRS needed a highly reliable system that has a capacity of 400 kVA. They selected our Series 6000 -- an on-line UPS system that combines the superior performance characteristics of rotary technology with the advantages of advanced solid-state control logic.

''By electing to go with this type of system, the IRS not only saved a significant amount of money over competitive systems, but will reduce day-to-day operating costs substantially,'' LoGudice added.

Atlas Energy Systems has one of the strongest lines of state-of-the-art UPS technology.

MOUNTAIN VIEW, CA (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - In keeping with its Network Utility Architecture product strategy, SynOptics Communications Inc. (NASDAQ/NMS:SNPX) Monday announced the shipment of Token Ring connectivity modules for its LattisNet System 3000 family of intelligent wiring concentrators.

Early customer shipments have resulted in an installed base of more than 5,000 LattisNet Token Ring nodes to date.

These LattisNet Token Ring connectivity products, for the IBM Cabling System (shielded twisted pair wire), represent the first step in unveiling SynOptics' LattisNet Token Ring product family for the System 3000 hardware platform, based on the company's Network Utility Architecture.

The Network Utility Architecture is a value-added product strategy that combines connectivity, internetworking and network management to provide a complete system in one intelligent central wiring concentrator.

The Token Ring capability is implemented in the LattisNet System 3000 via a dedicated Token Ring bus supporting two independent rings operating at either 4 megabits-per-second (Mb/s) or 16 Mb/s.

The Token Ring busses operate along with the existing busses in the System 3000, which provide connections for Ethernet connectivity, Ethernet network management and power. This design meets customer requirements for mixed Ethernet and Token Ring networks by supporting both access methods concurrently within the same wiring concentrator.

According to International Data Corp., a Framingham, Mass.-based market research firm, 33 percent of organizations with revenues greater than $2.5 billion have both Token Ring and Ethernet installed. Typical industry examples include transportation and utilities, education, durable manufacturing, banking and services.

As opposed to passive Token Ring multistation access units, the LattisNet System 3000 concentrators enable LattisNet Token Ring modules to provide enhanced connectivity features including automatic ring wrap and isolation and bypass of disabled ports and modules.

SynOptics Communications Inc. designs, manufactures and markets local area networking products based on its Network Utility Architecture, a value-added product strategy which incorporates network connectivity, internetworking and network management solutions into an integrated networking system. To date, more than 450,000 nodes of its LattisNet product have been installed worldwide.

SAN FRANCISCO (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Grubb & Ellis Realty Income Trust (NASDAQ/NMS:GRIT) Monday announced that, based on the appraised value of its real estate investments, it estimates the proceeds from the proposed liquidation of the company would amount to approximately $24.6 million, or $8.48 per share.

On Jan. 22 the company's board of directors approved a plan, subject to shareholder approval, for the liquidation and dissolution of the REIT. The adoption of the liquidation plan will be considered by the shareholders at the company's annual meeting, scheduled for May 15.

Emmett R. DeMoss Jr., president of the company, indicated that liquidation estimates were based on several assumptions and that the ultimate amount realized by shareholders would depend on the actual sales price of each investment and the actual costs of liquidation.

DeMoss also said that the per share amounts were based on the assumption that there would be 2.9 million shares outstanding, including 250,000 shares from the conversion of the company's warrants on April 10 and 150,000 shares from the exercise of stock options.

LINCOLNSHIRE, IL (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Clear Communications, developer of the Clearview Surveillance System, Monday announced it has received $4.0 million in a second round of financing from a group of leading venture capital firms.

Participating in the financing were St. Paul Venture Capital Inc.; Batterson, Johnson & Wang of Chicago; Accel Partners of San Francisco and Princeton, N.J.; and TA Associates of Boston. Accel Partners and TA Associates provided Clear's initial $2.5 million in financing in April 1988.

''This financing will allow us to increase the momentum that has developed behind the Clearview Surveillance System,'' said Robert S. Copithorne, president and chief executive officer.

Clear Communications also announced that Dr. Rick Boswell, executive vice president of St. Paul Venture Capital, was named to its board of directors. Boswell, who holds a masters in business administration from Harvard and a Ph.D. in computer science, began his career as a design engineer. He has served as president of two leading communications companies, ADC Telecommunications and E.F. Johnson, and has over 20 years combined experience in the electronics and communications industries.

On the board of directors, he joins Dr. Dixon Doll, a highly regarded industry consultant and general partner of Accel Partners; P. Andrews McLane, general partner of T.A. Associates; Dr. George P. Baker, faculty member at the Harvard Business School; and Copithorne.

The Clearview Surveillance System is a comprehensive decision support system for managing carrier performance in wide-area digital networks.

The Clearview System integrates a powerful multitasking workstation, point-and-click user interface, and advanced information management and presentation technologies to provide network managers a complete set of surveillance, diagnostic and reporting capabilities.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - 3Com Corp. Monday announced that it has added a wide area bridge and a wide area brouter to its NETBuilder family of network connectivity products, making NETBuilder the only internetworking system that gives users a choice of local or remote bridging and brouting on a single hardware platform.

The new products are the Internetwork Bridge/3000 (IB/3000) and the Brouter/3000 (BR/3000), and are being demonstrated for the first time at the Federal Office Systems Exhibition here and at the CeBIT conference in Hannover, West Germany. In addition to those announced today, NETBuilder products include the IB/2000 local bridge and BR/2000 local brouter.

The IB/3000 is an intelligent bridge that gives network managers improved wide area internetwork performance and security through its standards-based features, including directional, inverse and protocol-specific filtering; support for IEEE Spanning Tree Algorithm, parallel line support and Source Explicit Forwarding for network security and control.

The IB/3000 is interoperable with 3Com's IB/1 Broadband-to-Ethernet local area bridge and with the IB/3 Ethernet or Broadband to wide area bridge.

The BR/3000 brouter can operate in any of three configurations: as an internetwork bridge, as a multiprotocol router supporting XNS (Xerox Network System), TCP/IP (Transmission Control Protocol/Internet Protocol) or OSI (Open Systems Interconnection) protocols, or as a brouter capable of routing those protocols and bridging all others, including Digital Equipment Corp.'s LAT (Local Area Transport), IBM's LU 6.2 and NetBIOS.

This triple efficiency in one device gives network designers and managers the flexibility to support internetworking applications with one system.

NETBuilder products are designed so network managers can select the appropriate data rate and interface type for their internetwork needs without requiring additional hardware. The IB/3000 and BR/3000 use RS-232 and V.35 connectors to link geographically remote Ethernet networks, with data transmitted over two serial links at rates ranging from low speed (9.6 Kbps) to T1 speed (2.048 Mbps).

3Com Corp. is a computer networking systems company providing multivendor connectivity and information sharing for workgroups, departments and corporate environments worldwide. The company designs, manufactures, markets and supports a wide range of networked client-server computing systems based on industry standards and open systems architecture.

HACKENSACK, NJ (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - The Alpine Group, Inc. (ASE:AGI) Monday reported financial results for the third quarter ended January 31, 1990.

For the quarter ended January 31, 1990, the Company reported a net loss of $438,000, or $.08 per share, compared with a net loss of $3,970,000 or $.97 per share for the same period in the prior fiscal year.

The current quarter included a loss from continuing operations of $483,000 or $.09 per share, compared to a loss of $1,353,000, or $.33 per share, for the prior comparable quarter. The prior comparable period loss of $3,970,000 included a loss from discontinued operations of $2,617,000 or $.64 per share.

For the nine months ended January 31, 1990, net income was $7,662,000 or $1.52 per share compared with a net loss of $7,269,000 or $1.78 per share for the nine months ended January 31, 1989. The nine month results include a $13,921,000 gain from the exchange of $30,106,000 of 13 1/2 percent Senior Subordinated Debentures in the Company's Exchange Offer.

The average number of shares of common stock outstanding during the quarter ended January 31, 1990 was 5,816,887, compared to 4,080,885 for the quarter ended January 31, 1989.

Steven S. Elbaum, chairman and chief executive officer of Alpine, stated that the substantial improvement in current quarter results reflected operating profit increases, corporate and other overhead reductions and reduction in net interest expense arising from the successful completion of the company's exchange offer in October 1989.

The Alpine Group, Inc. is a holding company with subsidiaries organized as two business groups. The Industrial Products/Services Group provides specialty coatings of parts and components used in the defense, aerospace and other industries.

The Information Display Group is developing the PolyVision flat panel display technology. Flat panel display technologies are utilized for the electronic display of information and graphics on screens or other display media including portable computer terminals, automobile and aircraft instrument panels and video displays.

The Information Display Group also provides indoor menuboard display systems and components to fast food and convenience stores and specialized products for the audiovisual display industry.

NORTH MIAMI BEACH, FL (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Home Intensive Care Inc. (NASDAQ/NMS:KDNY (common stock) and KDNYW (warrants)3/8 Monday announced that it has added regional home infusion therapy offices in Providence, R.I.; Portland, Maine; Boston and San Francisco.

James P. Cefaratti, President of Home Intensive Care commented, ''For the past several months, we have focused on building a quality infusion therapy organization as quickly as possible. As a result of the efforts of our highly-capable team of medical and business professionals, we have added these regional home infusion offices to our roster.

''Of the 26 Home Intensive Care locations currently in operation, 23 offer home infusion therapy. We are most pleased that this is considerably ahead of schedule. Key to our continued successful expansion in home infusion therapy are the highly-qualified specialists from across the country who have joined our team.

''To capitalize on our expertise in dialysis we continue to make an impact on the industry by establishing clinics in many major markets throughout the nation. We have initiated the construction process at three new clinic sites which will likely be operational by the end of this summer.

''Furthermore, we have signed nine agreements to establish additional clinic operations and are conducting negotiations to set up clinics in a number of other cities,'' concluded Cefaratti.

The Company also announced that it has extended the expiration date of its common stock purchase warrants from March 30, 1990 to September 30, 1990. The exercise price of each publicly traded warrant remains $7.50, and each warrant entitles the warrantholder to purchase two shares of common stock at the exercise price of $7.50.

Home Intensive Care, Inc. provides high-tech home health care products and services including supervised chronic home hemodialysis services and home infusion therapy. The Company also operates two kidney dialysis centers and 24-hour acute kidney dialysis services in many metropolitan areas. NEW YORK (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Enzo Biochem Inc. (AMEX:ENZ), Monday announced that its wholly owned diagnostic products subsidiary, Enzo Diagnostics Inc., has signed a marketing and distribution agreement with Biolyon -- a unit of Unilever, the multinational conglomerate based in London and Rotterdam -- for the sale and distribution of Enzo Diagnostics' products in France.

The agreement becomes effective April 2, 1990.

Malcolm W. Walpole, vice president, international for Enzo Diagnostics, stated, ''Biolyon is a major player in the French immunohistochemistry market, and will provide Enzo with access to our key potential customer base there. It is strategically located, with manufacturing, warehousing and research and development in Lyon, and a sales/customer service office in Paris.

''We have already planned joint activities to promote Enzo's non-radioactive nucleic acid probe test for typing human papillomavirus. Workshops and seminars will be directed to pathologists and gynecologists in both Paris and Lyon.''

Enzo Diagnostics expects to further increase its distribution in Europe now that patents covering the technology upon which Enzo's proprietary nucleic acid products are based have issued there.

Enzo has exclusively licensed from Yale University European Patent 0063879 and German Patent P 32 80 032.0-08 which issued late last year and protect this technology in Austria, Belgium, France, Germany, Italy, Lichtenstein, Luxembourg, Netherlands, Sweden, Switzerland and the United Kingdom.

These patents, based on the work of Dr. David Ward and his colleagues, cover nucleic acid sequences, of both ribo-and deoxyribonucleic acids (RNA or DNA), linked to biotin at specific positions. The biotin serves to anchor detection systems to nucleic acids, making them traceable without using radioactivity.

LAWRENCEVILLE, NJ (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - First Fidelity Bancorporation (NYSE:FFB) Monday announced that it had entered into an agreement in principle to settle all class action and related derivative lawsuits brought by stockholders in 1988 against it and certain current and former directors and officers.

The total settlement will be $30 million, with $15,250,000 paid initially by First Fidelity and the balance paid by the company's excess directors and officers liability insurance carrier.

The settlement will have no adverse impact on First Fidelity's current or future operating results because the litigation reserve established in prior quarters exceeds First Fidelity's portion of the settlement.

First Fidelity also said that it had filed suit against its primary directors and officers liability insurance carrier, National Union Fire Insurance Co. of Pittsburgh, to recover the full amount it was required to pay under the settlement.

''We are pleased with this agreement,'' said Tony Terracciano, First Fidelity chairman, president and chief executive officer. ''The settlement will spare First Fidelity further litigation related-expense, inconvenience and distraction, and eliminate a significant contingent liability at a cost previously charged to earnings.''

The lawsuits followed First Fidelity's 1988 announcement that it expected to record a substantial loss in that year's fourth quarter and alleged that the company and certain directors and officers had failed to disclose these losses in a timely way in violation of federal and state securities laws and of their fiduciary duties.

The defendants have denied all claims of wrongdoing and the proposed settlement involves no admission by the defendants of liability or improper conduct. The agreement in principle provides for the release of all claims which were or could have been asserted by the plaintiffs and the class.

Final settlement is subject to court approval, the execution of a definitive agreement and other customary conditions.

TOKYO (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Texas Instruments Inc. (NYSE: TXN) and Kobe Steel Ltd. jointly announced Monday an agreement to establish a joint-venture company to manufacture advanced semiconductors in Japan.

The venture will manufacture primarily complementary metal oxide semiconductor (CMOS) logic devices, including very large scale integrated (VLSI) circuits and application-specific integrated circuits (ASICs).

Semiconductor products manufactured by the joint venture will be sold exclusively to TI for distribution and sale by TI to customers in Japan, throughout the Asia-Pacific region, and in other world markets.

Signing the agreement in Tokyo were Sokichi Kametaka, president of Kobe Steel, and Akira Ishikawa, Senior Vice President of TI's Semiconductor Group. The name of the new joint-venture company will be KTI Semiconductor Ltd.

Design work on the wafer-fabrication facility for the joint venture will begin promptly, with construction in Hyogo Prefecture in the Kansai region of Japan to start in early 1991 and be completed by the end of 1991. Full-scale production is expected by mid-year 1992 based on advanced submicron CMOS technology.

Total investment in the initial wafer fab is estimated at about 350 million U.S. dollars, including land, building and equipment.

Kobe Steel will own a majority interest in the joint-venture company, and TI will have a minority interest. An option exists for TI to increase its ownership percentage in the future.

Texas Instruments Inc., headquartered in Dallas, is a high-technology company with sales and manufacturing operations in more than 30 countries. TI develops, manufactures and markets semiconductors, defense electronics systems, software productivity tools, computer systems, industrial automation and control systems, electrical controls, metallurgical materials, and consumer electronics products.

Kobe Steel Ltd. is a diversified Japanese corporation with business in three sectors -- materials, engineering and machinery and new businesses. The materials sector consists of iron and steel, welding consumables, aluminum, copper, and titanium. The engineering and machinery sector contains industrial and construction machinery, engineering and cutting tools.

DALLAS (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Continental Mortgage and Equity Trust (NASDAQ:CMETS) and National Income Realty Trust (NASDAQ:NIRTS) Monday announced the results of their annual meetings of shareholders.

Shareholders of each trust overwhelmingly approved the repeal of the liquidation provision of the respective trust agreements, authorized a proposed one-for-three reverse share split and approved the eight nominees for the board of trustees.

The meeting held yesterday was to reconvene the regular annual meetings that were held on Dec. 21, 1989. The previous meetings were adjourned without counting the vote in accordance with a court order resulting from pending litigation. This litigation was subsequently settled, as previously reported, allowing the tabulation of the annual meeting votes.

''We are particularly pleased that we can now operate as ongoing real estate investment trusts,'' said a spokesperson for the trusts. ''This will allow Continental Mortgage and National Income to continue actively managing and improving their real estate and mortgage portfolios. We expect the trend of positive operating results we've seen in the past few quarters will continue.''

CINCINNATI (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Philip G. Barach, chairman of the board of The United States Shoe Corp., and the company's board of directors Monday announced that Bannus B. Hudson has been unanimously elected chief executive officer of the company, succeeding Barach who served in that position since 1968.

Hudson, age 44, was elected president and chief operating officer of U.S. Shoe earlier this year. He has served as president and CEO of the company's LensCrafters Optical retailing division since 1987.

Barach, who will continue as chairman of the board, is one of the longest-serving CEO's of any major United States corporation. Barach emphasized that he does not anticipate, at least within the foreseeable future, fundamental changes in direction for U.S. Shoe as a result of the change in leadership. He said. ''I personally selected and recommended Ban Hudson to become my successor and I have the highest regard for his management skills and integrity. I am confident that our superb management team, under Ban Hudson's leadership, will continue the long record of growth and profitability that the company has enjoyed in the past. I am in excellent health and retain a high level of energy, and I will be available to consult with Ban to whatever extent I can be helpful.''

Barach will continue to have an active role in the company's affairs. He will devote his ongoing efforts principally to long-range corporate planning for the company and assist Hudson and the board in developing future growth strategies for the company's footwear and women's apparel retailing businesses. Barach said that he will be 60 in April and the transfer of his day-to-day management responsibilities will permit him to pursue community interests and to spend more time with his family.

''Phil Barach has served as President and Chief Operating Officer and then Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of U.S. Shoe for 25 years, Hudson said, ''and during that period Phil Barach has led U.S. Shoe's annual sales growth from $170 million to about $2.6 billion and the number of employees from 12,000 to about 45,000.

Under his visionary direction, U.S. Shoe has become one of the major retailing companies in the country with more than 2,500 retail units.''

HOUSTON (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - National Convenience Stores Inc. (NYSE:NCS) Monday extended the expiration date of the exchange offer for its nine percent debentures until midnight (EST) on March 30.

NCS is offering a new issue of its $14.375 convertible exchangeable preferred stock in exchange for its nine percent convertible subordinated debentures due Dec. 1, 2008.

The company also announced that it improved the terms of the offer by increasing to 73.7 from 63.7 the number of shares of common stock issuable upon conversion of the seven shares of preferred stock being offered by the company for each $1,000 in principal amount of its nine percent debentures.

This results in a reduction of the conversion price from approximately $11 to $9.50 per share of common stock, assuming a series E preferred stock value equal to its liquidation preference of $100 per share. Additionally the company reduced the minimum required level of participation from 70 percent to 50 percent.

As of Friday, March 16, the company had received tenders for approximately $20,960,000 in principal amount of its nine percent debentures, or approximately 42 percent of the amount outstanding.

MILPITAS, CA (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - LSI Logic Corp. Monday announced the availability of the industry's first chip set for producing workstations compatible with Sun Microsystems' SPARCstation 1.

Called ''SparKIT,'' the chip set is intended to expand the market for UNIX-oriented workstations based upon SPARC, Sun Microsystems' reduced instruction set compute (RISC) microprocessor. Over 40,000 SPARCstation 1 workstations were sold in the first nine months after their introduction in the Spring of 1989, and over 23 manufacturers are designing add-in cards for the system's open Sbus.

The SparKIT Family consists of seven integrated circuits can also be used in powerful SPARC-oriented servers which provide the data storage and computational needs of networks of workstations.

According to Microprocessor Group vice president Brian Halla, ''The availability of a complete off-the-shelf solution like SparKIT overcomes the major hurdle to the creation of the workstation PC industry which I'm convinced will be a multi-million unit market. This is like the early days of the PC phenomenon being played at fast forward,'' he concluded.

Two performance versions of the SparKIT Family were announced. The lower cost SparKIT-25 chip set - intended for general purpose workstation applications - operates at 25 MHz (18 million instructions per second or MIPS) and is packaged in plastic quad flat packs or pin grid arrays.

The extra performance SparKIT-40 is intended for computing intensive engineering/scientific workstation applications requiring 33 or 40 MHz speeds 924 or 29 MIPS). SparKIT-40 will be offered in either ceramic or plastic pin-grid array packaging.

SparKIT Family members include the L64811 Integer Unit (IU), the L64814 Floating-Point Unit (FPU), the L64815 Memory Management, Cache Control and Cache Tag (MCT), the L64850 Memory Controller Unit, the L64851 Standard I/O Controller, the L64852 Mbus-to-Sbus Controller and the L64853 DMA Controller. The new devices are made using LSI Logic's leading-edge 0.7-micron CMOS technology.

LSI Logic Corp. is the world's premier supplier of HCMOS ASICs in gate array and cell-based technologies, with over 8,000 designs completed worldwide. LONDON (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - British Gas (NYSE:BRG) Monday announced it has signed a technology exchange protocol with Sojuz Promgas, the Soviet state gas company responsible for gas storage, research and development and the production and marketing of everything to do with the industrial and domestic gas utilization.

The General Director of Sojuz Promgas, Dr. Faizoolla Gaynoolin, and four of his senior scientists spent a week this month visiting British Gas, looking at gas storage technology, the use of gas in industry and the work of a Gas Region. The tour follows a British Gas visit to Moscow in January to discuss areas of common interest.

Mr. Don Wilson, headquarters director, Technology Transfer, who visited Moscow, said that the visitors had been very interested in what they had seen and impressed by the company's technology, which is backed by an 80 million pounds sterling a year Research and Development program. The U.S.S.R. has some 40 percent of the world's known gas reserves and exports gas by pipeline to the European Community.

The first fruits of the agreement will be a visit to Moscow by British Gas's gas storage experts, which take place later this month. Further exchanges will follow.

British Gas, headquartered in London, is the largest integrated gas company in the Western world and is primarily involved in the purchase, transmission, and sale of natural gas to domestic, industrial and commercial customers in Great Britain.

Important support activities to its marketing efforts include appliances trading and customer services to domestic gas customers. British Gas is also active in the exploration for and production of hydrocarbons both offshore and onshore. Expertise developed in the gas business is offered for sale overseas through the British Gas International Consultancy Service. British Gas American Depositary Receipts are traded on the New York Stock Exchange. One ADR is equivalent to ten Ordinary Shares.

NASHVILLE, TN (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Nynex Business Information Systems Co. (NYSE: NYN) and Northern Telecom (NYSE: NT) Monday announced plans to form a partnership that will sell and service Northern Telecom's complete line of customer premise equipment (CPE) in New York and New England.

The two companies have signed a letter of intent to form the new business, which would be known as Nynex Meridian Systems. Northern Telecom would be the majority partner. Completion of the agreement and creation of the new business unit is expected within 45 days. Financial terms of the agreement were not disclosed.

Nynex Meridian Systems would begin operations with approximately 1,000 employees, including employees from Northern Telecom's Meridian Business Systems East Region operations in New York and New England.

In addition, a portion of the Nynex employees currently selling, servicing, and supporting Northern Telecom CPE would become employees of Nynex Meridian Systems.

The new business would assume responsibility for the installed base of Northern Telecom Norstar, Meridian SL-1 and Meridian SL-100/SuperNode equipment, which has been supported by Northern Telecom and by Nynex Business Information Systems Co.

In addition, Nynex Meridian Systems would distribute the Meridian 1 business communications systems product line, which was introduced in January by Northern Telecom.

Donald K. Peterson, group vice-president, Meridian Business Systems, Northern Telecom Inc., said, "This agreement will allow our customers to benefit both from the market presence of Nynex and from the quality of Northern Telecom's full line of customer premise equipment."

Douglas J. Mello, president, Nynex Business Information Systems Co., said, "This step makes good business sense. The experience and expertise that both companies bring to the partnership will be its key assets."

Nynex Business Information Systems Co., a member of the Nynex family of companies, markets telephone systems and peripheral equipment to business customers in the Northeast. The company also owns the Nynex Business Centers, the third-largest non-franchised computer reseller in the United States.

ARCHBALD, PA (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Loral Control Systems, a unit of Loral Corp., has received a $3 million contract for full-scale engineering development of a new laser-guided training round that will lower training costs for U.S. Navy and Marine Corps attack pilots.

The new laser-guided training round, an inexpensive, mass-producible system, matches the performance of the unpropelled Paveway II laser guided bomb but is less than one-half the cost.

The system will provide practice hardware for aircrew training in the coordination, delivery and tactics development for laser-guided weapons.

The training rounds will offer Navy and Marine Corps A-6 and F/A-18 pilots increased training at greatly a lowered cost.

The Navy plans to purchase 1,500 training rounds. Loral expects the program to begin production following completion of full-scale development including eight flight tests, and qualification tests in 1991. The program's revenue potential is $10 million.

Loral Control Systems, with experience in the Paveway II bomb's guidance control unit, will design, develop and manufacture the training rounds. Loral Defense Systems-Akron will provide flight test engineering, system simulation and analysis and support for the program.

Loral Corp. (NYSE:LOR) is a high-technology company that primarily designs and manufactures defense electronics.

WALLINGFORD, CT (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - LPL Technologies Inc. (''LPL'') (NASDAQ:LPLI) announced that it has received a proposal from Chesire Acquisition Corp. (''Cheshire'') for the acquisition of LPL.

The proposal provides for the holders of LPL's publicly traded shares to receive $24 per share in cash. LPL's holders of unregistered shares, including management of LPL, would receive, per share, $17 in cash and one share of 12 percent Cumulative Redeemable Preferred Stock, stated value $7 per share, for each share of LPL common stock not exchanged for new common stock.

Cheshire was formed by Lawrence J. DeGeorge and Lawrence F. DeGeorge, chairman-CEO and president, respectively, of LPL. Upon completion of the acquisition, the DeGeorges and other members of management would own 100 percent of the voting stock of LPL.

Approximately 20 percent of LPL's stock is publicly traded. The balance of LPL's stock is unregistered and held by institutional and affiliated investors and management. Cheshire's proposal states that it has agreements in principle from the principal holders of unregistered shares to particpate in the transaction.

Cheshire's proposal states that Cheshire is confident that it has arranged for the total financing necessary to complete the acquisition through a combination of new equity and senior debt. The proposal also states that LPL's publicly traded Subordinated Debentures due 2001 would remain outstanding after the acquisition, and that the existing debt and capital structure of Amphenol Corp., LPL's largest subsidiary, would be unaffected by the transaction.

The proposal, which is made subject to receipt of appropriate indemnification arrangments, states that consumation of the acquisition would be subject to negotiation of a definitive merger agreement, a successful solicitation of consents from holders of the Subordinated Debentures, and other customary conditions.

LPL will convene a special meeting of its board of directors later today to begin evaluating Cheshire's proposal. LPL expects that the board will refer the matter to a committee of its independent directors.

LPL Technology Inc. operates through its subsidiaries Times Fiber Communications Inc., Amphenol Corp., Amphenol Interconnect Products Corp., Pyle National and American Lightwave Systems Inc.

These companies manufacture coaxial cable, principally for cable television applications, connectors, fiber optics systems and interconnect systems for the electronic, communications and aerospace industries. Their products are engineered and produced in the U.S., Canada, Europe and the Far East, and sold by its worldwide sales and marketing organization.

ENFIELD, CT (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Dairy Mart Convenience Stores Inc. announced the acquisition of 112 Stop-N-Go convenience foods stores located in Ohio and Kentucky pursuant to a previously announced agreement.

These stores are primarily located in the Cincinnati, Dayton and Columbus, Ohio, and the Covington, Ky., metropolitan areas. The stores had been operated by Stop-N-Go Stores Inc., a subsidiary of Sun Co. Inc. In addition to the purchase of Ohio and Kentucky stores, 28 Michigan stores are expected to be purchased no later than May 1, 1990, bringing the total number of stores acquired to 140.

''We are thrilled to be adding these Stop-N-Go units to Dairy Mart's existing stores in the Midwest marketing area. Since these properties are located in the states of Ohio, Michigan and Kentucky, they fit us like a glove,'' commented Charles Nirenberg, chairman of Dairy Mart. ''We expect this acquisition to strengthen our Midwest division.''

''The purchase of these properties is a timely, strategic opportunity which demonstrates Dairy Mart's commitment to growth through acquisitions '' stated Frank Colaccino, president of Dairy Mart. ''We look for well-managed convenience store chains which are contiguous to our existing market areas. The Stop-N-Go foods purchase meets these guidelines.''

The Stop-N-Go stores acquired by Dairy Mart will be converted to the Dairy Mart ''look'' within a six month transition period. The stores will, however, immediately begin carrying Dairy Mart products, such as milk, juice and ice cream. Dairy Mart is unique in the convenience store industry because of its strong foundation in the dairy business and its recognized specialty in deli operations.

Dairy Mart produces its dairy products at two dairy plants in the Midwest and Northeast, and distributes these products from its dairy plants and its Southeast distribution facility.

Dairy Mart is one of the nation's leading convenience store chains with over 1,200 stores located in 11 states. Corporate headquarters are located in Enfield. The company's largest division with approximately 625 stores, is based in Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio, with a regional office in Columbus.

OCONOMOWOC, WI (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - A special year-end dividend of 10 cents per share was voted by the board of directors of Stokely USA at a meeting held on March 16, 1990.

This dividend is in addition to the regular quarterly dividend of 4 cents per share. Both dividends will be paid April 16, 1990, to holders of record April 2, 1990.

''The board considered it appropriate to declare the added dividend in view of the significantly higher earnings that have been achieved this fiscal year. This, of course, is in addition to our regular quarterly dividend and brings our total dividends for the fiscal year to 26 cents per share,'' Chairman Joseph B. Weix stated.

In other action, David J. Meyers was elected to fill a board vacancy. Meyers joined Stokely as senior vice president sales and marketing in November 1989. Prior to that he was vice president of acquisitions and strategic planning at A.C. Nielsen Co. ''Dave brings a depth of marketing and planning knowledge to the board that will be most valuable as Stokely continues to expand the markets we serve,'' Chairman Weix said.

The company also announced that this year's annual meeting will be held at 11:00 a.m., June 30, 1990, at the Country Inn located in Pewaukee, Wis. Shareholders of record May 11, 1990, will be entitled to vote at that meeting.

Stokely USA processes and markets a broad range of canned vegetables, fruits, tomato products and joices under the nationally recognized ''Stokely's Finest,'' ''Stokely's Singles'' and other brand labels; under customer private labels; and to the food service industry. Headquartered in Oconomowoc, Stokely operates 17 processing facilities in the Midwest and Pacific Northwest.

GARDEN CITY. NY (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - CABLE APPLICATIONS, INC. (NASDAQ:CBLE) reported Monday that it is approximately $1.5 million delinquent in its payments of state and federal payroll and other taxes, exclusive of any interest and penalties which may be assessed. This is not reflected in the Company's previously issued financial statements.

The Company attributed is recent cash flow problems primarily to (1) delays in collecting receivables due to (a) certain major customers not paying when promised and (b) certain other major customers lengthening the period in which they make payments to the Company and (2) in consummating a $1.5 million bank line of credit. The Company also noted that it had incurred increased expenses attributable to successful bidding on new jobs in the telephone segment of its business, the revenues from which will first begin to be received during April and continue thereafter for the next year.

The Company also reported that it intends to reduce the payroll tax delinquency by payments before March 31, 1990 and believes it will be current within the next 120 days.

Richard Capaldo, the Company's Chairman of the Board, said, ''the Company is aggressively pursuing collection of approximately $3,000,000 in receivables from its customers, all of which are major financially responsible companies and institutions, diligently seeking additional financing thorugh its financial adivsors.'' Mr. Capaldo added that ''we are encouraged by the growing orders for our Company's businesses and the fact that our only other major debt to a financial institution is approximatley $500,000, which is adequately collateralized by our accounts receivable.''

CABLE APPLICATIONS, INC. is engaged in the design, installation and maintenance of cable, microwave, fiber optic devices and telecommunication systems. The Company also supplies temporary, technical and clerical personnel to industry.

CLEVELAND (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - LDI Corporation had record revenues and net earnings for the fourth quarter and year ended January 31, 1990, it was announced today by Robert S. Kendall, chairman and chief executive officer.

Revenues for the year were $356,001,000, 34 percent greater than the prior year revenues of $265,338,000. Earnings were $8,610,000, 37 percent greater than the comparable earnings of $6,288,000 for the prior year. Both revenues and earnings were the highest reported for any year in the company's eighteen-year history.

For the year, the company earned $1.46 per share on 17 percent additional average shares outstanding, compared to the prior year comparable earnings of $1.24 per share. The increase in average shares resulted primarily from a new common stock issue of 1.3 million shares in June 1989.

For the fourth quarter, revenues of $121,974,000 were also a record for any quarter in the company's history and were 14 percent greater than the $106,775,000 of revenues reported in the year-ago fourth quarter.

Net earnings increased 32 percent to a record $3,291,000 from the $2,487,000 earned in the fourth quarter last year. Kendall stated, ''Net earnings benefited from improved gross margins in leasing, selling, and technical services, and from a lower effective income tax rate.''

Earnings were 53 cents per share for the fourth quarter, an increase of 8 percent from the 49 cents per share earned in the same quarter last year.

All references to per share information have been adjusted, where applicable, to give retroactive effect to a 5 percent stock dividend paid in November 1989.

''Financial and operating results increased significantly in 1989 as we moved ahead with our planned expansion of sales, leasing, and technical services activities,'' Kendall said. ''Concurrent with our growth has been the careful development of the organization and infrastructure required to effectively manage and support our operations.''

Kendall pointed out that the company raised more than $250 million of capital in 1989 through a number of steps including the common stock offering, a securitized commercial paper program, and other debt financings. While assets increased to $600 million, consisting primarily of equipment leases, the company has maintained a conservative recourse debt to equity ratio of less than 2 to 1.

Kendall said that he was particularly pleased with the progress in several areas, including the company's disaster recovery services business that now has 5 hot sites and 4 cold sites strategically located in Ohio, Michigan, and Florida to provide immediate data processing and telecommunications back up services for customers. ''We also have continued to successfully expand our non-computer leasing activities with particular emphasis on high-tech equipment as well as technical and maintenance services for more makes of data processing and telecommunications equipment. Our full-service approach to providing all of a customer's data processing leasing, sales, and service needs remains an important advantage in our competitive industry.''

Kendall stated, ''The new year is off to an excellent start, and we are encouraged about the outlook for 1990. We are enthusiastic about our expanding capabilities and opportunity to achieve our profitable, planned growth objectives.''

LDI Corporation, with headquarters in Cleveland, provides a full range of new and used data processing, telecommunications and other high technology equipment, as well as maintenance, disaster recovery services, technical support and related services.

The company's products include mainframe and mid-range central processing equipment and peripheral devices, as well as personal computers, telecommunications equipment, computerized medical diagnostic systems, and selected capital equipment. LDI is also an active dealer in the secondary market for used data processing, telecommunications, and related equipment.

TORONTO (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Officeland Inc. (NASDAQ:OFLDF) Monday announced results for the fiscal year ended November 30, 1989.

IN U.S. DOLLARS

For the year ended November 30, 1989, revenues were $1,815,467. Net income reached $232,893, or $.019 per share (fully diluted), including an extraordinary gain on the assignment of long-term debt of $733,324, a tax loss carryforward of $53,565, and a loss from discontinued operations of $330,981. In fiscal 1988, revenues were $4,158,069 with a net loss of $5,800,235, or $1.00 per share, including a loss from discontinued operations of $1,742,693 and a loss on the disposal of a subsidiary of $2,975,162.

The per share figures for 1989 and 1988 give retroactive effect to a 3-for-1 stock split effective February 9, 1990. Canadian dollars have been translated into U.S. dollars at the exchange rate of $1.1632 (CDN) to $1.00 (US).

In fiscal 1989, Officeland continued to successfully implement its plan to concentrate its efforts and resources on its collection collection and financial services business, which requires relatively low selling and administrative expenses. In accordance with this plan, Officeland discontinued its retail sales of new office furniture and supplies.

As a result of the Company's focus on collection service operations, Officeland realized a decrease in general and administrative expenses in 1989 of $1,286,090 as compared to the prior year. Selling expenses decreased in fiscal 1989 by $126,434 and costs of sales decreased to $673,748 from $2,560,924 in fiscal 1988.

In July 1989, Officeland completed a debt restructuring, thereby retiring its remaining debt through a payment of cash and stock, terms of which were reported earlier.

As a result of the debt restructuring, interest expense decreased to $172,455 from $363,109 in 1988. At the same time the Company arranged for short-term financing of $150,000 to maintain operating working capital. In March 1989, Officeland completed a private placement offering of 22 units, each unit consisting of 199,998 restricted shares of common stock of the Company at a price of $50,000 (US) per unit. The Company received proceeds of approximately $995,000. Management noted that cash generated from ongoing operations should be sufficient to fund the Company's working capital requirements.

Marvyn Budd, President, commented, ''We are pleased with the positive results achieved during fiscal 1989 through the implementation of our corporate reorganization and debt restructuring. Agency and collection service fees increased over the prior year while Officeland realized significant reductions in cost of sales and administrative expenses. As we continue to to take additional steps to further our cost reductions, we are confident that our strategy to focus on this segment of our business will continue to serve the Company well.'

TRENTON, NJ (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Aetna Casualty and Surety Co., Monday filed suit asking the Chancery Division of the New Jersey Superior Court to declare null and void an Insurance Department administrative proceeding against the company arising out of Aetna's dealings with the Joint Underwriting Association (JUA).

''We ask the court to find the Insurance Department's action totally without merit and to grant a permanent injunction against this unfair departmental proceeding,'' said John J. Martin, president of Aetna's personal financial security division. ''From the time the Commissioner made his outrageous, unfounded charges last August, we have manintained that the state of New Jersey, and the state alone, bears total responsibility for the insolvency of the JUA.''

The Aetna complaint alleges that the Insurance Department's February 20 order violates the Fifth and Fourteenth Admendments of the U.S. Constitution by denying Aetna due process and attempting to deprive the company of its property. The suit also charges the JUA with breach of contract and the Insurance Department with malicious interference with Aetna's contractual rights.

In additon to seeking injunctive relief, Aetna has asked the court for compensatory damages and payment of attorney's fees and legal costs.

DAYTON, OH (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - NCR Corp. Monday introduced the NCR PACESETTER Scanner Scale, an advanced integrated bar code scanner scale for retailers that can scan and decode data on even the most difficult-to-read product labels, thus improving customer service.

Designed to be the industry's most advanced and integrated bar code scanner scale, PACESETTER provides significant increases in first-pass read percentage of UPC/EAN (Universal Product Code/European Article Number) labels, resulting in improved checker productivity and accuracy.

''This new product will benefit store personnel and customers alike,'' said Tony Fano, vice president, NCR retail systems division.

A cost-effective solution, existing NCR scanners can be easily upgraded to PACESETTER. For example, a customer can upgrade from a NCR 7820 Flat Deck Scanner to PACESETTER with an upgrade kit. In addition, the design of PACESETTER allows customers to upgrade from another NCR scanner without updating the checkstand, and incurring that additional expense.

The NCR PACESETTER has a suggested list price starting at $3,885 and is available immediately via the NCR direct sales force, retail dealers and value-added resellers. There are also PACESETTER Scanners and Scanner/Scales with industry standard PACESETTER interfaces available for competitive point-of-sale products.

Service and maintenance support will be provided to the NCR Pacesetter by NCR's 11,000 field engineers located at 714 locations worldwide.

NCR is one of the largest retail slot scanner manufacturers in the world, with an installed base of more than 175,000 units, and a worldwide market share of 42 percent.

NEW YORK (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Airship International Ltd. (NASDAQ:BLMP) announced Monday that it recently purchased an additional Skyship from Airship Industries, U.K. (''AIRSY'').

The new Skyship at 194 feet is the most techically advanced airship in the world and the same size airship that the company currently operates for the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. pursuant to a 36-month, $10.8 million contract.

As a result of the purcahse, Airship International Ltd. was appointed, subject to the continued satisfaction of certain terms and conditions, the exclusive commercial operator in the United States for Airship Industries U.K.

The purchase of the new airship has been financed in full by a major banking institution for $3.25 million.

The company is presently negotiating with potential aerial advertising customers for this Skyship including a major Fortune 500 company which shall utilize this airship as an aerial ambassador on a cross-country promotional tour.

It is anticipated that the future contract will be on similar terms as the company's existing aerial advertising contract with the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. (MetLife).

The new airship will be equipped with the company's NightSign System, the world's largest full color aerial display, creating messages, logos and animated graphics that can be seen from over a mile away, as well as its' aerial camera as scene at Super Bowl and major sporting/special events.

CINCINNATI (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Cincinnati Bell Inc. Chairman and Chief Executive Officer D. H. Hibbard told an audience of investment professionals in Boston Monday that 1990 would be a positioning year.

''1990 will be a building year for Cincinnati Bell Inc. as we invest in our future,'' Hibbard said.

''Software product development, facilities improvement, selective acquisitions, and infrastructure attention in our rapidly growing businesses, all will require dollars as well as management attention to position us for the decade of the 90's. As a consequence, we do not expect 1990 to match the strong growth rates of the last two years.''

The Cincinnati based information services company reported 1989 earnings of $94.4 million on revenues of $900 million. Earnings per common share totaled $1.50.

Cincinnati Bell has budgeted approximately $190 million for capital investments in its present portfolio of businesses in 1990. Capital spending on existing businesses was $189 million in 1989. There will also be investments in acquisitions.

So far this year, Cincinnati Bell has acquired CTI Communications Inc., a regional long distance reseller serving northern Indiana and western Michigan.

Cincinnati Bell has also signed a letter of intent to acquire Americall Systems of Louisville, Kentucky, a regional long distance reseller serving Louisville, Lexington, and Frankfort. Neither purchase price has been released.

Hibbard told the audience that the plans for 1990 are part of the company's ''challenging objective'' for 1990 - 1994. ''Last fall, I gave our managers a new financial target to aim toward,'' he said.

''I said we could double the size of the company in the next five years, just as we had done in the previous five. That means we would become a $1.8 billion company in 1994.''

Cincinnati Bell Inc. has diversified its business into niches in information services where it can apply its know-how and achieve a significant market share.

The investment professionals were attending The Communications Outlook, a two day conference sponsored by Merill Lynch for its institutional clients.

Presenters include leaders of the nation's telecommunications industry and key legislative and regulatory officials.

Cincinnati Bell Inc. supplies telecommunications, information management and telemarketing services. Services include information systems development, data processing and systems consulting, discount long distance telecommunications, market research, electronic database services telecommunications equipment supply and repair, and inbound and outbound telemarketing.

MIAMI (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Les Garland, the original programming head of MTV: Music Television, has joined Video Jukebox Network Inc. as vice president, programming, it was announced Monday by President/Chief Executive Officer Andrew H. Orgel.

''Les Garland has an unparalleled track record in the music, radio and music television businesses,'' commented Orgel. ''One of our primary goals is to cement long term relationships with the record companies and develop strategies that will help them sell product, while giving The Jukebox's viewers a pipeline to the hottest new music product available.

''I know of no one more qualified for this challenge than Les Garland.''

Generally considered one of the most influential rock radio programmers in the 1970's, Garland's career has included Atlantic Records (Warner Communications), where he headed up West Coast Operations, and radio programming management positions with RKO Radio, KFRC - San Francisco, and CKLW - Detroit.

Garland's highly successful track record in radio and records made him a smart choice for MTV Networks. Garland was senior vice president of programming at the start-up of MTV: Music Television and its sister network VH-1.

Following a six year career with the enormously influential MTV Networks, Garland joined former MTV President Bob Pittman as executive vice president in the start-up of Quantum Media.

''The Jukebox Network is the logical extension of what we started at MTV '' said Garland. ''The potential of a network of viewer programmed stations is boundless. I believe that we can provide the record companies with both unprecedented research and information, as well as a platform for artist promotion and development that is simply not possible with a nationally fed satellite network.

''Interactivity and localization truly can be the future of music television and the entertainment industry.''

Garland will head up all programming areas of the company's interactive music service, The Jukebox Network, including market by market music customization to satisfy viewer tastes and maximize Jukebox unit revenue, music industry relationships and product flow, and oversight of the channel's on-air presentation.

Video Jukebox Network Inc. is an interactive television company that currently operates 83 units of The Jukebox Network, the leading interactive television network in the country. The Jukebox Network is available in 23 states and reaches 6.2 million households.

DENVER (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Vicorp Restaurants Inc. (NASDAQ:VRES) Monday reported a 79 percent increase in net income for its fiscal first quarter ended Feb. 18.

Net income for the quarter advanced to $3,313,000 from $1,849,000 reported for the same period last year. Earnings per common share almost doubled, reaching 31 cents compared with 16 cents in 1989.

Revenues for the quarter rose to $115.9 million from $105.3 million a year ago. These results marked the 12th consecutive quarter of year-to-year operating improvement for the company. ''We continue to see the benefits of our commitment to quality customer service and our efforts to increase average per person expenditures,'' said Charles P. Frederickson, chairman of the board.

''Overall restaurant sales grew by 10.3 percent, despite some adverse weather conditions that depressed sales in some areas during the quarter. Comparable restaurant sales increased 6.5 percent, aided by growth in both customer counts and per person expenditures.

''Restaurant operating income rose 19.1 percent from the comparable quarter a year ago, prinicipally due to the increase in sales. The largest gains were in our Bakers Square-California group, where the combination of growing sales and increasing efficiencies resulted in a better than twofold increase in restaurant operating income. While the results in this market have been most gratifying, we still have significant opportunities in front of us,'' Frederickson added.

Vicorp operates and franchises approximately 400 mid-scale family type restaurants under the names Bakers Square and Village Inn principally in the Rocky Mountain Region, upper Midwest, Florida, Arizona and California.

NEW YORK (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Sports Illustrated and Pepsi-Cola have pooled their marketing and advertising resources to forge an unprecedented and inclusive agreement that includes a unique consumer program.

In exchange for a two-year advertising commitment from Pepsi-Cola, Sports Illustrated's event marketing staff will plan, co-host, and execute the consumer program. What is most significant is that the magazine is lending the prestige of its name to a consumer co-promotion of this magnitude for the first time in its 35-year history.

Diet Pepsi's current consumer production, the ''Right Ones Fantasy Sports Vacation'' game, in conjunction with SI, allows winners and their guests to participate in the sports fantasy of their choice.

Print advertisements for the sweepstakes, complete with an entry form, appeared in the Feb. 19 and Feb. 26 issues of SI. Contestants can also enter by utilizing a special game card found in specially marked multi-packs of Diet Pepsi and Caffeine Free Diet Pepsi. Winners will have the option of seven exotic vacation packages, including:

-- A spa vacation at the La Costa (Calif.) Spa and resort;

-- A golfing tour of Scotland's great courses;

-- An African photo safari with a noted SI photographer;

-- Bone fishing in the South Pacific with a top celebrity fisherman;

-- An Australian tennis excursion that includes seats at the Australian Open finals, a day of tennis with a former Open champion, as well as a tour of the Land Down Under;

-- A ski vacation in Calgary, site of the 1988 Winter Olympics, with former Olympic gold medalists;

-- A 1991 baseball spring training vacation.

NEW ORLEANS (MARCH 19) BUSINESS WIRE - Hibernia Corp. (NYSE:HIB) announced Monday that it is increasing its reserves in light of the much-publicized changes in the approach taken by the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency toward banking industry credit procedures as well as fragile economic trends which have become apparent during the first quarter of 1990.

In the first quarter, Hibernia intends to record a special loan loss provision of approximately $50 million which will increase its quarter-end reserve to $110 million. Management anticipates that, as a result of this action, Hibernia will report a first quarter net loss of approximately $25 million, or 90 cents per share. The large majority of these new reserves is not expected to be charged off in the near term.

Hibernia views the first quarter loss as a one-time event that is not indicative of either future earning capacity or cash flow. The company's dividend ability will not be affected. During the last three quarters of 1990, Hibernia expects to return to its strong earnings performance.

The company also has decided to add a total of $64 million of loans to non-performing status -- approximately half due to the new examination approach and the remainder due to possible future economic trends. Total non-performing loans will approximate 2 percent of total outstanding loans at the end of the quarter. Hibernia intends the new reserve level to be more than 100 percent of non-performing loans and more than 2 percent of the total loan portfolio at quarter-end.

The company believes this increase in non-performing loans is appropriate given increased uncertainties in the economy and the tough new examination standards being applied by bank regulators. Under these new examination standards, loans which had been performing (paying interest) in previous years have now been classified as non-performing.

The industry has newly identified this phenomenon as ''performing non-performing'' loans. Also, a more stringent stance has been taken with regard to required charge-offs. Such directed actions are mandated even though there has been no change in the basic cash flows derived from these loans.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 19) COMTEX - The 8-K report filed at the SEC shows on Feb. 28, 1990, Digital Devices Inc. executed an agreement with Trumac Inc. in which Digital would sell all of Conklin Technology Inc.'s equipment, assets and business to Trumac for a price of $85,000, plus certain variables. Conklin was a wholly owned subsidiary of Digital Devices prior to the sale. The sale did not include Conklin's trade debts, taxes owed and other liabilities. Since the sale was retroactively effective Dec. 31, 1989, all business of Conklin following that date belonged to Trumac.

Conklin is in the process of a liquidation whose completion is anticipated by mid-1990.

Digital devices, as of Feb. 28, 1990, has been negotiating the acquisition of another company, unnamed in the 8-K filing. The acquisition would include the granting of control of Digital Devices along with a majority of its outstanding shares to principals of that other company. In exchange, fresh capital would be infused into Digital Devices through the merger. That capital, it is anticipated, would meet capital requirements for the companies'combined objectives.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 19) COMTEX - A top insurance executive said today his industry is facing an accounting crisis, not a solvency crisis.

John J. Byrne, the chairman and chief executive officer of Fireman's Fund Insurance Companies, told a congressional subcommittee that problems confronting the insurance agency today are not really insolvencies but merely the consequences of weak accounting standards.

"Weak accounting practices probably permeates 97 percent of all insurance companies in America," Byrne said. "But I would be very surprised if more than 2 percent of all insurance firms are engaged in fraud."

Three weeks ago, the Oversight and Investigations Subcommittee of the House Energy and Commerce Committee issued a report on the practices and events which have led to an increasing number of insurance company insolvencies. The report was highly critical of the state regulatory system and warned of potential trouble in the insurance industry that could rival that of the nation's thrifts if state regulators don't get tougher.

Problems cited by the subcommittee include excessive underpricing, reckless management, bad underwriting, fraudulent activity, and a general concern only for the welfare of corporate insiders.

Byrne cited a report by Conning & Company which concluded that the growing problem of insurer insolvency were caused by failure to adhere to disciplined balance sheets. For example, many insurers typically value their bonds at purchase price rather than market value. Byrne said according to the Conning study, loss reserve deficiencies have been the underlying cause of most insolvencies.

Although he is calling for bonds to be pegged to their market value, Byrne believes that insurers should not be prohibited from investing in junk bonds. "Junk bonds are not a widespread problem in the casualty property business," he said. "Insurance companies should be able to invest up to 10 percent of their surplus in junk bonds."

The Insurance Services Office, the primary statistical and reporting agency for the insurance industry, has indicated that insurance company loss adjustment expense reserves, which total just over $30 billion, may be more than 50 percent inadequate.

"The net result is that insurers may be overstating their capital by as much as $30 to $40 billion dollars at this moment," Byrne said. "The most important test of capital is to get loss reserves correct."

An insurer that overstates its assets and understates its liabilities may, in fact, be writing new business when it lacks the capacity to do so. Byrne argues this failure to adhere to disciplined balance sheets has resulted in scores of insurance companies becoming insolvent.

In order to correct these deficiencies, Byrne advocates that state regulators require independent audits of insurer financial reports and certification of loss reserve estimates by qualified actuaries. He also said that insurers should be prohibited from discounting loan loss reserves to present value. Discounted loan loss reserves assume that a business will continue in operation.

The subcommittee found that 35 states do not require independent annual audits of insurance firms. This, in essence, means that the states leave their judgment of an insurer's soundness to the insurance companies themselves.

Byrne acknowledged that some of his recommendations are already included in a 16-point plan submitted by the National Association of Insurance Commissioners (NAIC). "The NAIC proposal, if adopted and implemented nationally, would go far toward producing more honest accounting statements and reducing both the number and magnitude of insolvencies," he said.

The National Association of Insurance Brokers (NAIB), the national trade association of insurance brokers, said it believes that in order for solvency regulation to be successful, it must include "minimum, uniform standards with a strong enforcement mechanism." The NAIB added that "primary regulatory priority should be to minimize harm to the public through early detection of financial problems and prompt action to take impaired companies out of the marketplace."

BRUSSELS (MARCH 19) - The European Commission on Monday announced aid totalling 3.48 million dollars for Lebanon, Cambodia and three African countries.

The European Economic Community (EEC) executive awarded 800,000 European Currency Units (ECU's) (960,000 dollars) for the victims of renewed fighting in Lebanon, to finance the dispatch of medical teams, equipment, medicines and food.

Some 670,000 ECU's (800,000 dollars) was granted to Cambodia for similar purposes.

A further 650,000 ECU's (780,000 dollars) is to go to displaced persons in Sudan, to pay for air transport of food and other items to 200,000 people who have fled to the area around the southern town of Juba.

The Commission also allocated 490,000 ECU's (almost 600,000 dollars) for the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees to carry out a census of some 200,000 Ethiopian refugees in Somalia with a view to their possible repatriation.

The remaining 284,150 ECU's (340,000 dollars) will be used to extend a medical program for refugees in Senegal.

TOKYO (MARCH 19) - The Bank of Japan will step up its dollar-selling market intervention by selling on overseas markets, Kyodo News Service quoted a senior central bank official as saying Monday.

"We will strengthen coordination with monetary authorities in other countries and take decisive action," the unnamed official was quoted as saying.

The yen hit a three-year low of 153.55 yen to the U.S. dollar at the close on the Tokyo foreign exchange market Monday.

The Japanese central bank intervened in the Tokyo market Monday to support the yen, dealers said without specifying the volume of dollars sold by the bank.

PERTH, Australia (MARCH 19) - The Premier of Western Australia, Carmen Lawrence, said Monday she had doubts about the seriousness of the Bond Corporation's intent to sue the state for 500 million Australian dollars (380 million U.S.) in damages.

Bond has lodged a statement of claim in the Supreme Court here in which it seeks this amount for alleged breach of contract and lost profit associated with a collapsed petrochemical project.

The plant was to have been built at the Kwinana industrial area, south of here. Bond and the Western Australian Government were major partners.

Ms. Lawrence said that, to a certain extent, the level of legal response from the State Government would depend on how far the Bond group intended pushing the claim.

"Half a billion dollars is an extraordinary claim by any measure," she said. "We have to take it seriously, but in the end the legal resources that we have to deploy will depend in part on what they (the Bond group) are doing."

LONDON (MARCH 19) - British sugar group Tate and Lyle said Monday it was holding exploratory talks with Berisford International on launching a friendly takeover bid for the raw materials brokers, sugar refining, property and financial services group.

Berisford International said it had been holding talks with Tate for several months, but indicated it was also studying approaches from several other firms, which it did not name.

Italian group Ferruzzi, which had already expressed an interest in acquiring control of Berisford operation British Sugar in 1987, has been suggested in financial circles here as a possible bidder.

The Sunday Times newspaper had said that Berisford, whose non-sugar interests, notably property, are having a difficult time with increasing debt, was seeking help in the form of a friendly takeover by traditional rivals Tate and Lyle.

Tate and Lyle had already launched a bid for Berisford in 1987, but like the rival Ferruzzi move it was blocked by the British Monopolies and Mergers Commission because of the effect on competition if either took control of British Sugar.

Food group Associated British Foods (ABF) later received the green light to take over Berisford, but withdrew its bid after the stock market crash of October 1987. ABF now has a 22 per cent stake in Berisford.

Tate and Lyle said Monday it had held exploratory talks on the possibility of a takeover of Berisford, but the discussions were still at a preliminary stage and would not necessarily result in a formal proposal.

A decision would depend on the value set for Berisford's non-sugar activities.

WINDHOEK (MARCH 19) - United Nations Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar arrived here Monday to take part Wednesday in ceremonies marking the independence of Namibia.

Mr. De Cuellar waited 45 minutes at the airport for President-elect of Namibia Sam Nujoma, who was supposed to welcome him but never showed up.

ABIDJAN (MARCH 19) - The African Development Bank on Monday loaned Air Afrique 14.3 billion CFA francs (49.4 million dollars) to "restore its transport capacity," a bank statement said.

The loan, signed by ADB Vice-President Gilbert Avika and Air Afrique director-general Yves Roland-Billecart, is repayable in 14 years with a four-year grace period, the statement said.

Airline officials said Air Afrique's recovery plan will cost 57.5 billion CFA francs (200 million dollars). In 1989, France provided 37 billion (about 129 million dollars) mostly in grants for the recovery effort.

Ten African countries -- Benin, Burkina Faso, Central African Republic, Chad, Congo, Ivory Coast, Mauritania, Niger, Senegal, and Togo -- and a private French company, SODETRAF hold shares in the company.

LONDON (MARCH 19) - The coffee, cocoa and sugar futures markets, which had been rising recently, have been plunged into disarray by Friday's announcement of an economic redressment program in Brazil, dealers said in London Monday.

Brazil is the world's largest coffee producer, the second largest cocoa producer and the fourth largest sugar producer.

By mid-afternoon, coffee had fallen 51 pounds a ton over Friday's closing level to 679 pounds (1,130 dollars), after seeing prices rise to 757 pounds a ton at one point last week, its highest level in five and a half months, on a shortage of high qualities.

The fall was due to fears that freer exchange rate fluctuation announced by new Brazilian President Fernando Collor de Mello on Friday would lead to a steep devaluation of the Brailian currency and a flood of exports, brokers said.

Similar concern affected cocoa and sugar, but to a lesser extent.

Cocoa fell 16 pounds a ton to 701 pounds (1,170 dollars), after hitting 741 pounds, its highest level since September, during last week on fears of supply disruption from Ivory Coast, the world's largest producer.

Raw sugar was down 7.4 dollars a ton to 350 for August delivery, while white sugar held steady at 448.5 dollars a ton.

Sugar prices had reached their highest levels in 10 years last week on fears of smaller harvests in Cuba and Thailand.

News that the Brazilian Coffee Institute and the Brazilian Sugar and Alcohol Institute were to be abolished and their functions taken over by other government departments also contributed to the uncertainty.

The impact of Mr. de Mello's economic measures was "very hard to analyse" at the moment, one coffee broker at GNE said.

"The market is probably going to be very unsettled for a few days, then it is likely to resume its upward trend."

"The lower prices are likely to attract good buying interest."

As for sugar, "no restrictions on alcohol usage or limits on exports have been announced yet" in Brazil, said a broker at Czarnikow.

But "it is not clear what they intend to do" and "the market is going to be a bit nervous until the situation clarifies itself."

Brazil's 1989-90 coffee harvest has been estimated at 23.6 million 60-kilo bags by the Brazilian Coffee Institute, while Gill and Duffus estimate its cocoa production for the season at 368,000 tons.

Czarnikow has estimated its 1989-90 sugar production at 7.3 million tons, but a shortage of fuel alcohol has led to fears of an export ban on the commodity.

BEIJING (MARCH 19) - China's industrial output fell 0.9 percent in the first two months of this year compared with the same two months of the previous year, with a year-on-year fall of 6.1 percent in January, the New China News Agency (NCNA) said Monday.

The official agency also mentioned urgent measures which are expected to be announced by Premier Li Peng Tuesday at the opening session of the National People's Congress (parliament). The economy which is facing a recession after 18 months of an official austerity programme.

On a year-on-year basis the fall was the sharpest decline in the last 10 years, although in February output rose by 5.6 percent, NCNA said quoting the statistics bureau.

But compared to December, January's figures represented a fall of 10 percent while February's were 6.5 percent lower than for the previous month.

The agency cited a number of problems which had caused the fall including frequent halts in production, growing stocks of unsold goods and a worrying increase in the size of debts.

NCNA added that the central bank had provided large businesses with supplementary loans of eight billion yuan (1.7 billion dollars) and had dropped interest rates on commercial loans by 1.26 percent from March 21.

PARIS (MARCH 19) - Czechoslovakian President Vaclev Havel arrived here Monday on an historic event marking the first visit to the French capital by a Czech leader since 1923.

French President Francois Mitterrand termed the visit ''the beginning of a new epoch'' in which the two countries ''should be as closely involved as possible''.

Havel's two days of talks with French leaders will focus on the scope of changes in Eastern Europe and Prague's hopes for economic aid.

TOULOUSE, FRANCE (MARCH 19) - The chemical plant at Rabta, near the Libyan capital Tripoli, was virtually undamaged after a fire last week, French satellite pictures show.

The company Spot Image said that photographs taken by its Spot-1 satellite on Sunday showed scorch marks on the outside walls of a few small ancillary buildings thought to be storehouses, but otherwise the plant seemed to have suffered no substantial damage.

In Rome earlier, the Libyan ambassador to Italy said that the plant, which the United States has said is a disguised chemical weapons factory, suffered "large-scale damage" in the fire.

Christian Bernard, head of Spot Image's international section, said after analysing the photographs: "the main units of the Rabta factory do not appear to have been touched, and there are no traces on the ground suggesting that a fire took place."

He went on: "if you judge by the overall appearance, nothing happened at Rabta."

A small fire might have occurred over an area 200 meters square (700 feet square) situated 800 meters (half a mile) from the main building, he said.

The photographs were taken at 1000 GMT on Sunday from a height of 830 kilometers (about 520 miles) with a resolution of 10 meters (33 feet), Mr. Bernard said, adding: "we cannot provide more details."

The Libyan Ambassador to Rome, Abdurrahman Shalgam, said that the fire was due to an act of sabotage by "a member of the plant's technical staff" and that "a few suspicious people have been arrested."

He did not indicate their number or nationality. Some 100 foreigners work at the plant, he said.

He said West Germany could have been behind the fire, as West German firms had helped to build the plant and only people with detailed knowledge of its operation could have sabotaged it.

Libyan authorities also suspect the United States and Israel, the ambassador said.

Investigators said the saboteurs had used highly sophisticated equipment to make the fire look like an accident, he added.

STUTTGART, West Germany (MARCH 19) - West Germany's most prestigious automakers, Mercedes Benz and Porsche, signed a cooperation agreement here on Monday on developing a new Mercedes, Porsche announced.

The agreement, the size of which was not revealed, calls for Porsche to supply body and motor parts for a Mercedes Benz model to be built at the end of the year, a Porsche spokesman said.

Production of the new car is to be limited to 10 a day, the spokesman said.

According to the Bonn daily Die Welt, the vehicle in question is a Mercedes 300 equipped with a V8 five-litre engine currently used on the Mercedes 500.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 19) - A senior U.S. official was in Helsinki Monday to meet with Soviet officials on the conflict in Afghanistan, the State Department said here.

Assistant Secretary of State for Near Eastern and South Asian Affairs John Kelly was to meet with Yuri Alekseyev, chief of Middle Eastern affairs in the Soviet Foreign Ministry, said a State Department official who requested anonymity.

The U.S. official did not say how long the talks would last.

The talks were part of a series of regular consultations between U.S. and Soviet experts on regional conflicts.

U.S. Secretary of State James Baker discussed the Afghan conflict with Soviet officials during his visit to Moscow in February.

Washington has insisted that Soviet-backed Afghan President Najibullah leave power before any negotiated settlement can be reached. Moscow has refused to agree to Najibullah's departure.

LONDON (MARCH 19) - The eventual liquidation of the International Cocoa Organisation's buffer stock of cocoa is inevitable, given the depressed market and the state of the organisation's finances, London analysts say.

Nevertheless, ahead of eight days of ICCO talks due to start here Wednesday, most analysts agree that ICCO member countries will begin to negotiate some sort of extension of the existing agreement.

The agreement, due to expire in September, has no intervention powers, but its continuation still guarantees the maintenance of the buffer stock, at least until its orderly liquidation can be effected.

The buffer stock reached its maximum 250,000 tons in February 1988, having failed to support prices at the prearranged defence level, automatically suspending further support buying operations.

"The only question is over what period it will be got rid of," Lawrence Eagles of GNI Commodity Brokers said.

Tony Chadwick of Prudential Bache agreed. "The existence of the stock is holding the market down to unrealistically low levels," he said. "The best thing for the market is its liquidation."

The consensus among analysts is that controlled liquidation over a five year period would remove the overhanging threat the stock represents without causing an extra supply shock to the market.

Mr. Eagles pointed out that the ICCO's finances are now such that it can no longer afford to maintain and rotate the stock indefinitely, while the almost complete lack of hope that any new agreement can be reached to reactivate buying support makes its existence irrelevant.

The continuation of talks also maintains contact between members, and the existence of the ICCO guarantees the market important statistics, analysts pointed out.

Although supply concerns due to unrest in Ivory Coast and recent good demand have lifted prices in recent weeks, the world cocoa market remains in a dire state.

London prices remain close to 15 year lows, record lows in real terms, with the market having adjusted to free market conditions of severe oversupply in the two years since the end of ICCO support operations.

The current season is expected to show a massive production surplus for the sixth consecutive year. February estimates from London traders Gill and Duffus put the surplus for the current October 1989-September 1990 season at some 205,000 tons, with total world stocks reaching 1.3 million tons by the end of the season, equivalent to a full seven months of consumption.

Despite the continuing surplus, Mr. Chadwick said that if the market continues at such unrealistically low price levels he could see "severe shortages developing in the next two to three years" as some of the less cost effective producers like Ivory Coast and Brazil (which between them currently produce about 45 percent of world supplies) shed massive amounts of production capacity.

Any shortage due to a switch to alternative crops in these countries could also prove prolonged, Mr. Chadwick pointed out, since new cocoa trees take several years to reach a productive age.

JERUSALEM (MARCH 19) - Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir Monday dismissed the possibility of peace talks with Damascus and said Israel has no intention of giving up the Golan Heights, which it captured from Syria 23 years ago.

"All rumours on possible peace negotiations with Syria are without foundation," Mr. Shamir said in a statement carried by Israeli radio, adding that "no Israeli has any intention of giving up the Golan Heights."

On Sunday, former U.S. president Jimmy Carter said Syrian President Hafez al-Assad had told him he was ready to have direct talks with Israel to resolve "all the differences" between the two countries, including the Golan Heights.

Mr. Carter, visiting Israel as part of a Middle Eastern tour that had also taken him to Egypt, Syria and Jordan, said Mr. Assad wanted the talks to be held within the framework of an international peace conference.

Israel seized the Golan Heights from Syria during the 1967 Arab-Israeli war and annexed the territory in 1981.

Mr. Shamir, leader of the right-wing Likud bloc, lost a vote of confidence in parliament last Thursday and currently heads a caretaker government.

The centrist Labor Party has so far gathered more support than Likud among MPs in the 120-member parliament and is expected to be asked this week by President Chaim Herzog to try to form a new government.

Labor leader Shimon Peres said last week that he had learned from a "reliable source" that Damascus wanted to discuss "an agreement based on Israel's withdrawal from the Golan Heights."

After a withdrawal, Syria would agree to designate the Golan a "demilitarized zone," said Mr. Peres, who unlike Mr. Shamir advocates exchanging occupied Arab land for peace.

Mr. Shamir's statement Monday was contained in a letter to Israeli settlers on the Golan Heights, who had expressed concern over Mr. Carter's remarks.

The head of the Golan regional council, Yehuda Walman, said the plateau was a "key strategic asset for Israel" and that a petition was being circulated among the 7,000 settlers there "opposing any negotiations over this Israeli territory."

The extreme-right nationalist party Tehiya has called for an urgent session of parliament on the issue.

JERUSALEM (MARCH 19) - Israeli troops shot dead a Palestinian in the occupied Gaza Strip Monday, while another died of bullet wounds sustained in a clash the previous day, Arab sources said.

Ossama Fahmi as-Shawish, 20, was shot in the chest during a clash with troops in Gaza City, the sources said.

Seventeen-year old Nail Zarkout, who received a bullet in the head during a confrontation with soldiers in the same city Sunday, died in hospital in Tel Aviv Monday, the sources said.

The two deaths brought to 652 the number of Palestinians killed by Israeli gunfire since the start of an uprising in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip in December 1987, according to an unofficial toll.

TOKYO (MARCH 19) - Japan's Communist Party has no intention of changing its name as communist parties in both Western and Eastern Europe have done, the party's president Kenji Miyamoto said Monday.

Speaking at a meeting of the party's central committee, Mr. Miyamoto said the changes in Eastern Europe had demonstrated the "failure" of the policies of the late Soviet leaders Stalin and Leonid Brezhnev but not of socialism itself.

However, he admitted that the party, which suffered major setbacks in the February elections, was still not over its problems.

Independent of Beijing and Moscow since the 1960's, the party, which counts some 500,000 members, was a few years ago assured of taking between eight and 10 percent of the vote in every election.

Its decline accelerated during the July senatorial elections, one month after the bloody crackdown in Beijing on pro-democracy demonstrations, and continued in February when it managed to gain only 16 seats in the 512-seat House of Representatives compared with 26 in the 1986 elections.

LUSAKA (MARCH 19) - Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze said here Monday that his country ''needs support to sort out the developments that have taken place there''.

Shevardnadze, here on his way to Namibia for that country's independence day, said at President Kenneth Kaunda's state house residence, ''The developments in our country are complex and sometimes contradictory. The international community should give us support.''

''We are facing problems with perestroika because we made the mistake of forgetting that the revolution has to be a permanent process,'' he added.

Receiving the Soviet minister, Kaunda said, ''We will discuss with you the role that I see the Soviet Union playing in southern Africa.''

Kaunda also said, ''The world has noted with delight that the relations between the USSR and United States have moved from confrontation to cooperation.''

Shevardnadze leaves for Windhoek Tuesday after talks with the African National Congress (Anc) leadership here.

The Soviet Union is the chief supplier of arms to the Anc, the largest guerrilla movement fighting to end white minority rule in South Africa.

WARSAW (MARCH 19) - The Polish government Monday called on East Germany's future leaders to abide by an agreement recognizing the border on the Oder and Neisse rivers as Poland's western border.

"We are counting on a constructive and active stance in all matters concerning vital Polish interests in the context of Germany's reunification and in particular the Oder-Neisse border and security issues," government spokeswoman Malgorzata Niezabitowska said.

The statement was the first official reaction to the landslide victory of the conservative Alliance for Germany, backed by West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl, in Sunday's East German election.

The spokeswoman added that the Polish government was "convinced that East Germany will continue to adhere to the Zgorzelec treaty as a basis for neighbourly Polish-German relations and essential prerequisite for European security".

In the 1950 pact, signed at Zgorzelec (German: Goerlitz) on the Neisse river a few months after the foundation of East Germany, the two countries' communist leaders said the Oder-Neisse line, drawn by the four World War II Allies -- the Soviet Union, the United States, Britain and France -- in 1945, was inviolable.

The decision resulted in Poland's gaining more than 100,000 square kilometers (39,000 square miles) of former German territory in the west, while losing extensive land in the east that was annexed by Stalin.

The statement came on the eve of Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki's six-day visit to the United States, focusing on U.S. support for Poland in its border dispute with Chancellor Kohl.

Mr. Kohl, while granting that West Germany had no territorial claims, has said that the border issue could only be settled by the parliament of a united Germany.

The leader of the main party in the Alliance for Germany, the Christian Democratic Union, said Monday that he expected both Germanies would soon issue a joint statement to reassure Poland. "Germany will remain as it is today, not a bit more," Lothar de Maiziere said.

Mr. Mazowiecki is also to visit Canada at the end of his U.S. trip.

MOSCOW (MARCH 19) - Reformers gained control of the municipal councils in Moscow and Leningrad, the two largest cities in the Soviet Union, in local elections which ended on Sunday, according to results released Monday.

The Radio Moscow publication Interfax said that members of the reformist alliance Democratic Russia had gained 56 percent of the seats on Moscow's municipal council.

Quoting a member of the electoral commission in the Soviet capital, it said that 57 percent of eligible voters took part in the second round of voting in Moscow on Sunday. The first round of voting took place on March 4.

A total of 498 seats were up for grabs on the Moscow city council on Sunday. Interfax said that Democratic Russia won 281 of the 463 seats decided.

In voting for a parliament for the Russian federation, Democratic Russia won 55 of the 65 seats reserved for the capital, Interfax said.

In Leningrad, a coalition called Democratic Elections-90 picked up nearly 60 percent of the seats on the local city council, Tass news agency said.

Democratic Elections-90, made up of 40 separate groups including the Popular Front of Leningrad, a Social-Democratic Association and a Writers' Union, ran on a platform of support for a multi-party system, decentralization of the economy and sovereignty for Russia.

Leningrad mayor Vladimir Khodyrev was reelected but apparently has little chance of remaining in the post following the reformist surge.

Tass said that voter turnout was more than 50 percent in Leningrad.

Advocates of stepped-up reforms obtained nearly 70 percent of the seats earmarked for Leningrad candidates in the Russian parliament, Tass said.

Many hard-line members of the Soviet Communist Party from Leningrad were swept out of the Soviet parliament in last March's legislative elections and Leningrad party chief Veniamin Gidaspov chose not to run this time.

WINDHOEK (MARCH 19) - In the Windhoek stadium 300 soldiers participate in the final training rounds for Wednesday's troop parade to mark Namibian independence from South African rule.

They soldiers are the first and only unit of the new Honorary Guard of the Nambian Army - which now unites one-time foes who fought each other for decades.

The unit comprises former South West Africa People's Organization (Swapo) rebels and members of the former South African commanded military forces.

Swapo chief Sam Nujoma, who will be sworn in as the country's first president, refered to European events when he was introduced to the unit, saying: ''There, too, people struggled against each other. There, too, they strive for unity today.'

However, the process of reconciliation in the multi-nation territory will take time. In the meantime, Nujoma and his crew have more acute headaches to worry about.

Some 5,000 guests, among them leading politicians from around the world, will pour to disrupt the usually sedate life in this small town where the tradition of its former German colonial rulers is still visible.

Train cars are being turned into hotels to house at least 1,000 journalists.

The aeroplanes carrying heads of state or government leaders to Windhoek will have to fly on to neighboring nations since Windhoek ''international'' airport just is not big enough for the crafts to remain here.

Two more days before independence, the Namibian flag - in the Swapo colors blue, red, green - could be obtained only in mini versions while the text of national anthem was still being drawn up. The anthem's music stems from the black South African song ''Nkosi sikelel i'Afrika'' (God bless Africa) - which is seen as the hymn of their struggle for freedom.

When Nambia celebrates its independence another remnant of the colonial past will fall. The old ''Kaiserstrasse'' (Emperor Street) will be renamed ''Independence Avenue''.

BONN (MARCH 19) - East Germany's German Social Union (GSU), a member of the conservative alliance which won Sunday's elections, plans to seek immediate unification with West Germany following the formation of a new government, GSU chief Hans-Wilhelm Ebeling said.

Mr. Ebeling, in an interview to appear in the West German newspaper Die Welt on Tuesday, also said that he plans to urge West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl to organize joint elections for a single German parliament as soon as possible.

"I think that if unity is to happen this year, we can cast ballots together at the next legislative elections" in December, he said.

The GSU, which gained 25 seats in Sunday's vote, is a sister party to the Bavarian-based Christian Social Union (CSU), the most right-wing component of the governing coalition in Bonn.

The Alliance for Germany, dominated by the Christian Democratic Union (CDU), secured 164 seats in the new 400-seat parliament, and also includes Democratic Awakening (four seats).

Mr. Kohl told reporters in Bonn on Monday that the legislative elections to be held in West Germany in December would not be transformed into a vote for a single parliament.

He said last week that such elections could not be held before 1991.

In another development late Monday, a spokesman for the Federation of Free Democrats, which won 21 seats Sunday, said they were ready to discuss forming a coalition government with the Alliance for Germany.

Lothar de Maiziere, head of the CDU, had earlier Monday invited both the Free Democrats and the Social Democratic Party (SDP), to join the Alliance for Germany in forming a coalition government.

But the SPD, which picked up 87 seats, immediately ruled out joining a government which includes the GSU, which it has denounced as right-wing and reactionary.

BERLIN (MARCH 19) - On the heels of his victory in East Germany Sunday, West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl said Monday that all-German elections will ''most certainly'' not take place this year, but that they are bound to follow in the early 1990s.

Speaking on a post-election special on Zdf television, Kohl said he still hoped the newly elected East German assembly would vote for an ''anschluss'' with West Germany under Article 23 of the West German constitution. That provision allows former portions of the prewar German Reich to join West Germany.

Kohl conceded that many European neighbors were fearful of German unification, but said some of the neighbors clearly had ''jealousy complexes'' over the economic potential of a unified Germany.

The chairman of East Germany's victorious Christian Democrats, Lothar de Maiziere, said in the same broadcast that the implementation of a currency union on July 1 was within a ''realistic time frame''.

However, a Bonn official declined to confirm that date as the planned introduction of the West German mark into the East German economy. Bonn Chancellory Minister Rudolf Seiters refused to confirm the date, but said a currency union must be instituted quickly in order to dissuade East Germans from emigrating to the West.

MARSEILLES, FRANCE (MARCH 19) - A convoy carrying aid to the people of

Mr. Steel told reporters Monday that the humanitarian action was a "symbolic action" to push for a solution to the western Africa conflict.

MANILA (MARCH 19) - The Philippines' agricultural sector has lost 1.75 billion pesos (76.75 million dollars) due to a prolonged drought, with rice production suffering the most, the agricultural department said Monday.

The government is planning to import 130,000 tonnes of rice, the staple food, to make up for the shortfall, a department spokesman said, adding that it was feared the drought which began in late 1989 would last until July.

Actual damage to crops as of mid-March was estimated at 314.4 million pesos (13.79 million dollars), excluding farmers' lost incomes.

About 133,640 tons of rice, worth 134.7 million pesos (5.91 million dollars) was lost to the drought and rice output shorfall could reach 260,000 tons by the middle of the year.

Manila is planning to import rice by tapping a food loan from the United States and possibly buying from Thailand, Malaysia or Vietnam, spokesmen said.

They expressed concern that the country may have to import even more rice if the rains do not resume soon. The department has already forecast rice shortages due to population growth and increased consumption.

In 1989, the country produced 7.6 million tons of rice while demand stood at 6.44 million tons. The government imported 220,000 tons of rice that year to ensure an adequate buffer stock to cushion prices.

WELLINGTON (MARCH 19) - The New Zealand government on Tuesday will unveil economic plans expected to include confirmation of a decision to sell Telecom and notice of import duty cuts that would reduce the price of foreign-made products.

Finance Minister David Caygill will detail his package to parliament in Wellington, intending to assure the country that the government's reform programme is on track.

The latest changes were also expected to include proposals aimed at reducing export freight costs through changes to shipping and port regulations.

The sale of Telecom, the country's telephone and telecommunications network, was understood to have been approved last week by the ruling Labour Party's parliamentary caucus and given the final go-ahead at a cabinet meeting Monday.

State-owned Enterprises Minister Richard Prebble has put its sale value at between three billion and six billion dollars (1.7-3.5 billion U.S.), depending on the form of its privatisation.

The plan was expected to allow up to 49.9 percent of Telecom to be sold to a foreign company, with the rest going on a public share float within and outside New Zealand.

There was still opposition within the Labour Party to the sale of Telecom - the most valuable asset in the government's privatisation programme - but the government has apparently decided it cannot further delay announcement of its decision.

Industrialists and trade unionists last week voiced fears about reduced import duties, marching on parliament to protest that cheaper foreign-made products would harm local businesses, and claiming that unemployment would rise from its current 170,000 to 200,000.

Tuesday's package was also expected to include proposals to free up immigration criteria, allowing easier access for skilled workers.

Prime Minister Geoffrey Palmer told a press conference Monday it would involve "substantial reshaping" of immigration policy.

The government has previously signalled that it wants to make access easier for entrepreneurs with the capital and ability to create new jobs in the country.

ABU DHABI (MARCH 19) - An Abu Dhabi-based drilling firm has won a concession to explore for oil in South Yemen, the company's general manager said here Monday.

Mohammad ibn Salem told Agence France-Presse that the firm, Bin Ham, and South Yemen's ministry of energy and minerals signed an accord of understanding on the concession last week.

The concession covers the North Sanau block, a 14,000-square-kilometre (5,600-sq.-mile) plot on the southern flank of the Arabian basin, bordering Saudi Arabia and Oman.

Mr. Salem said Bin Ham had two other partners in the joint venture, Complex Ltd, a subsidiary of the Bin Ham group, and Tullow Oil PLC Ireland.

Drilling is to follow a seismic survey of the area, which will take place after the Moslem fasting month of Ramadan, which starts late April, he said.

JERUSALEM (MARCH 19) - At least 140,000 Israelis are now unemployed, or 8.9 percent of the working population, Minister of Labour Ronnie Milo said Monday, warning that Soviet Jews would add to the growing number of jobless.

"The rate was 6.4 percent in 1988. It went up by 39 percent last year and the increase has not slowed down in the first months of 1990," Mr. Milo told Israel's transitional cabinet.

He said 93,100 Israelis officially sought unemployment compensation in February, compared to 64,100 in February 1989.

The growing number of Soviet Jewish immigrants this year was likely to add to the number of unemployed, he said. "The new immigrants will exert pressure on the job market."

Mr. Milo warned that the growth in consumer demand would not necessarily create new jobs.

Unemployment has hit almost 20 percent of Israelis aged between 18 and 24, notably demobilized soldiers, he said, naming the worst affected towns as Haifa, Nazareth and Beersheba.

Israel has a working population of more than 1.4 million people, from a total population of 4.5 million. The unemployment figures cover only Israel and not the occupied West Bank or Gaza Strip.

BEIJING (MARCH 19) - Oil production in China this year is expected to reach last year's record level of 137 million tons, the China Daily newspaper reported Monday.

China plans to invest more money and manpower in existing oilfields in the eastern part of the country over the next five years, and it will concentrate on seeking new reserves of petroleum and gas in other areas including offshore, the newspaper quoted Jin Zhongchao, vice president of China's National Petroleum and Gas Corporation, as saying.

The Daqing oil field in the northeast, the largest in China with an output of 40 percent of total production, is targeted to produce 365 million barrels of crude oil annually for the next 10 years.

The Daqing field, opened in 1960, has produced 365 million barrels of crude oil per year since 1976, with a record of 400 million barrels last year. China has slated 65 million yuan (13.8 million dollars) to be spent there annually on improvements in technology and production, China Daily said.

The Shengli field in central China and the Liaohe field in the northeast, the second and third largest producers, reported increased production last year and will attempt the same increases this year, the newspaper said without giving specific output levels.

More foreign investment will be put into offshore drilling as well as land exploration, China Daily said without giving specific figures.

In 1989, foreign investors sank 180 million dollars into exploration and development of offshore oil in the South China and Bohai seas. China has absorbed 2.65 million dollars in foreign investment for the development of offshore oil, the newspaper said.

Paris (MARCH 19) - European Community (E.C.) Commission President Jacques Delors said here Monday that Bonn will have to consult with the E.C. on every step taken in the period ahead towards unifiying East and West Germany.

In a reaction to the elections in East Germany, Delors called the outcome of the vote an expression of the hope for a quick reunification as promised by West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl.

''Kohl has navigated his boat, but now the period of difficulties is starting,'' Delors said.

The E.C. Commission executive said the integration of East Germany into the West German system is comparable to an entry into the European Community.

''West Germany must therefore consult every time with its (E.C.) partners when it plans new measures concerning East Germany,'' Delors said. The East German integration may not take place ''without E.C. approval'', he added.

Delors called on Kohl to make a ''political gesture...aimed at strengthening West Germany's complete commitment to Europe'' and to calm unease among the E.C. partners.

The E.C. for its part must accept German reunification ''without hesitation'' and ''say that it is prepared to take part in the adaptation of the East German economy'', Delors added.

NEW DELHI (MARCH 19) - Suspected Sikh militants spearheading a separatist campaign in Punjab gunned down 28 people Monday in one of the bloodiest series of attacks on civilians in the northern Indian state, reports said.

The Press Trust of India (PTI) news agency said armed militants ambushed three trucks in Ferozepur and shot randomly at the vehicles, killing at least 15 civilians.

The state run radio said it was the worst attack by Sikh terrorists, the usual term for the separatists, in Ferozepur.

The ambush took place early Monday on the Bhai-Zira highway of the frontier district which has a heavy Indian army presence. Further details of the killings were not immediately available, but PTI said the attackers left the site afterwards.

In a separate attack in Amritsar's Tarn Taran county, eight Sikh gunmen forced a Hindu farmer, his three sons and a son-in-law into a field where they shot them dead with Chinese-made combat rifles, PTI and radio said.

The slaying of almost the entire family of the farmer, Mohinder Singh, occurred near the Indo-Pakistan border where security forces in 1988 installed floodlights and barbed wire fencing to halt reported trans-border shipments of arms.

A prominent leftist leader, Hardev Singh, reported missing since Saturday after an unknown woman journalist escorted him away for an interview was found killed Monday in the politician's home-district of Amritsar, PTI said.

It was not known if the slain communist leader's female escort was actually a journalist or one of several women Sikh militants use to lure victims to their deaths.

Prem Singh, a Sikh manager of the Golden Temple, the hallowed shrine of Sikhdom, a companion and the religious leader's police bodyguard were also killed Monday when Sikh killers stopped their car and poured bullets into it from automatic rifles, PTI said.

The spate of murders in the last fortnight, including Monday's killings in Punjab, has pushed the toll of separatist-linked violence to at least 250 this year by unofficial count.

Sikh separatists have been campaigning violently since 1983 for a homeland in Punjab called Khalistan or land of the pure, and two federal military operations to flush out militants from the Golden Temple in the past six years have failed to halt the unrest.

Hong Kong (MARCH 19) - Mandarin Oriental International Limited, which owns some of Southeast Asia's most famous hotels, reported Monday a 12.7 per cent post-tax profit rise to 393 million Hongkong dollars (50 million U.S. dollars) for 1989.

Announcing the results for the year ending December 31, company chairman Simon Keswick said he expected the group to be ''under some pressure in 1990''. Robert Riley, Mandarin's managing director, said the Hong Kong hotel market would be ''tough'' for the next two years.

Seventy-three percent of the company's profits come from Hong Kong, which is poised for a glut of rooms as new hotels open up at the same time of a downturn in the number of visitors.

The Mandarin group is planning expansion in India and Malaysia and could be adding another hotel in Thailand where it owns the famous Oriental Hotel in Bangkok, the officials said.

They refused to comment on the 10 percent stake in Mandarin which was reportedly acquired last month by the Accor Hotels group of France. Jardine Strategic Holdings has a controlling 45 percent stake in Mandarin.

HONG KONG (MARCH 19) - Mandarin Oriental International Ltd., the hotel arm of the Jardine group, said Monday its net profit rose 12.7 percent from a year earlier to 392.8 million Hong Kong dollars (50.4 million U.S.) in 1989.

The board declared a final dividend of 28 cents (3.6 cents U.S.), bringing total dividend for the year to 39 cents (five cents U.S.), a Mandarin statement said.

Other than the Bangkok Oriental and the Hong Kong Excelsior, the company has six Mandarin Orientals under its wings - five in Asia and one in San Francisco.

Last year's profits were achieved despite the June 4 Beijing massacre, an attempted coup in the Philippines and the earthquake in San Francisco, Chairman Simon Keswick said, noting however that the earnings were largely made in the first half.

The hotel concern is committed to build a hotel in Kuala Lumpur and New Delhi, with Mr. Keswick expressing confidence of "a satisfactory overall outcome" this year.

The firm is 45 percent held by Jardine Strategic Holdings, the investment vechicle of the Jardine group.

FRANKFURT, West Germany (MARCH 19) - West German airline Lufthansa said Monday that it would be cutting fares on its flights to East Germany by 30 per cent for a five-week period.

The reductions, to apply between Sunday and April 30, will cut the price of the cheapest East German route to 224 Deutsche marks (133 dollars) from the current 318 Deutsche marks (189 dollars).

Lufthansa has been allowed for the first time to fly across the East-West German border in the past 10 days, following a decision by the United States, France and Britain, three of the four wartime allies.

Previously the West German airline had been forced to detour around Czechoslovakia when serving East German destinations, considerably lengthening the flight time.

LONDON (MARCH 19) - Seven out of 10 British households own at least one Japanese product and more than half of British consumers want to see more Japanese goods in stores, according to a study published here Monday.

The study, based on a survey of 1,448 British adults, indicated that "perceptions of Japanese products have changed radically from what they were 50 years ago" and said the British were anxious to see more Japanese investment here.

"We were all surprised at how pro-Japanese everybody was," said Antony Poppleton, a product manager with the business research firm Mintel which prepared the study.

The report acknowledged that increasing Japanese penetration of British markets posed a threat to British manufactureres who "must fear competition from Japan."

But it also noted a clear division of opinions between consumers over the age of 55 whose perceptions of Japan were colored by World War II and those under that age who appeared most willing to accomodate new Japanese investment in Britain.

By offering better value for money, Japanese products even enticed people who would prefer to buy British, said Peter Ayton, a senior market analyst for Mintel.

LONDON (MARCH 19) - The division of British chemicals and textiles group Courtalds into two independent companies took effect Monday with the listing of Courtaulds Textiles on the London stock exchange.

Shares in Courtaulds Textiles, issued to Courtaulds shareholders at the rate of one to every four Courtaulds shares, were introduced at 250 pence, giving the new company a capitalisation of 251 milion pounds (405 million dollars).

Courtaulds ordinary shares fell 67 pence to 318 in early trading, reflecting a fall in value with the splitting of the textiles interests.

The group had said in October that it planned to split its activities because of their very different nature - an international chemicals operation focussed on industry and requiring investment and a textile sector focussed on Britain and dependent on the retail and fashion market.

Courtaulds Textiles had an operating profit of 51.6 million pounds (83 million dollars) last year on turnover of 988 million pounds (1.6 billion dollars), 65 percent of it in Britain.

The company has 165 factories and employs some 30,000 peoples.

Courtaulds non-textile activities showed a taxable profit of 160 million pounds (266 million dollars) in the year due to end March 31, on turnover of 1.64 billion (2.7 billion dollars).

The group has some 24,500 employees after the division, retroactive to January 1, 1990.

TOKYO (MARCH 19) - Japan's crude steel production is expected to drop 1.8 percent from a year earlier to 26.75 million tons in the April-June period the government said Monday.

Declines are expected in exports to China and the Soviet Union during the three months, the International Trade and Industry Ministry said.

The expected output in the first quarter of the coming 1990 fiscal year represents a rise of 0.8 percent from the preceding three months, the ministry said.

LONDON (MARCH 19) - British Gas said Monday that it had signed a technology exchange protocol with Sojuz Promgas of the Soviet Union.

British Gas, privatised in 1986, said that the terms of the accord were fairly wide and that the first step towards implementing it would be an exchange of visits, but that one of the main areas of cooperation could be techniques of gas storage.

The Soviet Union holds some 40 percent of world gas reserves and exports gas to Europe by pipeline.

BONN (MARCH 19) - Formerly nationalised steel and construction group Salzgitter said Monday its consolidated net profit almost quadrupled in the year to September to a record 340 million Deutsche marks (200 million dollars).

Its profit in the previous year totaled 90 million Deutsche marks (52.9 million dollars).

Turnover totalled 10.8 billion Deutsche marks, up 10 percent.

Salzgitter, which is also involved in shipbuilding, railways and electronics, became part of the Preussag group on October 1.

The good results were largely due to a good performance in the steel sector, which enabled subsidiary Peine-Salzgitter to show a profit of 187 million Deutsche marks.

SAN SALVADOR (MARCH 19) EFE - A large part of the Salvadoran capital was blacked out early Monday after suspected leftist rebels blew up an electricity pylon in the northwest of the city.

The bomb, allegedly planted by members of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front (FMLN), exploded at 6:50 a.m. (1250 GMT) destroying the pylon, although no-one was reported injured.

There was no official confirmation of the blast.

On Friday, the FMLN announced it was to suspend attacks on civilian, telecommunications, transport and commercial targets in an apparent bid to pave the way for the reopening of peace talks with the rightist government.

However, the electricity network and military personnel and installations were not included on the rebels' list.

Peace talks between the FMLN and the government of President Alfredo Cristiani broke down last November after the bombing of a trade union headquarters by alleged right-wing extremists.

The United Nations is currently acting to try and restore the dialogue.

Over 70,000 people have been killed in El Salvador's decade-old civil war.

(MARCH 19) UPI - The very nature of the Macintosh operating system makes file-handling simple and quick. Shortcut, a new utility by Aladdin Systems Inc., makes it easier and quicker.

Shortcut is a mini-wonder. It not only allows you to move from disk to disk and folder to folder more or less as the crow flies, but it can instantly unpack and open compressed files.

The program is the work of Macintosh prodigy Raymond Lau, who at age 15 wrote the popular Stuffit program - the Macintosh standard for file compression and decompression.

Now, at 18, he has come up with Shortcut, which allows users to navigate the Macintosh file structure with blazing speed, and broadens the appeal of Stuffit as a space-saving tool.

Shortcut is a CDEV, or control panel device, that appends a user-customized pulldown menu to the Standard File Dialog box of every application.

It lets you create a list of files for each specific application - wordprocesser, spreadsheet, paint or whatever - that can be instantly accessed from that application's Standard File Dialog.

You also can make a list of folders than can be instantly accessed through Shortcut - through the pull-down menu or keyboard commands.

In addition, the Shortcut menu automatically provides instantaneous access to all available disks and allows users to create a new folder instantly on any disk and in any folder.

Those features combined create a barrier-free file environment.

With Shortcut, you can open or store a file on any disk, directory or subdirectory without physically having to move through the various levels of the hierarchical directory structure. You can even rename files and folders.

That makes Shortcut a real timesaver.

How much time can it save?

Working on a floppy disk file in Microsoft Word 4.0 without Shortcut, I used the ''Open'' dialog to move to a file in a subdirectory on my hard drive. It took 28 seconds. With Shortcut, I made the same trip in four seconds, using the keyboard commands.

And Shortcut offers even more timesaving features. Among them is a Find command that allows you to track down any folder or file - even compressed files created with Stuffit - by using part or all of its name, or the date it was created, or the date it was last modified.

It also lets you open the file directly from the Find dialog box. Even Stuffit files can be decompressed and opened.

Used in conjunction with Stuffit, Shortcut can be a real space-saver.

By offering instant access to Stuffit files, Shortcut makes the option of storing large files in compressed form more attractive. That can free up a lot of disk space.

Stuffit can compress a text file by 50 to 60 percent, and a graphics file by as much as 90 percent. And Shortcut can decompress and open them in seconds.

That makes lengthy correspondence files, contracts, forms, clip art, graphics files, charts - any large file not in constant use - a viable candidate for storage in compressed form.

Shortcut's pulldown menu is available from both the ''Open'' and ''Save As'' dialog boxes of every application. To access it, click the mouse button and hold it down with the cursor positioned over the disk name or Shortcut symbol in the dialog box. Then drag the cursor to the desired menu item.

Shortcut also offers keyboard equivalents for most functions.

You must determine which folders and files you want to access through Shortcut.

The folder list is shared - appearing each time you invoke the ''Go to Folder'' function from any application. The program offers two options for creating the list.

The folder list, containing a maximum of 20 items, can be created through the ''Go to Folder'' function in the Shortcut menu or through the Shortcut Control Panel, though the Control Panel method is easier and allows you to arrange the folders in any order you like.

Folders normally are displayed in the order in which they are added, but you can customize the display through the Control Panel to make the folders appear in any order you like.

The file list, invoked through the ''Open File'' function in the Shortcut menu, is application specific. Each application will have a different list. Each list may contain as many as 20 files.

The file list can be created only through the Shortcut pulldown menu accessed from the application in which the list will be used. Again, file names will appear in the order in which they are added to the list, but you can rearrange the order through the Control Panel.

Shortcut. which supports both MultiFinder and AppleShare, is exactly what its name implies. And it makes the Macintosh, already the world's most user-friendly computer, even friendlier.

Software: Shortcut, by Aladdin Systems, Inc., Deer Park Center, Suite 23A-171, Aptos, Calif., 95003. System requirements: Macintosh 512E or later, hard disk, System 6.0 or later. List price: $79.95. Copy protection: no. Reviewers evaluation (on a scale of 1 to 5): 5; unqualified recommendation.

WICHITA, Kan. (MARCH 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Air Midwest Inc. (NASDAQ: AMWI) announced that its board of directors has authorized the repurchase of up to $5,000,000 of the company's common capital stock through open market purchases from time to time over a two-year period.

Any shares acquired will be retired and cancelled by the company and any purchase will be effected at such times, prices and purchase volumes as will comply with the rules and regulations of the Securities and Exchange Commission. The company cannot say with certainty whether any purchases will be made as a result of this authorization.

Robert L. Priddy, president and CEO, stated, "The share repurchase program authorized by our board of directors reflects the company's opinion that our stock is undervalued. Use of a portion of the cash proceeds from our fleet restructuring program to purchase stock represents a prudent investment on behalf of our shareholders."

PLAINVILLE, MA (MARCH 19) PR NEWSWIRE - David R. Lennox, president of Media Logic, Inc. (NASDAQ: TSTM; BST: TST) announced today the election of Klaus J. Peter to executive vice president and Stuart Waterman to vice president-operations.

Peter, who joined Media Logic in 1984, is the second largest holder of the company's stock. As vice president he set up the engineering department; directed the development effort to design new magnetic media test products. He remains as treasurer and member of the board of directors.

Before joining Media Logic he had been engineering manager at Digital Equipment Corp. where he created and managed the test equipment group to support advanced developed head/media division. Before that he was chief engineer for Syma International, Brussels, Belgium, where he directed the engineering department and designed MOS LSI circuitry.

He also served with the Royal Canadian Air Force as commissioned officer, navigator and radio officer.

Peter holds a bachelor of electrical engineering degree from the University of Ottawa, and a B.SC. (physics), Loyola University in Montreal Canada.

Before joining Media Logic, Waterman was test engineer, staff engineer and manager of test engineering at Compugraphic where he was responsible for all front-end products. He set up and had direct responsibility for operations of a manufacturing plant in Ireland. Previous to that, he had been test engineer, designed floppy disk equipment and set up a manufacturing plant in Scotland for MFE.

He is a graduate of the University of Lowell, with a degree in electrical engineering and a degree in business management.

NEWARK, CA (MARCH 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Ross Stores Inc. (NASDAQ: ROST) will address the New York Society of Security Analysts at a luncheon today, where management will report that the company's 1989 net earnings increased to $29.8 million, from $26.3 million in the prior year. Earnings per share in 1989 totalled $1.24, compared to 97 cents per share earned in 1988.

Sales for the 53-week year ended Feb. 3, 1990, totalled $741 million, a 17 percent increase over the prior year's sales of $634 million. Comparable store sales were up 7 percent for the 52 weeks ended Jan. 27, 1990.

The effective tax rate for 1989 was 37 percent, compared to 29 percent in 1988. The lower rate in 1988 included net operating loss and investment tax credit carryforwards.

For the fourth quarter ended Feb. 3, 1990, sales totalled $233 million, up 14 percent over the $204 million in sales for the like period in 1988. Comparable store sales were flat in the fourth quarter. Earnings per share during the period were 64 cents, even with last year. Net earnings for the fourth quarter of 1989 were $15.1 million, compared to $16.3 million earned during the like period in 1988.

The company had approximately 24.1 million weighted average shares outstanding during 1989, compared to 27.1 million weighted average shares outstanding during 1988. During the first six months of 1989, an additional 3 million shares of the company's common stock were repurchased. This represented a total of 6.5 million shares, or 22 percent of the outstanding common stock repurchased since the program began in August of 1988.

Subsequent to the end of 1989, the company opened an additional five stores in March, all in existing markets. These are the first of approximately 30 stores that the off-price retailer anticipates opening during 1990.

Ross Stores Inc. operates a national chain of off-price retail stores offering first quality, in-season, branded apparel and apparel- related merchandise for the entire family. The company had 156 stores in operation at Feb. 3, 1990, compared to 140 stores at the end of 1988.

DETROIT (MARCH 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Toyota replaced Hyundai as the leader in new-vehicle sales per dealership in 1989, Automotive News reports in today's issue.

After three years as the industry pacesetter, Hyundai fell to fourth place.

Only three domestic makes were among the top 10 in combined car and truck sales per outlet. Ford was third, Chevrolet was sixth, and Dodge was 10th. The rest were Japanese or Korean.

Honda had the best average in car sales of the 42 nameplates in the analysis. Honda also ranked second in car-truck sales even though it doesn't sell trucks.

The trend last year was toward fewer average vehicle sales. Toyota dealers for example, averaged 817 vehicles per outlet, down from 850 in 1988. Honda fell to 677 from 691, and third-place Ford averaged 639 new-vehicle deliveries per franchise last year, down from 669 in 1988. Hyundai averaged 610, down from 1,053.

Nissan was one of 10 makes that bucked the trend. Its average car- truck sales per dealership rose to 596 in 1989 from 579 a year earlier.

The study is a measure of the relative value of a new-vehicle franchise. It shows the relationship between the number of new-vehicle sales for a particular make and the number dealers selling them.

TROY, MI (MARCH 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Kirco Development Interests, formerly of Long Lake Road in Bloomfield Hills, Mich., has moved its corporate headquarters to Columbia Center, Kirco's landmark development in Troy. Occupying the entire 22,000-square-foot 12th floor, 75 Kirco employees began work in their new offices today (Monday, March 19).

The move to new space was made necessary by the tremendous growth Kirco has experienced in the last five years. Functioning with a staff of six professionals in 1985, Kirco today employs over 100 at its development sites and offices in Indiana, Ohio, North Carolina, and Michigan.

Growth, together with diversification, has resulted in the creation of two new positions within the Kirco management structure. Alan Kiriluk, president of Kirco, announced the appointment of Douglas E. Winkworth to executive vice president - development, and John T. Frost to executive vice president - operations.

Winkworth, who has been with Kirco since 1984, has served as vice president - project development since 1987. A native of the Detroit area, Winkworth earned a bachelor of science in architecture and a master's in urban economics from the University of Detroit. In his new position, he will supervise the development, construction, and marketing of Kirco properties.

Frost served as a partner of Arthur Andersen Company and chief financial officer for Stroh River Place prior to joining Kirco in 1989. He holds a bachelor of business administration in accounting from Miami University and a juris doctor from the University of Michigan Law School. In his new position, Frost will supervise Kirco's finance, accounting, and property management departments.

Kirco Development Interests encompasses one of the largest real estate development and property management organizations in Michigan, and ranks in the top 75 among development firms nationally with more than 10 million square feet of real estate properties constructed or currently in development. Kirco has development interests in Michigan, Ohio, Indiana, Colorado, California, and North Carolina.

SAN FRANCISCO (MARCH 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Today, at the 1990 EFT Annual Convention, VeriFone Inc. (NASDAQ: VFIC), announced the TransACTION Express option, a powerful new operating system and development environment available for its mid-range to high-end Transaction Automation systems. Designed specially for Transaction Automation, the TransACTION Express Option features standard programming languages that will enable service providers to more quickly develop applications for payment and benefits processing, as well as for many other types of transactions. In addition, VeriFone systems equipped with the TransACTION Express Option will provide complete portability of applications.

The new operating system, available as an option on certain VeriFone systems, also offers remote diagnostic capabilities and increased performance. VeriFone will continue to fully support its worldwide installed base of Transaction Automation systems which currently run more than 400 distinct applications developed under the company's existing operating systems and programming languages, TCL (Terminal Control Language) and ZAPD. Strategic Direction

The TransACTION Express Option supports the industry-standard C and BASIC programming languages, and allows application development under either MS-DOS or UNIX, both widely used operating system environments. Therefore, programmers can easily write applications for VeriFone systems without having to learn proprietary languages.

In addition, the TransACTION Express Option features the Integrated Development Environment for Applications (IDEA). A versatile development environment that helps programmers create applications with greater ease and speed, IDEA offers sophisticated programming and debugging tools, downloading utilities, interactive help procedures and function libraries. The structure of IDEA allows for "top down" application development. One feature, the function libraries, provides common, reusable program modules and subroutines for programmers to integrate with their own programs, so they can avoid "reinventing the wheel" with each new application. Application Portability

Since all of the mid-range to high-end VeriFone system platforms support the TransACTION Express Option, application programs written for one such platform (e.g. TRANZ 330) can be easily transported to another (e.g. PinStripe). As a result, VeriFone customers can mix and match VeriFone systems to attain the most appropriate product balance, without having to reprogram the applications running on each system. Since applications share a common operating system, they are seamlessly portable across system platforms equipped with the TransACTION Express Option. All future

VeriFone systems will support the TransACTION Express Option as well as the company's existing proprietary operating systems and languages.
Remote Diagnostics

VeriFone Inc., based in Redwood City, Calif., is a leading supplier of Transaction Automation systems used to deliver payment processing and other financial retail services worldwide. REDWOOD CITY, CA (MARCH 19) PR NEWSWIRE - VeriFone Inc. (NASDAQ: VFIC) announced today that it has joined BellSouth Corp., JCPenny Business Services Inc., CITGO Petroleum Corp., Integrated Network Corp. and Northern Telecom in a technical field trial of FASTCONNECT, a proposed "virtual private network service." The new service addresses the special on-line transaction processing needs of the retail point-of-sale financial payment markets. It is intended to provide leased-line response time at a significantly lower cost than today's commonly used dial network service.

FASTCONNECT is the result of a focused effort by BellSouth to increase its responsiveness to the market by working closely with both its customers and suppliers to address customer needs. The establishment of FASTCONNECT involved close cooperation among a number of different companies. In this trial, BellSouth supplies telecommunications services to JCPenny Business Services, which provides processing for credit authorization and data collection services to CITGO Petroleum Corp. CITGO Petroleum is also VeriFone's customer for Transaction Automation systems. Northern Telecom and Integrated Network Corp. (INC) are network equipment suppliers to BellSouth, which uses that equipment to provide network service to JCPenney Business Services.

With FASTCONNECT, the average credit authorization time at the six CITGO retail locations was reduced to eight seconds from card swipe to printing of receipt. The improved performance offers a critical advantage to retail businesses sensitive to customer lines at the cash register. It means that customers spend less time in line during peak periods, allowing the merchant to process more customers more efficiently.

The economics and performance of FASTCONNECT are attributable in large part to a new data transmission technology provided by INC that not only allows "derived data channel service" -- voice and digital data sharing the same telephone line simultaneously -- but also multiplexes up to 20 lines into a single packet network interface. These "virtual private lines" transmit data at up to 2.4 kilobits per second.

The trial of the service began December 1989 at six CITGO retail locations in metropolitan Atlanta and will conclude this month. Upon successful conclusion of the trial. BellSouth will have to file tariffs and complete service development activities. With the progress achieved through the trial, it is hoped the tariffed FASTCONNECT service will be launched in late 1990. Leaders in Transaction Automation

NEW BRIGHTON, PA (MARCH 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Tuscarora Plastics Inc. (NASDAQ: TUSC) today reported record results in sales and net income for its second quarter ended Feb. 28, 1990.

Net sales were $20.4 million, an increase of 17 percent over net sales of $17.5 million for the same quarter a year earlier. Net income was $969,000 compared with $880,000 for the same period a year earlier, an increase of 10 percent. Earnings per share also were up 10 percent to $.32, compared with $.29 per share earned during the second quarter of fiscal year 1989.

For the six months ended Feb. 28, 1990, net sales were $42.3 million, an increase of 18 percent over net sales of $36.0 million for the same period a year earlier. Net income was $2.4 million, an increase of 16 percent over net income of $2.1 million for the first six months of fiscal year 1989. Earnings per share for the period also were up 16 percent to $.81, compared with $.70 per share for the same period a year earlier.

The company attributes the increase in net sales for the quarter primarily to two acquisitions made in February and November of 1989. Offsetting this increase in sales were production cutbacks and inventory adjustments by several of the company's large customers in the month of December. Sales, however, increased substantially in the last two months of the quarter, nearly matching first quarter levels.

The company also noted that as a result of the year-end customer cutbacks and lower operating margins of the two plants acquired from Preferred Plastics in November 1989, gross profit margins declined slightly for the quarter. Operating margins are expected to increase, however, as the two new plants experience improved efficiencies throughout the rest of the fiscal year.

Tuscarora Plastics is the country's largest manufacturer of custom molded foam plastic products made from expanded polystyrene, polypropylene, polyethylene and related co-polymer foams. The company's products are sold to a wide variety of customers for use with both consumer and industrial goods. It currently operates 23 manufacturing facilities east of the Mississippi River.

HOUSTON (MARCH 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Compaq Computer Corporation (NYSE: CPQ) today introduced the COMPAQ QuickFind Support Reference Library, a CD-ROM (compact disc read-only memory) with more than 15,000 pages of documentation covering all COMPAQ products.

COMPAQ QuickFind contains volumes of information on current and discontinued COMPAQ personal computers, including maintenance and service guides, technical reference guides, COMPAQ product bulletins, application notes, technical updates, memory upgrade charts and quick reference guides. More than 2,000 illustrations complement the text and make it easier for COMPAQ PC users to communicate with Authorized COMPAQ Computer Dealers on service and technical issues.

COMPAQ QuickFind is available today and can be purchased from Authorized COMPAQ Computer Dealers. The annual subscription fees for COMPAQ QuickFind include the initial CD-ROM along with the tutorial, User's Guide and quarterly updates of the database on CD-ROM from dealers.

The suggested resale price of a subscription for a single installation is $795 per year; the suggested resale price of a subscription for a network of up to seven users is $1,795 per year.

The COMPAQ QuickFind CD-ROM will run on any COMPAQ or industry-standard personal computer interfaced with a CD-ROM drive supported by a Microsoft device driver. It is compatible with the leading PC-based local area network (LAN) operating systems so users can share the information throughout a computer network.

A powerful search and retrieval capability allows fast access to all documents on any given subject by entering a word, phrase or category.

COMPAQ QuickFind was introduced to Authorized COMPAQ Computer Dealers in August to provide improved customer service.

The basic CD-ROM retrieval system software was developed by Quantum Access Inc. of Houston, and has been licensed by Compaq for the COMPAQ QuickFind Support Reference Library.

Compaq Computer Corporation is a world leader in the manufacture of personal computer systems and desktop, portable and laptop personal computers.

Founded in February 1982, Compaq is a FORTUNE 500 company with worldwide sales in 1989 of $2.9 billion. COMPAQ products are sold in 61 countries through a network of more than 3,000 Authorized COMPAQ Computer Dealers.

LAWRENCEVILLE, NJ (MARCH 19) PR NEWSWIRE - First Fidelity Bancorporation (NYSE: FFB) today announced that it had entered into an agreement in principle to settle all class action and related derivative lawsuits brought by stockholders in 1988 against it and certain current and former directors and officers.

The total settlement will be $30 million, with $15,250,000 paid initially by First Fidelity and the balance paid by the company's excess directors and officers liability insurance carrier. The settlement will have no adverse impact on First Fidelity's current or future operating results because the litigation reserve established in prior quarters exceeds First Fidelity's portion of the settlement.

First Fidelity also said that it had filed suit against its primary directors and officers liability insurance carrier, National Union Fire Insurance Company of Pittsburgh, to recover the full amount it was required to pay under the settlement.

"We are pleased with this agreement," said Tony Terracciano, First Fidelity chairman, president and chief executive officer. "The settlement will spare First Fidelity further litigation related-expense, inconvenience and distraction, and eliminate a significant contingent liability at a cost previously charged to earnings."

The lawsuits followed First Fidelity's 1988 announcement that it expected to record a substantial loss in that year's fourth quarter and alleged that the company and certain directors and officers had failed to disclose these losses in a timely way in violation of federal and state securities laws and of their fiduciary duties.

The defendants have denied all claims of wrongdoing and the proposed settlement involves no admission by the defendants of liability or improper conduct. The agreement in principle provides for the release of all claims which were or could have been asserted by the plaintiffs and the class.

Final settlement is subject to court approval, the execution of a definitive agreement and other customary conditions.

First Fidelity Bancorporation, with some 500 offices in New Jersey and eastern Pennsylvania and $30.7 billion in assets, is among the nation's 25 largest banking companies.

NEW YORK (MARCH 19) PR NEWSWIRE - KPMG Peat Marwick, noting strong client interest in expanding its businesses to new markets, has drawn a bead on Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union by opening offices in Budapest, Hungary, with plans for other Eastern Bloc offices; training Soviet construction managers, and publishing booklets about doing business in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe.

KPMG recently announced the opening of offices in Hungary. The Budapest office -- KPMG Reviconsult -- is the only independently owned accounting and consulting firm in Hungary. It will provide audit, tax and management consulting services to Hungarian companies and international businesses operating in the country. Other services in this rapidly developing market include advice to governments on fiscal policy, privatization and accounting and audit standards, and market entry studies and asset valuations for Western investors.

The firm is close to finalizing arrangements to open offices in other Eastern Bloc countries as well.

KPMG Peat Marwick's involvement in the Soviet Union began with an engagement with Mosinzhstroi, a government agency responsible for utilities and infrastructure construction in Moscow. The Peat Marwick consultant team worked with 45 Soviet construction managers and engineers in such areas as basic business techniques, budgeting processes, productivity and construction-specific subjects.

The project, known as the resource and construction management improvement program, was divided into two parts -- classroom study and on-site assignments -- in order to facilitate a thorough understanding of both management theory and practice. The eight weeks of classroom training focused on managing and achieving change. Then, in October and November, the Russian participants spent about one month in the United States observing first-hand U.S. construction management policies, practices, systems and procedures.

KPMG Peat Marwick provides accounting and auditing, tax, and management consulting services to leading business organizations, governmental and private institutions, and individuals through 132 offices in the United States. It is the U.S. member firm of KPMG, which has operations in 115 countries and 1989 revenues of $4.3 billion.

ENCINO, CA (MARCH 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Nu-Med Inc. (NASDAQ: NUMS) today reported a net loss of $3,500,000, equal to $.39 a share, for the third fiscal quarter ended Jan. 31, 1990. In the corresponding prior year period the company had a net loss of $7,218,000, or $.86 per share.

Results for the current third quarter do not reflect any tax benefits. The prior year quarter's results included a tax benefit of $5,944,000; a loss of $13,683,000 from the sale of a facility; and earnings from discontinued operations of $991,000. Net revenues for the current third quarter totaled $71,221,000, compared with $66,224,000 for the year earlier period.

For the nine months ended Jan. 31, 1990, Nu-Med reported a net loss of $5,346,000, equal to $.61 a share, which did not reflect any tax benefits. The net loss for the prior nine month period of $1,677,000, equal to $.23 a share, included a tax benefit of $6,439,000; the $13,683,000 loss on the facility sale; earnings from discontinued operations of $2,975,000; and an extraodinary gain of $4,241,000 from the purchase of Senior Subordinated Sinking Fund Debentures. Net revenues for the current nine months rose to $210,663,000 from $196,270,000 in the prior year period.

The company said the loss for the most recent third quarter was attributable to several factors. These included a greater proportion of government and managed care programs in the patient mix at some of the hospitals, which resulted in higher contractual allowances, thereby restraining the increase in net revenues, while operating costs increased as a result of higher overall utilization of the company's facilities. The company further indicated that the operations at one facility accounted for a substantial part of the loss for the nine month period.

As previously announced, subsequent to the end of the third quarter, Nu-Med completed the sale of Pembroke Pines General Hospital to Humana Inc. for $68 million in cash.

Nu-Med Inc is a nationwide health care services company, focusing its operations through its subsidiaries in the areas of acute and psychiatric care.

PROVIDENCE, RI (MARCH 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Nestor, Inc. (NASDAQ: NEST), today announced the signing of a $1.2 million contract with the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency (DARPA). Nestor, Inc., has been chosen to develop a chip which encompasses all the "learning" capabilities of the company's neural network technology, the most advanced in the world.

David Fox, president and chief executive officer of Nestor, stated, "For years, researchers in artificial intelligence have sought the means to combine the capacity, size, function and complexity of the human brain with the speed of a silicon chip. This new chip we will be developing for DARPA, called the Nestor N1000, will approach the scale required to achieve that result.

"The N1000 will be capable of processing 150 billion synapse interconnects per second among more than 1,000 neurons, and will function as a true learning device, becoming more and more intelligent and precise as it is trained. It will not 'saturate,' but will improve as data and experience expand, and it will function as a true parallel processor.

"Use of the N1000 will result in learning and classification speeds 10,000 times faster than present software based systems permit, and most importantly, that speed will be combined with a 'learning intelligence.' I think the N1000 will reinforce the leadership position Nestor holds in this very specialized field of neural network technology."

According to Nestor management, the N1000 will be manufactured in conjunction with Intel Corporation (NASDAQ: INTC) under a contract now being negotiated, using Intel's proprietary technology. The development time of the neural network learning chip will be about two years.

It is anticipated that the Nestor N1000, and the succeeding generations of chip development using the company's patented neural network technology, will have specific applications in the finance, manufacturing, robotics, and national defense industries. The applications made possible by the enormous increase in computer processing speeds include medical pattern recognition, speech recognition, and on-board automotive diagnosis, among others.

All Nestor products are based on adaptive information-processing systems that "learn" from experience. The company's products are taught to recognize complex configurations of data, and to interpret input patterns.

HOLLYWOOD, FL (MARCH 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Heico Corporation (AMEX: HEI) today reported unaudited net income from continuing operations for the three months ended January 31, 1990 of $450,000, or $.14 per share, on sales of $6,378,000.

In the first quarter of fiscal 1989, income from continuing operations was $1,063,000, or $.33 per share, on sales of $7,876,000. Sales and earnings of the first quarter of last year benefited from unusually high sales as compared to the balance of fiscal 1989.

The company noted that operating results of continuing operations in the first quarter of the first quarter of the current year are comparable to the fourth quarter of last year when income before non-recurring charges totaled $433,000, or $.14 per share, on sales of $6.1 million.

The company also reported that the previously announced sale of its laboratory products businesses, completed on March 6, 1990, resulted in a one-time charge in the current year's first quarter of $2,480,000, or $.78 per share, under the final terms of the sale. The discontinued laboratory products business had after tax operating losses aggregating $337,000 ($.10 per share) in the first quarter of fiscal 1989.

The company received cash consideration of approximately $11 million in the sale of the laboratory operations. In addition, the sale created approximately $7 million in capital losses which can be used to offset future potential taxable gains over the next five years.

DEARBORN, MI (MARCH 19) PR NEWSWIRE - America's largest cogeneration plant, the Midland Cogeneration Venture (MCV), of which CMS Energy Corporation (NYSE: CMS) is a 49-percent owner, began commercial operation this weekend generating about 900 megawatts of electricity.

"Three years ago conversion of an idled nuclear plant to natural gas was a dream -- something that had never been done. To now have this power plant in operation ahead of schedule and under budget is an historic event," said William T. McCormick Jr., CMS Energy's chairman and chief executive officer.

"The MCV will allow Consumers Power Company to continue to reliably serve the 3.3 million Michigan people who depend upon our electricity. Without this facility, Michigan would have been facing potential brownouts and electric supply shortages this summer, just as we did the previous two summers," McCormick said.

The MCV is a partnership formed to convert the idled Midland nuclear plant into a combined-cycle, natural gas-fueled cogeneration plant. It provides electricity for Consumers Power and both steam and electricity to The Dow Chemical Company. When the final four of the 12 gas turbine units are put into operation later this spring, the plant will have the capacity to provide 1,370 megawatts electric to Consumers Power and other customers plus up to 1.35 million pounds of steam per hour for industrial use.

McCormick noted CMS Energy's Midland experience provides a road map for other conversions of idled nuclear plants elsewhere in the U.S. "There are currently about $20 billion of abandoned or mothballed nuclear plant assets around the country that can be utilized in conversions similar to what we have accomplished at Midland," McCormick concluded.

With the completion of the MCV, CMS Energy's independent power producing subsidiary, CMS Generation Company, has gross interests in about 1,500 megawatts and net interests in about 750 megawatts of electric capacity throughout the U.S., making it one of the largest independent power producers in the country.

CMS Energy Corporation is a $3 billion (sales) diversified energy company with businesses engaged in the distribution of electricity and natural gas, interstate storage and transmission of natural gas, oil and gas exploration and production, independent power generation and utility services. CMS Energy Corporation's principal subsidiary is Consumers Power Company, Michigan's largest utility and the nation's fourth- largest combination utility.

TOKYO (MARCH 19) PRNEWSWIRE - Texas Instruments Incorporated (NYSE: TXN) and Kobe Steel, Ltd., jointly announced today an agreement to establish a joint-venture company to manufacture advanced semiconductors in Japan. The venture will manufacture primarily complementary metal oxide semiconductor (CMOS) logic devices, including very large scale integrated (VLSI) circuits and application-specific integrated circuits (ASICs).

Semiconductor products manufactured by the joint venture will be sold exclusively to TI for distribution and sale by TI to customers in Japan, throughout the Asia-Pacific region, and in other world markets.

Design work on the wafer-fabrication facility for the joint venture will begin promptly, with construction in Hyogo Prefecture in the Kansai region of Japan to start in early 1991 and be completed by the end of 1991. Full-scale production is expected by mid-year 1992 based on advanced submicron CMOS technology.

Total investment in the initial wafer fab is estimated at about US$350 million, including land, building and equipment.

Texas Instruments Incorporated, headquartered in Dallas, is a high-technology company with sales and manufacturing operations in more than 30 countries. TI develops, manufactures and markets semiconductors, defense electronics systems, software productivity tools, computer systems, industrial automation and control systems, electrical controls, metallurgical materials, and consumer electronics products.

Kobe Steel, Ltd., is a diversified Japanese corporation with business in three sectors -- materials, engineering and machinery, and new businesses. The materials sector consists of iron and steel, welding consumables, aluminum, copper, and titanium. The engineering and machinery sector contains industrial and construction machinery, engineering and cutting tools. The new business sector consists of electronics, advanced materials and social infrastructure enhancement. In its mid- to long-term management plan, Kobe Steel is strengthening its existing businesses as well as diversifying into new fields and globalizing its operations. Kobe Steel has head offices in Tokyo and Kobe. In fiscal year 1988, sales reached 1.17 trillion yen ($8.9 billion), with anticipated sales of 1.22 trillion yen for fiscal year 1989. The company has 21,436 employees.

BERKELEY, CA (MARCH 19) PR NEWSWIRE - XOMA Corp. (NASDAQ: XOMA) today announced its 1989 financial results. In November 1989 Xoma completed its merger with International Genetic Engineering Inc. (Ingene). The merger has been accounted for as a pooling of interests and, accordingly, these results include amounts for Ingene for all periods presented.

For the year ended Dec. 31, 1989, XOMA recorded revenues of $10.4 million. Revenues for the 1988 year were $9.8 million. During both periods, revenues were derived principally from contract research and development agreements. Research and development expenses were $25.6 million for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989 and $20.8 million during 1988. General and administrative expenses during 1989 and 1988 were $7.5 milllion and $4.7 million, respectively. Most of the increase in general and administrative expenses are attributable to the costs related to the merger.

XOMA recorded a net loss of $18.9 million, or $1.43 per share, for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989. XOMA's net loss for the 1988 year was $12.7 million, or 98 cents per share. At Dec. 31, 1989, XOMA had current assets of $98.7 million, principally cash, cash equivalents, and short-term investments, and stockholders' equity of $27.1 million.

"1989 was an important year in XOMA's development," said XOMA chairman and chief executive officer Steven C. Mendell. He noted that XOMA advanced further toward product commercialization with the filing in March 1989 for U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) approval to market Xomen(TM)-E5, the first monoclonal antibody product for the treatment of gram-negative sepsis and septic shock. XOMA also has applied for FDA approval to market XomaZyme(R)-CD5 Plus for the treatment of graft-versus-host disease, an immune-related disorder.

Mendell stated that XOMA's merger with Ingene, completed in November, "has strengthened and expanded XOMA's research base through the addition of first-rate recombinant DNA and molecular biology expertise." Mendell said that 1989 was marked by "significant expansion of XOMA's immune-related disorders program, particularly in the clinical testing of XomaZyme(R)-CD5 Plus for rheumatoid arthritis and other autoimmune diseases." Finally XOMA enhanced its cash position in 1989 with the completion of a $57.5 million placement of 9 percent convertible subordinated debentures due 2014.

XOMA Corp. is a leading company in the development of therapeutic products using monoclonal antibody and recombinant DNA technologies.

BERKELEY, CA (MARCH 19) PR NEWSWIRE - XOMA Corp. (NASDAQ/NMS: XOMA) and Ortho Biotech, a division of Johnson & Johnson subsidiary Ortho Pharmaceutical Corp., today announced the completion of a development and marketing agreement. The agreement involves the clinical development and marketing of two XOMA immunotoxin products for selected applications in XOMA's immune-related disorders program.

The XOMA products covered under the agreement are XomaZyme(R)-CD5 Plus and XomaZyme(R)-CD7 Plus. The initial selected markets are graft-versus-host disease (GvHD) and solid organ transplantation, with Ortho Biotech having the opportunity to acquire rights to additional applications. XOMA retains worldwide manufacturing rights for both products. Ortho Biotech has worldwide marketing rights except for Japan, Korea, and the People's Republic of China.

Immunotoxins are pharmaceutical products designed to eliminate specific disease-related cells without causing harm to other cells. Immunotoxins are composed of monoclonal antibodies chemically coupled to substances capable of killing cells. In the treatment of immune-related disorders, XomaZyme-CD5 Plus and XomaZyme-CD7 Plus are specifically designed to bind and eliminate the lymphocytes involved in the disease process.

In December 1988, XOMA applied for U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) approval to market XomaZyme(R)-CD5 Plus in the treatment of GvHD, a frequent complication of bone marrow transplantation.

In addition to its human clinical trials in rheumatoid arthritis, XOMA is continuing its clinical investigation of XomaZyme-CD5 Plus for the treatment of Type I diabetes, inflammatory bowel disease, lymphocyte malignancies, and for the prevention of GvHD. These indications are available to Ortho Biotech. XOMA recently began Phase I clinical testing of XomaZyme-CD7 Plus, the second immunotoxin in the agreement.

XOMA Corp. is a leading company in the development of therapeutic products using monoclonal antibody and recombinant DNA technologies. In addition to XomaZyme-CD5 Plus, XOMA has applied for FDA approval to market Xomen(R)-E5 for the treatment of gram-negative sepsis.

Ortho Biotech is a leader in the worldwide discovery, sourcing, registration, and marketing of human therapeutics derived from biotechnology. In addition to ORTHOCLONE OKT3 for acute kidney rejection, Ortho Biotech has applied for FDA approval to market the product for heart and liver transplant rejection.

OCALA, FL (MARCH 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Microdyne Corporation (NASDAQ: MCDY) today announced receipt of a $1.2 million order from GE Aerospace military and data systems operations for telemetry receivers for use with tracking data relay satellite systems (TDRSS).

Deliveries will commence in May and final delivery is scheduled for September.

TDRSS is a three-satellite geosynchronous configuration providing direct communication from an earth orbit vehicle (such as the space shuttle), via these satellites, to a primary tracking station located at White Sands, N.M.

Under the terms of the contract Microdyne will supply 46 of its standard telemetry receivers, including 30 model 1200MC receivers and 16 Model 1100AR wide band receivers. The equipment will be installed at the White Sands tracking station.

Kenneth G. Harple, president and CEO of Microdyne, commented, "This contract is indicative of the continued success of our strategic plan to broaden the Company's product base, penetrate new markets, and strengthen the management team."

Harple continued, "Our current plan for continued growth includes major new product introductions, strategic acquisitions, and the expansion of our new professional sales staff to allow more effective pursuit of the many business opportunities before us."

Microdyne Corporation is the world's leading supplier of advanced telemetry receivers for applications such as TDRSS. The company also produces satellite communications equipment and systems for the broadcast and cable TV industries, dielectric radomes, fiberglass dish antennas, and provides systems design and integration of telemetry and satellite communications systems.

SEATTLE (MARCH 19) PR NEWSWIRE - Advanced Technology Laboratories, Inc. (ATL) and SpaceLabs, Inc. introduced several new products at the American College of Cardiology meeting in New Orleans, Westmark International Inc. (NASDAQ: WMRK) announced today.

ATL introduced a new ultrasound system for cardiology, the Ultramark (R) 7 system offering cost-effective, high quality color flow imaging and Doppler for complete cardiovascular assessment. The system's slim, compact design aids maneuverability within the hospital or cardiologist's office. The integrated Digital Echocardiography option with quad-screen formatting provides digital image acquisition and disk storage for archiving of exams and easy retrieval of images and qualitative analysis of wall motion, simplifying exercise echocardiography exams and comparative review of serial studies.

ATL also announced a new phased array Bi-plane Transesophageal Transducer with unique full aperture. The transducer provides two perpendicular imaging planes for views of the heart previously unattainable by a single plane probe. The new transducer gives clinicians access to more information about the heart without excessive manipulation of the probe. For example, imaging in two planes allows the full visualization and assessment of the atrial septum and facilitates the location and evaluation of thrombi or clots. The new probe will be available for all Ultramark 6, 7 and 9 systems.

SpaceLabs expanded the capabilities of its Patient Care Management System (PCMS(TM)) network with the addition of three new products: MultiView (TM) Arrhythmia monitoring, the PCMS Digital Telemetry System for "cordless" monitoring of heart waveforms in hospital intermediate care units, and the PC Express (TM) monitor, the industry's first truly modular portable monitor. All product introductions are fully compatible with the PCMS system, continue the same user-friendly touchscreen interface and are integrated on the Ethernet(TM) communications network.

MultiView Arrhythmia is a multi-lead arrhythmia analysis system which detects and counts the rate of occurrence of abnormal beats using two leads of ECG information instead of just one, therefore providing more accuracy and more information than single-lead arrhythmia systems.
